MEMO, by Sidney---Flirt by Buccaneer.

Owned by J. P. KERR, San Francisco.

Memo.

It may be thought somewhat premature to give the portrait of Memo before he has proved his right to public attention, but the best that can be said is that he is a fine looking colt, a big fellow withal, and we have taken a strong fancy that when he makes his debut as a three-year-old, he will justify the prominence awarded. He is well bred, too, and from the standpoint of many close observers has a trotting genealogy which is hard to better.

Memo, black colt, three white feet, foaled 1885, bred by G. Valensin, Arno Farm, Sacramento Co., California.

By Sidney, dam Flirt by Buccaneer, 2d dam Mahaska Belle by Flaxtail, 3rd dam by John the Baptist.

Writing this from memory we will not vouch for absolute correctness, but the records not being handy and no time to be given for research, that proverbially uncertain faculty will have to stand sponsor on this occasion. Then Sidney was by Santa Clans from Sweetness by Volunteer, and again trusting to recollection, Sydney had three crosses of Hambletonian, and one of Mambrino Chief. Buccaneer was a son of Iowa Chief, from Tinsley Maid by Flaxtail so that there is a double infusion of the "lateral motion," and Iowa Chief was by Green's Bashaw his dam by a son of Vermont Black Hawk therefore both Black Hawks figure in the pedigree. The granddam of Green's Bashaw was the dam of Hambletonian with a Tom Thumb cross intervening and this shows four times to the Bellfounder mare, which gives a preponderance of the Norfolk trotter. Inbred and yet with so many outcrosses, we will let others study over the case of Memo, especially when time and space are both of the briefest.

Were it not a violation of confidence we could dilate on what the colt has shown, and by adding a trifle of coloring give abundant, ample and cogent reasons for marking him very high in the three-year-old ranks. But colts are liable to come and go, and though the day is not very far off when he will be called upon to prove his mettle, in the Petaluma Stake, there may be severe trials and tribulations to encounter before then. Not much necessity for detailed description as the picture gives a very correct likeness, and it is certainly a credit to the artist, H. Boyd. From the present indications the Sidneys are bound to make a name, as there are several others not far behind the handsome black. Memo is in the hands of John Rohn, who broke him, and as this trainer is one of the most successful educators of trotting colts of our acquaintance, we shall look for him to come to the post in good shape.

General Topics.

Treining topics will have to give way for a time. Everyone who has a fancy for horses is now all agog at the near approach of the fairs, and the talk is more of what the horses are doing. I received bundles of letters all through the winter, with only a slight diminution of bulk until a few weeks ago, requesting light on some which were considered rather occult points in breeding and training. Now correspondents and visitors have less to write or talk in relation to these branches of hippic enquiry, although not entirely given up, and discuss the various programmes and the chances of the steeds which will participate. There is plenty of room for conjecture. With public tracks all the way from San Diego to Washington Territory, and private training grounds all over this State, the field is too wide for comparisons; at least comparisons based upon anything tangible. There are the usual rumors of phenomena. A colt on one track reported to have the ability of lowering the record and not half try, when directly half dozen more come into the discussion, and the man who has the first chance stands a poor show with those who follow.

Colts are the principal staple of conversation. Even four-year-olds do not play a very prominent part, and the aged division are passed as though they were of little account in the controversy. That colt trotting will eventually become the main sport of the tracks is just as certain as that the two and three-year-old contests are the great events on the legitimate. There is the merit of novelty, a lot of fresh aspirants for fame every year, lending a fascination which only the stars of the aged division can equal. The old-time clamor that they could not go fast enough to interest the public has waxed weaker and weaker, until there is only an echo, a faint reverberation of the hulahaloo of a few years ago. The danger was that some of the large breeding farms would overshadow all the others, and that a man who had only a few broodmares, and deterred from using the crack sires of the day, would have no chance at all. That was the plea when colt-stakes were mentioned, but people are overcoming that fear, and there are plenty of nominations in all of the colt-stakes.

The stake for three-year-old stallions which closed on the 21 of June with twelve nominations is an illustration. There are nine subscribers, Palo Alto being the only one which has more than one in it. And, by the way, this is the first stake restricted to entire males, if my recollection can be depended upon, and in all probability it will prove one of the best ever trotted by colts of that age, without making allowance for sex. There is fully as much talk regarding the colts which are named as there is about the old stallions which are to meet on the day after the colts try conclusions. The older have yet to go in training, at least those which have been in the stud, whereas the colts are busily engaged, and reports are rife that a majority of them are veritable flyers. There are good reasons for them being all that is claimed. Not one of the twelve which is not "rarely bred;" those we have seen are of high form. The picture of one appears on the first page of this paper, and that shows him to be made up right. His breeding is of the sort to ensure speed, and he has trotted trials wonderfully fast.

At least that is the report of the watchers; the men who sit on the porch of the hotel and "time" everything which is driven. It does not appear to make any difference whether an animal "goes close to twenty" or is a whole handful of seconds slower, there is the same desire to measure the rate. By the way, the timer, (that is the machine with which the time is taken) is an indispensable aid to the regular habituee of the tracks. Taboo the watches and the witheery of watching would be ended. It must be regarded as a sort of a race, or rather a series of matches between the slender second hand and the animals, though as a rule the success of the horses is the most gratifying to the observer. Should there be a fast mile, or even a fast quarter, there is a look of gratification; if far below what was expected, disgust is forcibly depicted in the countenance. Deprive them of the opportunity of gratifying the propensity and small would be the comparative interest. Without absolute knowledge of the speed shown the tracks would lose all fascination for this class.

But it will not do to take for granted all the reports that are flying over the country. A few days ago I heard of a wonderful performance. My informant giving definite particulars and naming a man who did the timing. A thoroughly competent timer and the owner of a watch which is as good as the best. A day or two after he was encountered, and I was not a great deal surprised to learn that he had not seen the animal move on the day mentioned. There is no question, however, that the colts engaged in the Junior Stallion Stakes are a superior lot. Having seen two of them at work I can vouch for that many being worthy of a place among sure-enough trotters, and the presumption is that those which are at a distance are also worthy. It will not be long before there will be public knowledge, as Petaluma will open the ball, the three-year-old stakes which is to be trotted there having several of those engaged in the Junior, viz: Redwood, Amigo, Memo, Direct and Monteith.

Regarding the nominations in the National, little can be known, and in all probability little really reliable intelligence until after the second payment has to be made. This will be the first of September, and it may be that a portion of the entries will trot at the fairs which are held prior to that time. Those which have not been in the stud, and others which made "short seasons" can be got in order by the time the circuit opens, and it is more than likely that all which are named in the "Grand Stallion Stakes" at the State Fair will be in readiness to participate. Again trusting to memory, Director and Antevolo are the only ones named in the National which have not a prior engagement. From what is heard Woodnut has made the largest season, outside of the two others mentioned, and probably only second to Director in the number of mares he has had. Palo Alto may not have been in the stud, Jim Mulvanna has been in training for some time, and it must have been nearly a month ago since Dawn was put in Lee Shauer's hands. Mr. Rose closes his seasons early so that Stamboul will be on hand. Guy Wilkes in all probability will be given some time to get into condition so that the race at the State Fair will be well filled.

It is nearly certain that the two which were not named in the Grand could not be got in order without taking risks so early as the State Fair is held. Both carry a good deal of flesh, and with so important an engagement as the National before them it would be anything but wise to hasten the preparation. From all that can be learned, the nominations in the Grand are doing well. There has been a good deal of talk of ailments, but when authoritative information is obtained the adverse accounts are not sustained. Should all come to the post in either the Grand or National, there will be grand trotting, trotting which will attract National attention. Even with a portion out there will be a contest worthy of going a long way to see. Any two of the nominations are "liable" to be troublesome to each other, and with "four or more" starters, a race which will be long remembered.

The generally expressed wish that every one of the nominations may come to the post in the best possible condition, so far as I can judge, shared by the owners. This, of course, implies that every horse will be at his best, and that being the case there are good reasons for the belief that all will gain honor. It may be that there will be such a showing that those which the rules place in an inferior position are worthy of greater credit than some which outrank them. This has a paradoxical tinge which may need explanation. Should the eight nominations in the National all start there will have to be two tiers, or rather first and second ranks. This will be settled by drawing lots, and the front rank will have an advantage of at least three lengths. If No. 1 has the gift of getting away fast, No. 5 will be better off than Nos. 3 and 4, while Nos. 6, 7 and 8 will be placed at a great disadvantage. If number one be the equal of all of the others in speed, endurance and good behavior, his good fortune, in "drawing the pole," should turn the scale in his favor. Then again, he might be the best horse in the race and an untoward circumstance annul all of the benefits of position.

No matter how reliable a trotter may be, something may happen to disturb his equilibrium. A mis-step may throw him out of balance, a wrong move on the part of his driver. Too much speed or not enough in place, a hundred or more things to heighten the "glorious uncertainty" exasperatingly, delightfully as the spectators interests color the mishaps. The mutations in racing are striking enough, trotting contests are fully as liable to unexpected happenings. Race horses are comparatively close together when measured by the scale which is most depended upon in trotting, viz. the time occupied in making a mile. Condition has a great deal to do with both, when the animals are capable of showing a high rate of speed. There is much that is dependent upon art, the skill of trainer and jockey in the race horse, trainer and driver in the trotter. But after all that art can accomplish, Dame Fortune plays an important part in the drama, and therefore there is the often repeated prayer that all the horses in the big race may have the best of luck.

Some time ago an article appeared in this paper reviewing the chances which each of the nominations in the National Stakes had of getting the first place. The position taken, that it was a close thing all around appears to be the opinion of critics who are entirely disinterested, or who are so nearly without bias as to discuss the matter without violent prejudice. With the exception of Jim Mulvanna, the entries have taken part in a good many races, and therefore an important point in the calculation is presented. Not so far apart on the score of records either, especially when it is taken into consideration that the slowest records were obtained when the animals had not reached an age which is held to be necessary to bring out their full powers. Public performances have demonstrated that all of them possess the element of reliability and also a reasonable share of endurance. "Improvement" is the puzzle. Whether there has been advance or retrogression can only be guessed at now, and before anything like real knowledge is obtainable, weeks, perhaps months, must elapse.

There is a feature which will trouble those who are so anxious to discover the speed of all of them, and though it may be demonstrated before the time fixed for trotting the National, it is likely to be so near that period that a great deal of uncertainty must prevail up to then. Eight in it, eight different tracks the exercising ground. Stamboul at Rosemeade, Mr. Rose's private track; Palo Alto on the place from which he derives his title, also a private track; Guy Wilkes is at San Mateo with the same advantage of being hidden from public scrutiny, and with other advantages such as private grounds alone can offer. Dawn is at work at the Bay District, Director is domiciled at Pleasanton, Antevolo at Oakland, Woodnut at Vallejo and Jim Mulvanna at Sacramento. Under these conditions it is not at all probable that any two of them will come together in a brush even, unless engaged at some of the earlier fairs, until they meet in the Grand, and therefore, that race will awaken an intensified interest from the Atlantic to the big islands of the Antipodes.

It is not absolutely certain, however, to settle the question of supremacy between those engaged in it, without speculating on those which are left out. That is to be trotted Sept. 8th, forty-two days before the date fixed for the decision of the National. There may be "wonderful" changes in those six weeks. I have known horses to make astonishing progress in less time than that, especially when having the benefit of public races to develop their capacity. Occasionally "actual races" result in injury to horses taking part in them, though a far larger proportion prove advantageous, and when horses are in condition to undergo the work without detriment, it is long odds that speed and endurance will be increased thereby. An extremely hard race may necessitate subsequent indulgence, but if there be no injury such as strains, wounds or bruises, even hard races may be of service. There is a minimum of risk in transferring horses from one place to another as the transit is now managed. Railways are well ballasted, the best care at the service of horses, and all the etceteras attended to in a way that merits approbation.

The Hartford Meeting.

The opening of the trotting meeting at Charter Oak Park, June 19th, had everything to favor it that could be desired. The weather was perfect, bright, warm enough for high speed and cool enough for comfort, and there was not a breath of air at any time. The famous track was in superb condition for fast time, of which, by the way, there was no lack, and it looked its prettiest within its fringe of June foliage. An opening day at a June meeting has rarely drawn such a crowd as filled the grand stand and thronged the quarter-stretch. The Hartford meetings are always well attended, but this one, judging by the initial day, will be an unusual success. It was a day for the favorites, as the details show. In the pacing race Elmonarch had the call all through; he seemed able to go by the others whenever he was called on, and he won the race in a handy manner.

The trot for the 2:29 class was postponed after Matchless had taken one heat, with two to the credit of the favorite, Yorktown Belle.

On the 20th there was a very large attendance, and, curious to relate, the favorites won in each case, but the results became so doubtful that there was a great deal of hedging on the part of those that had their money on right at the start.

On the 22d the Charter Oak Park races were brought to a close. The heat was terrific, and there was scarcely a breath of air to temper it, but the prospect of a great race in the 2:19 class filled the grand stand with an excited crowd, and the contents of the day were such as to furnish a brilliant ending to a very successful meeting. The Sporting World thus describes the main event of the day: Only four, and those the best of the ten flyers, entered for the 2:19 event appeared, and of these Favonia and Rosalind Wilkes alternated, and the course of the race narrowed it down to a struggle between them. The time made was very fast, and in the third heat Van Ness sent Rosalind Wilkes around in 2:17, by far the fastest mile trotted this year. The summary shows a great race. The details are as follows:

Rosalind Wilkes was the favorite at more than even over the field. Favonia got the best of the start and took the lead. Rosalind Wilkes was last but passed Spofford and Skylight Pilot with such ease that it was evident she could have won if she wished to, but she did not try and Favonia won in 2:20.

Before the second heat Favonia sold for even money against the field. From the word Rosalind Wilkes outfooted her and led by nearly a length at the quarter pole, but could not take the pole. The clip was fast, 34 seconds to the quarter and 1:08 to the half. On the upper turn Favonia forged ahead and Rosalind went to a bad break, losing so much ground that Van Ness did not drive her afterward, and Favonia won the heat in 2:19½. The betting was now $25 to $5 in favor of Favonia, but the original favorite gave her a taste of her quality in the third heat.

Rosalind went away like a shot from the word, and took the pole before reaching the turn. At the quarter in 34½, she led by two lengths, and about the same distance at the half in 1:08½, and finished the mile in grand style a couple of lengths in advance of Favonia, who was driven for all there was in her in 2:17. Before the fourth heat Favonia ruled favorite, but the field brought nearly as much as she did. Rosalind Wilkes footed away so fast that she carried Favonia to a break before reaching the quarter, and opened so big a gap that she seemed a sure winner, but Van Ness periled his chances by allowing Favonia to close up on him dangerously, and won by a scant neck in 2:19½. Favonia remained quite a favorite before the fifth heat, pools averaging about $25 to $22 for the field.

The start was an even one, but Favonia proved the best later. On the third quarter she footed away from Rosalind Wilkes and beat her out handily by three lengths in 2:20½.

There were twenty-one entries for the 2:34 class, among them the redoubtable Fred Folger, but, as in the other race, only four answered the bell, so to the relief of those who desired to speculate, Folger was not among them. The good gray mare Patience was selected for the favorite, and had no trouble in carrying it off in three straight heats, but in rather slow time. Class 2:34, purse $600—W. C. Trimble's Patience first in 2:28½, 2:28½, 2:28½; Elbert second, Chief third and Silesia fourth.

Coney Island Meeting.

On the 28th, the valuable Emporium stakes, worth nearly $10,000, was decided at Sheephead Bay in a storm of wind and rain. Since early morning a furious northeaster had prevailed, and the attendance was therefore limited to the rear seats owing to the driving mist and rain. The track was wet and sloppy, making fast time out of the question.

For the Californians the day was a bad one, Aurelia, Flood Tide and Guarantee being all beaten. The latter ran in the Emporium and was backed by his owners, but he was made too much use of early in the race. He and Tea Tray ran the first half mile in 50 seconds, the ¾ of a mile in 1:17. This settled them, and Raceland headed them in the lower turn, winning easily by four lengths, the outsider, Marauder, beating Tea Tray by a head for the second place.

The Universal handicap was won by Rupert by a head only from Aurelia, Garrison on the latter waiting too long.

Five Californians ran in the five and a half furlongs dash for two-year-olds. Two of them showed up well. Porter Ashe's Flood Tide was absolutely left at the post, but ran a remarkably good race, and finished a good fourth in a field of thirteen, but a length behind McCarthy's colt Sorrento, who was in the front division all through, and ran a good race. Haggin's pair, Isis and Marsac, showed up poorly, as all the two-year-olds of his stable have thus far this year, come into form very slowly.

Following is the summary:

First race, seven furlongs, Joe Lee won, Brother Dan second, James A. third. Time, 1:31½.

Second race, five and a half furlongs, Harrisburg won, My-fellow second, Sorrento third. Time, 1:12½.

Third race, one and one-eighth miles, Rupert won, Aurelia second. Time, 2:00½.

Fourth race, one and one-half miles, Raceland won, Mirabeau second, Tea Tray third. Time, 2:42.

Fifth race, one mile, Rapine won, Royal Arch second, Frank Ward third. Time, 1:46½.

Sixth race, one and one-half miles on the turf, Bob Miles won, Orlando second, Chanticleer third. Time, 2:45½.

On the 29th, California was not represented at Coney Island. The course was muddy and very heavy, and the racing was of very commonplace order. Grimaldi, Jay F. Dee and Bradford upset the talent in their respective races, all of which were won in the easiest possible fashion. Eolian's defeat by Bradford was not wholly unexpected, for the horse will not run except when he has Garrison in the saddle. The latter could not make the weight, however, and Billy Donohue could not make the horse extend himself, though he used all the extraordinary skill he possessed. Eolian consequently finished fourth and a rather poor fourth at that; his backers, consequently, are very unhappy.

Favor's race at a mile and a quarter in 2:12½ was a wonderfully good one, considering the condition of the track, even though he had nothing of any consequence to beat.

Comment on the other races is unnecessary, so the recapitulation is merely given:

First race, three-quarters of a mile, Grimaldi won, Salisbury second, Flagoletta third. Time, 1:16½.

Second race, six and a half furlongs, Jay F. Dee won, Volunter second, Blazon third. Time, 1:26.

Third race, seven-eighths of a mile, King Crab won, Satisfaction second, Charley Drexel third. Time, 1:31.

Fourth race, one and a quarter miles, Favor won, Letretia second, Ordway third. Time, 2:12½.

Fifth race, seven-eighths of a mile, Bradford won, Saxony second, Fitzroy third. Time, 1:30.

Sixth race, three-quarters of a mile, Exile won, Joseph second, Edisto third. Time, 1:18.

On June 30th, the Coney Island Jockey Club brought its June meeting to a close. In the first race, the Goody stakes for two-year-olds, the Maltese stock farm (Senator Hearst's) colt Flood Tide won cleverly, with Pulsifer's Tenny second. Flood Tide ran a good race, and broke the ice of failure under which the stable has been laboring all the meeting. Aurelia's success did the same for the Haggin stable. At the beginning of the meeting it looked as if Mr. Haggin would win some half a dozen of the stakes, but failure followed failure, and it will take a pretty big check to pay the forfeits alone, without considering the other expenses. Incidentally it may be said that the Dwyers did not win a fortune, the New and Spring stakes being their principal successes.

In the Spendthrift stakes, third on the card, the Belmont colors were on first and second, and it was like a glimpse back into the glorious early days. In Raceland and George Oyster Mr. Belmont has two horses of great promise that ought to place the majority of the Monmouth three-year-old stakes to his credit. That Mr. Belmont was not present to witness the contests is to be regretted. It would have pleased him immensely to have seen Garrison take George Oyster up and fairly strangle Bendigo on a run of 100 yards, and then as Raceland came sailing along in the stretch, drop gracefully behind and follow the victor.

The other races were the Stirrup Cup, a selling stakes, a selling purse and a heavy-weight handicap on the grass. The Stirrup cup was won easily by Lelogas, the Selling stakes by Long Knight and the purse by Housatonic. The race on the grass was a splendid contest, and Exile, at 140 pounds ridden by Garrison, while not making a new record in point of time, made one for weight carried, no other horse having ever carried that weight for two miles in 3:36½ in this country, and it is nearly certain that no such performance has been made in England. The races on grass at Sheephead have been very popular, and as the course improves at each meeting, some great racing may be expected over it at the autumn meeting.

The following is a summary of the races:

First race, three-quarters of a mile, Flood Tide won, Tennessee second, Winfield third. Time, 1:17.

Second race, mile and a furlong, Aurelia won, The Bourbon second, Brother Ban third. Time, 1:56.

Third race, one and a quarter miles, Raceland won, George Oyster second, Tristan third. Time, 2:12.

Fourth race, one mile and a half, Lelogas won, Dunboyne second, Hidalgo third. Time, 2:16½.

Fifth race, one mile and a furlong, Knight won, Valiant second, Glenmound third. Time, 1:56½.

Sixth race, seven furlongs, Housatonic won, King Idle second, Edisto third. Time, 1:28.

Seventh race, two miles on the turf, Exile won, Tenbooker second. Time, 3:36½.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Thos. Bowhill, M. R. C. V. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by three dollars, and addressed to Dr. Bowhill, 1523 California St., San Francisco.

Hereditary Diseases and Veterinary Opinions.

[BY DR. THOS. BOWHILL, M. R. C. V. S.]

In dealing with this important subject I have not had at my disposal the means of giving the results of many investigators, as the literature on this point is very meagre, and, in many respects, there is considerable difference of opinion. In the compilation of this article I have drawn almost exclusively from the works of Professor Williams, and Mr. Casswell and a recent article on the subject by Mr. Hunting. In this State when the breeding of fine horses for both draft and racing purposes, is becoming more general, it is a matter of vital importance that great attention should be given to the prevention of hereditary diseases by careful selection of breeding animals. This point is one open to considerable controversy, and occupies the minds of the principal breeders in this and other countries. It is also a source of considerable difference of opinion among veterinary surgeons, what diseases are hereditary.

One of the most important duties imposed on members of the Veterinary profession is that of giving an opinion as to the soundness of horses, which, of course, means their freedom from disease or defects that may impair their usefulness, either presently or prospectively—immediately or remotely. Definitions of what constitutes soundness or unsoundness have been attempted, but the best of them are, perhaps, imperfect, and therefore more or less unsatisfactory; and if we might judge from the opinions given in the law courts and elsewhere, one might almost infer that veterinary surgeons were not always agreed among themselves as to whether certain conditions do or do not constitute what may be regarded as coming within the meaning of the term. Nay, and what is worse, litigations not unfrequently demonstrate that very important members cannot agree as to whether an abnormal condition which would render a horse unsound really exists. If such disagreement were owing to the obscurity of the conditions, to the supposed defect being located beyond the reach of ascertainment by hand and eye, then the divergence might be excusable on the ground of difficulty; but when the source of contention is accessible to eye, ear and hand, then the affair is less likely to be viewed favorably by the lay world. When the dispute is as to whether a spavin, a splint or a cataract is or is not present, then the public are not likely to place much reliance on the skill of experts, for these defects, if they are obvious to one practitioner, should be so to another. A spavin that can be felt can also be seen, and there should be no doubt as to its presence or absence. Yet how often has it happened that some veterinary surgeons have sworn to the existence of this exotosis on a horse's hock, and others have averred that the articulation was perfectly healthy; and how often has it not also occurred that horses have been condemned as unsound because they had what the inimical experts called "coarse hocks," joints which in reality were the opposite of defective. It can scarcely be denied that the diversity of opinion often entertained by veterinary surgeons, not only as to what constitutes unsoundness, but in many cases as to whether recognized causes of unsoundness are at all present in horses certified to as having them, brings discredit and loss of confidence in their knowledge. It only too often happens that there is a tendency by some to carry the unsoundness notion too far, and perhaps in others, to consider it too lightly. Mistakes and oversights may occur in examining horses as in other affairs, but surely there should exist no doubt in disputed cases as to whether a horse is lame, spavined or diseased in its eyes, or in any other part which can be seen or felt. It is such contentions which bring ridicule upon experts and damage their reputation. Surely such mishaps might be to a very great extent, if not altogether, avoided. An agreement might also be made as to what really constitutes unfitness for work in horses, for such is the meaning of unsoundness. A horse may be unsound for one purpose and not for another, for instance, a stallion may be unsound for racing, through strain of a tendon, fracture or other accident, or even from laminitis (or founder), caused by over exertion or otherwise, and yet be sound for stud purposes. To condemn an animal because it would be likely to get unsound through these defects would be as reasonable as to assume that a man with a wooden leg would probably have children with wooden legs.

Thousands of horses do sound service for years who would not receive certificates of soundness from many veter-nary surgeons, and very many have been rejected as unsound which have never been "sick or sorry" as the saying is.

The question of unsoundness, and especially hereditary unsoundness, is one that demands serious consideration by veterinary surgeons in order to ascertain how many of the ideas pertaining to it, rest on tradition or fancy and not on established facts.

It is necessary to know first what diseases are hereditary, and next the value of veterinary opinion, and how it may best be applied. Mr. Armstrong, in a recent paper, classified the diseases said to be hereditary as follows:

1. Diseases affecting the organs of special sense—Those of the ear, eye, etc.)
2. Diseases affecting digestion—Undefined.
3. Ditto respiration—Roaring, whistling and broken-wind.
4. Ditto locomotion—Such as spavin and curb, splints and windgalls, ringbone and sidebone, etc.
5. Ditto the feet—Navicular disease and laminitis.
6. Ditto the nervous system—Shivering, epilepsy and string-halt.
7. Ditto the skin—Eczema and grease.

It is quite apparent to any veterinary surgeon or experienced horseowner in looking over this list that everyone of the pathological conditions above named may arise under circumstances, in which it is impossible to impute heredity as a cause. As Mr. Hunting very wisely remarks, if we allow that every one of these conditions may appear without any hereditary predisposition, and simply as the result of extraneous causes, we have to ask and answer the question: "Can it be ascertained by any definite symptoms which disease is hereditary and which is not?" First of all it is necessary to discuss the significance of a morbid condition in an animal used for stud purposes, and the only two practical questions seem to be, "Is it a serious fault?" "Will it be transmitted?" Our first consideration will be the diseases usually classed as hereditary.

1. Organs of special sense—In the human subject diseases of these organs are certainly very often transmitted from parent to offspring. In the lower animal the eye and ear may be affected with hereditary diseases. In dogs deafness is often hereditary. In the horse the eye suffers from disease which may be transmitted; even accidental injury to the eye of a parent is sometimes transmitted to the offspring, but the question arises in such cases, Was the eye not diseased prior to the injury? Cataract is transmissible, and amaurosis (paralysis of the optic nerve causing total blindness) is said to be, but the evidence is scarcely well enough authenticated to be positive.

Ophthalmia (or inflammation of the eye), due to injury, cannot be classed as hereditary, but there is evidence of transmission of periodic ophthalmia, or, as it is commonly called, "moon blindness." The question now arises, "How can it be determined in certain diseases of the eye, which depends upon accident and which is constitutional?"

Blindness is such a serious unsoundness that I agree with Mr. Hunting, who says, "Reject as unsound all stud animals suffering from it, or from conditions of the eye likely to produce it." Such an opinion might be modified with safety to both parties, when evidence of pure accident or non-transmission can be adduced by the owner.

2. Organs of digestion—There are no definite diseases of these organs that show any evidence of heredity.

3. Organs of respiration—Next to diseases of the organs of locomotion, these are the most important that we have to deal with, as it places an animal in the same position as a locomotive without any steam. The first disease to consider under the heading is Roaring, which can be defined as a loud unnatural sound made during inspiration, and there is no doubt but this abominable disease is transmissible, as we have abundant proofs on record. Professor Williams mentions a breed of horses in which nearly all the animals in both sexes are roarsers. Horses and geldings are, however, more likely to become roarsers than mares. It would be going too far to insist that roaring induced in a stallion by cold, sore throat or "strangles" is a transmissible disease, but a great difficulty arises out of the fact that hereditary disease as a rule only becomes apparent in the offspring at the same age at which it appeared in the parent. You may have a four-year-old free from "roaring" whose sire is a notorious "roarer," but the animal at five will have developed the disease without other appreciable cause. Again an animal attacked with "strangles" at four years old may be left a "roarer" though both parents are free from hereditary disease. The infantile diseases of horses usually appear between the ages of three and five years. Hereditary diseases also make their appearance about this time, and at this period closer artificial surroundings and regular work come forward as possible causes of disease. To determine when a disease is due to external causes entirely, and when such causes act as exciting causes upon a system already predisposed by hereditary taint is a matter of extreme difficulty. Roaring is a most serious unsoundness, and its presence in a stud animal should always be followed by rejection. There are cases in which a horse "makes a noise," the result of an injury to the bones of the face or the rings of the trachea. Such a condition cannot be considered transmissible. Whistling is merely a degree of roaring and must be judged accordingly, although Professor Williams is of opinion that they can exist independently of each other, that a whistler does not always become a roarer.

Again, during exercise the nasal sounds in some horses are greatly increased, causing the animal to be termed a "high blower," and arises from flapping or cracking of the nostrils, and has no connection with any disease. It is sometimes due to narrowness of the nostrils and nasal passages, and it never seems to interfere with the horse's usefulness, consequently it cannot be considered an unsoundness.

Under this heading we must discuss "broken wind," which is a nervous inflammatory disease, characterized by difficult and spasmodic breathing, the inspiratory act being easily performed, the expiratory being very prolonged, and accomplished by two apparent efforts. This disease is commonly known as heaves. As to broken wind being hereditary it is an open question, but it is a fact that sound chested horses become broken winded without any apparent cause, and difficulty in expiration may be attributed in such cases to the limitation of the thoracic contraction. It will easily be seen that when the shape of the chest is round, the thoracic movements are more limited, and the horse will in consequence not be able to take deep inspirations, or make strong expiratory efforts. Considering the above we can place heredity as one of the remote causes of broken wind, because the offspring may inherit the same bodily conformation and temperament as their parents, and thus be more liable to become similarly affected. But it must be remembered that broken wind can be produced in a few days by feeding on dry, musty hay, and only in old cases is it due to or accompanied by structural changes in the lungs, but there is a want of definite evidence to prove its being hereditary.

The Chicago Meeting.

On the 28th the best racing of the meeting was seen at Washington Park, despite the fact that the track was heavy with mud. The Oakwood handicap was the chief event of the day. Egmont, the favorite, got away first, but after passing the stand Beaconsfield took the lead. Their positions were not changed until the half-mile post. Here Baldwin's Grisette challenged and passed the leader, Dad moving out of the bunch and taking third place. As they rounded into the straight the pace was terrific, Paragon making a splendid effort for the lead. Dad, Grisette and Beaconsfield kept in front, however, until they reached the stand. Here Beaconsfield fell away, leaving Grisette and Dad to make the finish, the latter winning by a short head. The other events require no mention beyond the summaries, as follows:

First race, seven-eighths of a mile—Rambler won, Hector second, Parkhill third. Time, 1:37½.

Second race, five-eighths of a mile—Mamie Fonson won, Devonia second, Belle of Natuna third. Time, 1:11½.

Third race, five-eighths of a mile—Castaway won, Zoolite second, Cassandra third. Time, 1:10½.

Fourth race, one and an eighth miles, (Oakwood handicap)—Dad won, Grisette second, Beaconsfield third. Time, 1:06½.

Fifth race, one mile (selling)—Lottie Wall won, Keder Kahn second, Loveland third. Time, 1:54½.

Sixth race, one and a quarter miles—Wahoo won, Santoline second, Glenfortune third. Time, 2:25.

On the 29th, the bright sunshine and warm south wind brought a largely increased attendance to Washington Park. The Kenwood stakes, the big race of the day, was productive of some disappointment from the fact that Haggin at the last moment withdrew So So, there being much curiosity to see him in fast company. The slightly heavy condition of the track probably induced the Californian to leave Monsoon as his sole representative in the event. The twelve two-year-olds pranced around for a few minutes, but finally got away, with Bookmaker in the lead. Before a quarter of the distance had been traveled Proctor Knott crept up and forged ahead, not being able, however, to get his nose in front until entering the straight. Vincent was on Bookmaker and made a gallant effort to hold his own, but the obstinate gelding drew away and won by three lengths.

There was nothing of special interest in the other races, of which the recapitulation is as follows:

First race, one mile, Aristi won, Amelia P second, Amos third. Time, 1:52½.

Second race, six furlongs, Lottie Wall won, Fannie second, Sayre third. Time, 1:20½.

Third race, five furlongs (Kenwood stakes), Proctor Knott won, Bookmaker second, Monsoon third. Time, 1:06½.

Fourth race, one and a quarter miles, Drmstick won, Foster second, Emma Johnson third. Time, 2:17½.

Fifth race (one mile heats), first heat Somerset won, Mirth second, Arundel third. Time, 1:48½.

Second heat, Arundel won, Headland second, Mirth third. Time, 1:52½.

Starters in the heat race: Calcutta 108, distanced in first heat; Arundel 110; Headland 117; Lepanto 117, distanced in second heat; Mirth 93; Somerset 110, distanced in second heat; favorite Marshall Luke 118, distanced in first heat.

On Saturday, bright skies, a throng of people that labored under continuous strain of excitement, nicely tempered heat, capital racing and spirited betting were the prominent features on the grounds of the Washington Park Club. The chief race of the day was the valuable Englewood stakes for three-year-old fillies, in which there were nine highly bred starters. The Santa Anita pair, Los Angeles and Winona, were promptly installed as strong favorites at odds of 4 to 5, but the public knew that Julia L. had beaten Los Angeles at Latonia, and poured in their money with so much freedom in support of her pretensions that the odds against Baldwin's pair expanded to even money, and in some books to 6 to 5. Los Angeles was piloted by Murphy, but she is probably misjudged, as she was at no time formidable. Winona led for six furlongs, with Leonine and Zuleika alternating in second place. When well settled, in a straight run for the wire, Barnes gave Julia L. her head and the filly ran right away from her competitors and won an easy race by three lengths. The struggle between Zuleika and Lela May for second money ended in favor of the former by a length.

The last race was a great victory for Mr. Haggin's filly Rosalind, who was made a great favorite, but Tudor, Barrister, Mollie McCarthy's Last and Jack Cocks had throngs of admirers and backers. The race needs but a scant description because there was but one in it, and that one was Rosalind. She went into the lead with the fall of the flag and was never led, romping home an easy winner. The lightly weighted Famine ran well in the stretch and beat Mollie's Last for the honors. The following is a summary of the races:

For two-year-olds, three-quarters of a mile—Nylephta won, Lady Hemphill second, Glitter third. Time, 1:20½.

For two-year-olds, three-quarters of a mile—Maneola won, Heron second, Hindoo Craft third. Time, 1:18.

For all ages, one mile—Macheth won, Lavinia Belle second, Sayre third. Time, 1:45½.

Englewood stakes for three-year-olds, one mile—Julia L. won, Zuleika second, Lela May third. Time, 1:46.

For three-year-olds and upward, one mile and a furlong—Un'que won, Jim Nava second, Ed Mack third. Time, 1:59.

The one mile and a sixteenth Carns won, Business second, Quindaro Belle third. Time, 1:52.

It was a bright, enjoyable afternoon at Washington Park on the 2d. By rail, cable car and road, pleasure seekers thronged to the beautiful course until 6,000 or so were gathered within. Down town it was very, very hot, but the torridity was mitigated somewhat at the park by occasional lake breezes. As to the racing, all speculation as to whether Wheeler T. would prove able to make Emperor of Norfolk extend himself, and some real good racing went to naught, because Wheeler T. and Macbeth II were scratched early, and when the decree came for the decision only Aristi and Gallifet faced the champion three-year-old. It was a great disappointment that the Chicago stables' colts were not thoroughly well, because then some semblance of a race might have been seen. As it was, the mighty grandson of Lexington toddled along comfortably behind Aristi until Murphy gave him his head for a moment, when, like an arrow sped from a bow, he passed and took the lead that was approximately challenged thereafter. Aristi and Gallifet are both good colts and can both run fast, yet three or four enormous bonds of the Emperor made them momentarily seem to stand still, and then he was pulled up and simply galloped down the homestretch, while the other two were racing might and main behind him to decide the disposition of the second money.

Following is a summary of the races:

Six furlongs—Miss Flood won, King Idler second, Santa Cruz third. Time, 1:16½.

One mile and one-sixteenth—Tenacity won, Glenfortune second, Annie H. third. Time, 1:51½.

One mile and a sixteenth—Mollie McCarthy's Last won, Silver Belle second, Amelia B. third. Time, 1:49½.

One mile—Emperor of Norfolk won, Aristi second, Gallifet third. Time, 1:48½.

Seven furlongs—Clara C. won, Birthday second, Tudor third. Time, 1:29.

Six furlongs—First heat, Shotover won, Carnegie second, Jennie McFarland third. Time, 1:15½; second heat, Shotover won, Carnegie second, Woodcraft third. Time, 1:15½.

The chief race of the day on the 3d was the Boulevard Stakes, in which the Rancho Del Paso and Santa Anita stables fought for victory. The field was of a high quality, and furnished a genuine horse race. Dad and Business were scratched, and the owners of Hindoo Rose concluded to start her, for exercise probably. Volante was the first favorite, but so much money went on Haggin's pair that they threatened to shake his position at one time. Montrose received strong support from his popular owner, and justified it by the good race he ran. Lela and Volante were in front when the flag went down, but Murphy took Volante back at once. At the stand Daruna was a clear length in front of Hindoo Rose and Montrose, and was already giving evidence of the fact that she was to make a runaway of it if possible. At the quarter she was four lengths ahead of Falcon, Montrose still being third. Around the turn she went so fast that a shout of surprise went up when she turned, and on the backstretch she was at least ten lengths in front, and the jockeys on the horses behind relaxed the pull on their mounts and increased their pace perceptibly. Hamilton took a slight pull on Daruna, the result being that at the half the field had closed up most of the gap. Falcon joined Daruna, and the two ran in close company around the stable turn, past the three-quarters and into the stretch, Volante being now third and gaining fast. Murphy now sent Volante for the race and soon disposed of Daruna and Falcon, and won in a big gallop. Montrose came with a big burst of speed in front of the stand, and ran right by Daruna. Volante won by three lengths, and Montrose was two lengths in front of Daruna. The race was very fast. Time, 2:08½.

Following is a recapitulation of the races:

First race, one mile—Tenbooker won; Glen Fortune second, Montpelier third. Time, 1:44.

Second race, one mile—Badge won; Lela May second, Lavinia Belle third. Time, 1:56½.

Third race, one and one-half miles—Volante won; Montrose second, Daruna third. Time, 2:08½.

Fourth race, six furlongs—Silleck won; Minnie Palmer second, Lee Dinkelspiel third. Time, 1:16½.

Fifth race, seven furlongs—Luke Dart won; Kosciuska second, Dousman third. Time, 1:29½.

Sixth race, seven furlongs—Valuable won; Jacobin second, Wary third. Time, 1:28½.

The attendance at Washington Park on the 4th was enormous, being estimated at 30,000. The racing was mainly of an inferior character and calls for little description. The only events at all noteworthy were the Emperor of Norfolk's easy victory in the sweepstakes, and Miori's fine turn of speed in the mile dash. The track was heavy from the previous night's drenching rain, and the filly performance attracted a good deal of attention. As a rule, the fields were poor and the racing dull. The following is a summary:

For two-year-olds, six furlongs—Come to Taw won, Havillah second, Baronoff third. Time, 1:20.

All ages, one mile and one-eighth—Amelia P. won, Avindaro Belle second, Bonsza third. Time, 2:04½.

Mile dash, selling—Wandero won, Kensington second, Antonio third. Time, 1:49½.

Sheridan stakes, for three-year-olds—Emperor of Norfolk won, Gallifet second, Hamlet third. Time, 2:17½.

Mile dash, selling—Maori won, Balance second, Hornpipe third. Time, 1:45½.

Purse, one mile and one-sixteenth—Blonda won, Silver Belle second, Hettie S. third. Time, 1:54½.

Six furlongs, dash—Lottie Wall won, Robin second, Beaconsfield third. Time, 1:18½.

Monmouth Park Meeting.

The racing scene was again shifted, and this time to Monmouth Park, a short pleasure drive from Long Branch. The opening was on the 4th, and it was admitted by the old frequenters of the track that it was one of the most enjoyable day's racing seen there since the opening in 1871. The weather was superb, a cool breeze blowing in from the ocean all day. That there was no storm was something to be thankful for. Had there been, thousands would have had to take it, for the crowd present was enormous, and it would probably have been larger had the railroads been able to transport all who wanted to go down at midday. They did their best, but it was not until long after the racing began that all who started reached the park, and even at that, the races had to be delayed fifteen minutes for those who had started on the special parlor-car train. Notwithstanding this, the eight races and a "run off" for dead heats were all run in a little over four hours. The results were conducive to the enjoyment of the backers of both straight and place favorites, Saxony and Lady Margaret winning the first two races. The latter is a very speedy filly that was complimented by being made a favorite at her first appearance.

The third race, the Fourth of July Handicap, was won by Enrus, who, although not the favorite, had a tremendous following. Aurelia, who was the favorite, was badly handled in the race, coupled with being crowded out just at the instant Garrison began to move up, while Richmond the second favorite, started so lame as to finish third was more than we expected.

The fourth race, the Ocean Stakes, was the star event of the day. It brought out The Bard, Kingston and Firenze. The result was an easy victory for The Bard, and the crowd shouted itself hoarse. In fact for years no horse has had such an ovation as was paid to The Bard both at the judges' stand, and again at the saddling paddock. The other races were won by Bessie June, after a dead heat with Ordway, Prospect and King Idle, and the steeplechase by Major Pickett. There were two falls, but neither of the riders were injured.

The following is a summary of the races:

Three-quarters of a mile—Saxony won, Volunteer second, Sir Joseph third. Time, 1:15.

Three-quarters of a mile—Lady Margaret won, Buddhist second, Singleton third. Time, 1:15½.

The fourth of July Handicap, one mile—Enrus won, Fitzroy second, Richmond third. Time, 1:43½.

The Ocean Stakes, one and one-eighth miles—The Bard won by four lengths, Kingston second, Firenze third. Time, 1:54.

The one and three-sixteenths miles was a dead heat between Bessie June and Ordway, Brother Bar third. Time, 2:06½.

One mile—Prospect won, Cambysses second, Fred B. third. Time, 1:43½.

Seven-eighths of a mile—King Idle won, Housaionic second, Golden reel third. Time, 1:29.

The run-off for fifth race was won by Bessie June. Time, 2:06.

Steeplechase over the full course, Major Pickett won, Retribution second, Bassanco third. No time taken.

Forest Home.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—In the early days of California's history, Santa Clara County was a famous grazing region. In her beautiful valley and on her sloping hillsides were luxuriant growths of wild oats, native clovers and bunch grass. The Spanish and Mexican people then counted their horses and cattle by the thousands, but great changes have come to Santa Clara Valley since those old days. First, the plow of the grain-growers drove out the Spanish flocks and herds, and held undisputed sway there for years; then came the orchardists, vineyardists and vegetable farmers, armed with their budding and pruning knives, and the great wheat fields gradually shrunk in size and in many sections disappeared altogether. The extent of this last agricultural revolution is one of the wonders of the age.

A decade ago, the whole country around San Jose grew no fruit except in small family orchards; now the fruit product is fabulous. There were 1,500,000 fruit trees in the County in 1886, and now, with those planted in 1887 and 1888, there must be more than 2,000,000 fruit trees in Santa Clara. It is estimated that the tree-fruit crop of 1887 aggregated 4,500 tons or 90,000,000 lbs. The crop of 1888 will show an increase of 33 per cent. upon that of last year. The small-fruit crop is also very large. For days at a time in 1887, Santa Clara station shipped from four to eleven carloads of blackberries, and these figures did not include those sold to the San Jose canneries. As large as these figures show the fruit industry to be, it is rapidly growing. New areas are being planted to orchards, vineyards and vegetable gardens each year.

In spite of the changes that a third of a century has brought to the valleys and hillsides of Santa Clara there is still a large live-stock interest. The great herds and bands of Spanish stock have gone and their places have been taken by horses and cattle of the best blood. A great deal of energy, enterprise and public spirit has been shown by certain Santa Clara people in introducing and breeding this better stock, and among these Colonel Coleman Younger occupies a leading position. "Forest Home," his breeding farm, is known to all lovers of fine short-horn stock. It was to visit this place that, in company with C. N. Chase, Esq. of San Francisco, your correspondent made a trip to the "Garden City."

The ride from Oakland to San Jose by way of Niles is always a delight. The fertile lands covered with orchards and vineyards, and vegetable and small-fruit farms on the one hand, and the sloping uplands of the foothills on the other form a picture that, seen even for the hundredth time, retains all its charms. It is an ever recurring wonder to see the gradual advance of the gardener, the orchardist and vineyardist up the sloping uplands toward the top of the foothills. In two years every foot of these hillsides will be occupied by the fruitmen and gardeners with their extensive cultivation. While it is true that almost everybody in that section is engaging to a greater or less extent in fruit growing, still from the car window one may see many herds of good cattle and many bands of good horses, and although this has been an unusually dry season, all the stock seems to be in good condition. As the cars whirl past orchard after orchard, every tree of which is bending under its weight of fruit, we wonder where it is all consumed. Every mile of the way shows new progress and development. New dwellings and new business blocks are going up in all the towns. As we approached San Jose this was the more noticeable. There you see on every hand the evidences of the growing prosperity which is prevailing in Santa Clara County. At the depot we were met by Colonel Younger, and in the first family carriage ever brought to that part of the state, and still in good condition after 30 years use, we were driven through a beautifully shaded avenue, bordered by fine residences and residence grounds, to "Forest Home" which is just outside the city limits.

Here, in a grove of stately and beautiful trees, in sight of the steeples and spires of San Jose and the rounded foothills on either side of the valley, Colonel Younger has made himself a charming home. More than 200 acres of the richest sediment soils have been divided into fields of from 10 to 25 acres each and seeded to domestic grasses. Each field has water and shade, and with a little irrigation the grass has, even in this dry year, a vernal green. The forage plant most favored by the Colonel is the Australian rye-grass. It is hardy, sweet and nutritious, makes a thick sward and stands the dry season remarkably well, and continuous grazing does not kill it. If it does as well in other localities and on other soils as there, its introduction will prove a benefaction to this state. Colonel Younger is a pioneer settler of this Coast, having come here in 1850 and located on the spot now so famous as "The Forest Home Stock Ranch."

All the 38 years which have intervened from that time he has spent beautifying and adorning his home. With his own hands he has planted all the various and rare trees and shrubs which surround his place. He has crossed the plains with trains and stock several times when each journey involved hardships and dangers which those who cross the continent in luxurious palace cars cannot imagine. He now lacks one year only to make him four score, and he is the best preserved man in the state. It is more than a quarter of a century since he brought his first herd-book short-horns to California. These were purchased in Kentucky and Missouri without regard to cost. From that time to this he has been a constant buyer of the best short-horn, prize-ring blood of America. Whersver the best formed animals have been found there he has bought. From this blood have been produced hundreds of animals, equal in every respect to any on this continent. With the knowledge and experience of these long years of breeding has been united an enthusiasm and public spirit rarely equalled.

The stock of "Forest Home" has been exhibited and has taken prizes at all the fairs of the State for 25 years. For many years Colonel Younger was a Director of the State Agricultural Society, and gave his time and best efforts to the great work of elevating the field and factory owners and workers to a higher plane of labor and production.

This article must necessarily be too short to give a complete description of the 80 head of short-horns now at "Forest Home." There are four royally bred and royal looking bulls at the head of which is the "Duke of Kirklevington," bred by A. J. Alexander, Esq. of Woodburn Stock Farm, Ky. Among the cows are "Red Dolly," and her daughters "Red Dolly 2d," "3d Oxford Rose," and "2d Rose of Forest Home." There are other cows equally noticeable. There are calves, yearlings, two-year-olds and three-year-olds which have the size and form to suit the most exacting requirements.

While looking at these herd-book cattle so perfect in form and so profitable for the grazier, I wondered why more of this blood is not used by the stockmen of the State for the improvement of their stock. It costs no more to raise one of these fine animals for market than it does to raise a scrub which never pays for feed. In 1886 there were in this State less than 2,000 thoroughbred cattle, and there were less than 20,000 grades. At the same time there were 200,000 common cattle, and when seen they are for the most part very common. What is wanted to make stock raising in California profitable is an improvement of the breeds of cattle, and this can be done only by a diffusion of the best blood.

In addition to the short-horns there are many fine bred horses and sheep. A visit to "Forest Home" with its green fields, unexcelled cattle, horses and sheep, is a rich treat to a lover of fine stock. After the examination of the stock, which occupied several hours, came the indoor hospitality of the Colonel and his charming family, and then the return to Oakland through the orchards and vineyards, which, if possible, looked more attractive than in the morning.

Notes and Comments.

With the enormous increase in the value of stakes at all the racing centers, first-class trainers and jockeys are in such demand that fabulous prices are paid for their services, greatly to the dismay of owners of times gone by, whose training hills were not burdened with such heavy expenses. There are racing establishments that now contain horses in training that represent upwards of $100,000 in value, whose expenditure in the way of stabling, training and travelling, together with the entries to almost countless stakes, amount annually to at least half that sum, while to this, in a few instances, must be added retaining fees for the heavy and light weight jockeys of from $3,000 to $10,000 a year. A good honest, able, careful trainer cannot be too highly valued in an extensive stable, whose owners are apt to indulge in heavy speculations. He has not only to keep an intelligent supervision of his valuable charges but also to time their preparation so that on a given day and for a given race a horse shall be fit to run for a man's life. The skilful trainer is wrapt up in his occupation. He knows well that his orders on the track are eagerly watched by his confreres and that if he makes an innovation on the usual course of training, it will be the talk of the track when the day's exercise is at an end. He is well aware that every movement of his horses is followed by a score of touts who are eager to obtain the secrets of the stable. A private trial is almost an impossibility on the large tracks without the result being known, so that the trainer has to obtain a true insight as to the speed and endurance of his nags without his competitors gaining the same advantage. It sometimes happens that in keying a horse up in the final preparation he may show some slight ailment after his work, and then the anxious question presents itself, as indeed it does in all cases, as to the instructions to be given to the jockey in riding the race under various contingencies. But all his cares and anxieties are amply rewarded when his horse is stripped in the paddock amid the admiring comments of turf amateurs who are keen admirers of a well conditioned racer, and afterwards the round of cheers from the crowded stands as his horse, the picture of strength, speed and symmetry of motion comes sweeping along the course as he takes part in the preliminary gallop of a great race. His work, for the time, is done, and now he relies in a great measure on luck and the skilful riding of the jockey for the crowning success of his arduous labors.

The jockey; well, it does appear somewhat incongruous that a rider should receive a larger amount for a few minutes work than the trainer does for his almost ceaseless labors during the racing season. Not only that, but in many instances it will be found at the end of a campaign that the rider has cleared a great deal more money than his employers. The fact is that the enormous fees earned by first-class jockeys of modern times is the natural outcome of the increased value of the stakes. The old school of trainers cannot, in some instances, accommodate themselves to the new rider of things. They urge that these jockeys are generally mere boys, most of them ignorant and unable to earn five hundred dollars a year in any other occupation, and the idea of their receiving from three to fifteen thousand a year for their services is simply preposterous. Those who argue in this sense appear to forget that supply and demand covers the question. It is related that a certain prince of London finance, who owned an extensive stable, once accosted Fred Archer, after one of his brilliant finishes, and inquired on what terms his services at first call could be secured for the next season. Archer promptly replied £3,000. "Great heavens, Archer," exclaimed the magnate, "that's more than I pay my head cashier!" Archer tapped his boot slightly with his whip, and replied with an amused smile, "Then, Baron, perhaps you had better get your cashier to ride." This skilful, honest jockey is well worth the money that is paid to him. Of a thousand exercising lads who seek promotion to the racing pigskin, there is scarcely one that is worthy of attaining the position of first rider in a large stable. The jockey must have muscles of iron, combined with the slight touch of a lady's wrist, with a weight that will allow him to ride in all the principal stakes. In order to do this, he must regulate his diet often to a painful degree, and live a life of entire abnegation even in regard to stimulants. He must be an excellent judge of pace and a keen observer of the traits of the prominent horses against which he has to run. Under certain difficult contingencies his judgment must be instantaneous, and such is especially the case with our circular tracks. The critical point in a race, with a large field of horses, is generally at the turn into the straight. The rider of one of the favorites has been running in a pocket near the rails, and has to find an opening on the turn or abandon the race. He knows that there is a mint of money on the result, besides the fame of the stable. Every nerve is strung with excitement. He sees his opportunity, perhaps, next the pole, or where a horse has been carried out by another, or he still has to wait his time. In that very moment a first-class jockey may earn his years' wages by the judgment he shows, and the skill with which he carries out his intentions. Then again, there are few riders who have a long career on the turf in this country, owing to the lighter weights than those in use in England. To resume the whole question, a first-class jockey may be said to be worthy of his hire.

It was the old, old story, a difference of opinion between judges and the public as to which horse was the winner after a very close finish. It happened in the Thistle Stakes at Coney Island on the 26th June, that the Dwyer's Tea Tray and Appleby's Tristan, both backed for very heavy amounts, got away from the field and had the race home to themselves. At the last furlong Tristan seemed to have outlasted Tea Tray, but the latter under McLaughlin's vigorous driving came again, and although Tristan responded gamely he was a tired horse, and after a desperate finish Tea Tray appeared to have had a head the best of it. The Dwyer Brothers are very popular and the crowd went wild with enthusiasm for Tea Tray and his rider, but soon there was a hush as the people in the press and the grand stand opposite the finishing post, saw Tristan's number go up as the winner, which was followed by a series of yells and hisses, amid a scene of wild confusion. It is said by competent riders that it is impossible for a jockey to give a decision on a close race in which he is one of the competitors, so it was unfortunate that McLaughlin stated to Mr. Dwyer that "if ever he won a race, it was The Thistle Stakes with Tea Tray." The Dwyer Brothers were naturally irritated over the result and in their vexation they announced their intention of scratching their horses for the remaining races of the day, and not allow their colors to be seen at Sheepshead Bay, save in stakes for the remainder of the meeting. For racing interests in general it was a most unfortunate occurrence. Mr. Bradford who was the presiding judge is recognized as a careful, quick sighted, experienced man, whose honest intentions have never been impugned. A close finish is often difficult to decide, especially when one horse is coming and the other tiring or swerving under the whip within a stride or two of the winning post. But surely the judge is in the best position to give a decision, and if, as sometimes happens, it is not in accordance with public opinion, it is far better to accept the verdict as final, than a heavy blow should be given to racing through throwing doubts around in regard to the competency and honesty of the two most important executive officers on the track, namely the judge and the starter. The Dwyer Brothers have been very unfortunate with their stable this season as most of their crack horses have gone amiss, so it was the more vexations when they were assured by competent men that the race was theirs, but it is to be hoped that the gentlemen will rescind their objections and thus set an example of not challenging the decisions of the constituted authorities, as if such actions were persisted in, it might have serious effects on the interests of the turf.

The recent sale at New York of the yearlings from the Rancho Del Paso was a gigantic advertisement of the boundless resources of our great State. It is well known that to successfully raise thoroughbreds, it needs not only capital, judgment, liberality and enterprise in the location of the farm and the selection of the stock, but also that succulent grasses and cereals, clear flowing water and a salubrious climate are among the first requisites. There were in all nearly seventy head of yearlings, and as they were exhibited the unanimous opinion was expressed that only California could furnish such a magnificent consignment. The sporting writers of the press were outspoken in their praises, and from amid a score of brilliant notices in the New York journals we take the following extract from the Sporting World: "It is almost impossible to describe the sensation they created when first they were shown. Such size, such substance, such bone, such finish was never seen together among such an abundance. There was not a commoner among them, and in addition to their looks they were so well developed that all looked like two-year-olds, some even like three-year-olds, and a few might easily have been taken for four-year-olds. And yet they were not gross. Indeed, by this consignment, California has demonstrated that the time is at hand when the Pacific Slope will take the lead in breeding the race horse, and when men like the Messrs. Haggin, brimful of energy and enterprise, accustomed to vast undertakings and provided with practically unlimited wealth, take hold of affairs in the way they have done, it is a question of only a very short time before they succeed. Another thing which was demonstrated is that New York will furnish the sale market of the future, for nowhere else in the country can the buying wealth of the country be attracted so rapidly, so easily and so profitably as in this Empire City."

The concluding sentence of the foregoing article is open to criticism from a California point of view. It was not for a moment denied that New York is the leading sale market of the country, but for the Californians, there is an immense amount of expense and risk in reaching that city from the Pacific slope, that in the case of the Rancho del Paso consignment was beyond computation. A special train with ample accommodation for seventy horses and their twenty attendants is a no small item in itself, but add to this the dangers arising from accidents and the sudden changes of climate, it is only a millionaire that could stand the risks. It is reported that Mr. John Mackey stated to a press correspondent that it would be perhaps more judicious to hold the annual sale of the Rancho del Paso yearlings in California, and thus allow the Eastern buyers to assume the risk of the shipment of their purchases to the East. It is an open question whether even such an important event as the Haggin sale could attract a large number of buyers from the East to this coast in the busiest part of the racing season. Then the buyers have but little experience in transportation matters over such an immense distance and might exaggerate the necessary expenditure and risk. If these yearlings were sent to the East in different consignments and under inexperienced supervision, both the risk and expenditure would be largely increased, and in case of disaster the value of our colts in succeeding years might be endangered. The experiments made by Mr. Haggin in these cases will be followed with a great deal of interest by those owners of fine stock both in racing and trotting strains, who would like to take advantage of the Eastern market in minimizing the risks and expenditure of transportation.

Rigid Rules of Racing.

The rules of racing are somewhat too rigidly enforced in Australia, if we are to believe the following statements:

"When the winner has once passed the post no one must touch him or his horse till after the judge has told him to dismount and he has weighed in, and the weighing is done coram publico. Some time since an amateur won a race, and when he returned to the paddock the girl he was engaged to marry presented him with a rose. She had not studied the Rules of Racing, whether he had I do not know, but the unsentimental stewards were on the alert, and the winner was disqualified. On another occasion the favorite won, but the jockey lost his cap in the course of the struggle. The sun was blazing away its fiercest, and when the horse pulled up a sympathetic bookmaker (incidentally, it should be remarked that he had laid heavily against the winner) went up to this successful jockey, and remarked, "You'll have a sun-stroke my boy, if you don't take care—here, put on my hat!" and offered his comfortable Panama. The boy thoughtlessly took it and put it on—and that kindly bookmaker had a good race after the winner had been disqualified and the stakes awarded to the unbacked outsider who finished second.

ROD.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

A Plucky Angler.

An East Indian describes an incident while fishing for Mah-seer in the Peilar river that stamps him an angler of much more than ordinary enthusiasm, especially when it is remembered that the fish not infrequently reaches a weight of one hundred pounds, and is as game as a salmon. He says:

On one occasion, I determined to discard my flies and to follow the tactics and advice of my friends the Ooralies (bill men), so baiting my hook with a fine, healthy lump of pumpkin, and casting it well out into the pool, I stuck the butt of my rod into the sand on the river bank, and was filling my pipe and preparing to strike a light, when all of a sudden, as the story books say, there was a flop in the river, and the next minute I saw my rod careering down the big pool at about ten miles an hour!

That I was into a big 'un there could hardly be a doubt, and while I felt certain that the fish was at one end, I was unfortunately ever more certain that the proverbial f— I mean that I was not at the other! and how to get there was the rub. Pulling off my coat and boots, and pitching my hat on the ground—I was grievously sorry that I had parted with the last named. Soon afterwards, for the sun was villainously hot, I pitched a header into the pool, and made for my fast disappearing rod as quickly as circumstances—which in this instance were chiefly clothes—would admit.

For the first fifty yards or so I made very good going, but the weight of my wet clothes began soon to tell, and I began to realize the fact that, unless my fish soon came to a stop, I should soon be nowhere. Treading water for a few seconds, by way of a rest, I was most agreeably surprised at catching a glimpse of my rod only a few yards ahead of me, my fish having most considerably come back to me, at least so it appeared.

Cheered by the sight of my rod, like a giant refreshed, I made a superb effort, caught up with it, dashed at it, grabbed it, but alas! for my fondest hopes, the biggest fish I had ever hooked, and that surely I deserved to land, had got away, just as he seemed to be well within my grasp.

Tired with my swim and disgusted at losing my fish, the self-conscious smile of superiority that I knew would steal over the faces of my Ooralies when I had once again to own to defeat, as own it I should have to do when next they came to see me, seemed to rise before me, and I could not refrain from emulating my sorely tried temper in the manner said to be peculiar to Englishmen, and which, at any rate, is most efficacious, and, under the circumstances, the least fatiguing way of letting off steam!

The echo of that big D reverberated amongst the rocks, and as the last faint sound, mingling with the sweet music of the rippling waters and the songling of the breeze in the branches overhead, disappeared in the distance, I succeeded in reaching the bank, a miserable wreck, disgusted with my luck, and lamentably limp.

A Living Fishing Line.

Down amongst these sea-weed stems and pointed rocks we perceive a long, black, tangled string, like a giant's leather boot-lace put to soak; let us trace it in its various folds and twists, and disentangle some of it, we shall have in hand a tough, slippery, indiarubber-like substance, which might well be pronounced a sea-string, and classed with the long trailing weeds amongst which we have found it. A sea-string it is, but not a weed—in fact, a living lasso, capable of consuming the prey it encloses within its treacherous folds. From twenty to thirty feet is no uncommon length for this artful animated fishing-line to reach, but its diameter rarely exceeds an eighth of an inch. It has a mouth, however, capable of considerable distention and holding power. What can appear more innocent than this delicate-looking creeper trailing here and there as the heaving water wells and flows as the tide comes in? Let an unwary tube-dweller, lullen into a false security, stretch forth its tentacles to meet the welcome wave, and a pointed head is adroitly insinuated. The mouth effects its tenuous grasp on the yielding tissues, and the tenant of the tube becomes food for the Nemertes Borasii, for such is the name of this cord-like freehunter. Mr. Kinsley appears to have taken more than ordinary interest in the habits of this strange creature. Speaking of it, he inquires, "Is it alive?" it hangs helpless and motionless, a mere velvet string across the band. Ask the neighbouring annelids and the fry of the rock fishes, or put it in a vase at home and see. It lies motionless, trailing itself among the gravel. You cannot tell where it begins or ends. It may be a strip of dead sea-weed—Himantalia lorea, perhaps, or Chorda filum—or even a tarred string. So thinks the little fish who plays over and over it, till he touches at last what is too surely a head. In an instant a bell-shaped sucker mouth has fastened to its side, in another instant, from one lip a concave double proboscis, just like a tapir's (another instance of the repetition of forms), has clasped him like a finger, and now begins the struggle, but in vain. He is being 'played' with such a fishing rod as the skill of a Wilson or a Stoddard never could invent; a living line with elasticity beyond that of the most delicate fly-rod which follows every lunge, shortening and lengthening, slipping and twisting round every piece of gravel and stem of sea-weed with a tiring drag, such as no Highland wrist or step could ever bring to bear on salmon or trout. The victim is tiring now, and slowly yet dexterously his blind assiduous feeling and shifting along his side till he reaches one end of him, and then the black lips expand, and slowly and surely the curved fingers begin packing him end foremost into the gullet where he sinks inch by inch, till the swelling which marks his place is lost amongst the coils, and he is probably macerated into a pulp long before he has reached the opposite extremity. Once safe down, the black murderer contracts again into a knotted heap, and lies like a boa with a stag inside him, motionless and blest.—Cassell's Popular Educator.

Tahoe is easily reached as Webber, has also a full complement of anglers, but of a sort not so keen. Fashion rules there, and what sport is had is with the spoon. Not that spooning is to be deprecated, but when fly fishing can be had it is not easy to understand how able-bodied men can be content with dawdling over the stern of a boat killing game fish with gross tackle strong enough to drown a porpoise.

It is unsafe perhaps to insist that any one sort of fly fishing is more enjoyable or more sportsmanlike than another, yet there does seem to be a freedom and a thrill about angling for trout or salmon in a strong river that do not characterize pond fishing. We know no more delightful picture than that presented when the angler is seen gracefully whipping some brawling current in a mountain gorge, alone, but not lonely.

A new sort of landing-net being spoken of very highly by the Editor of the English Fishing Gazette, has a ferrule through which the handle slips when the net is not in use, and is held by a snap-catch, making a compact affair to carry. When it is necessary to net a fish the catch is disengaged and the net immediately falls to the end of the handle, being held rigidly there by the close fitting of the end of the handle to the ferrule. The device impresses one as excellent, and if put on the market will doubtless be generally used.

Increasing interest is to be noted about good fishing resorts which have hitherto yielded their rare treasures only to the more hardy among the anglers. The dozen or more lakes on the water systems of the great Placer and Nevada hydraulic mining companies were all stocked with trout years ago, and have been fished but little. The North Bloomfield lakes are full of handsome fish which take the fly, and permission to fish is readily had upon presentation of proper references. The Sierra Buttes lakes afford what is thought by some to be better sport than any other pond fishing in the State. The water is also cold, and the trout are unusually lively and strong. A dark fly, or one with a bit of red about it, may be relied upon to fill the largest basket in a day's fishing.

With July 1st, and unvarying summer warmth, there come most cheering reports from the real fishing resorts among the high mountains. The snow has about melted, the streams are running a fair head of water, clear and comparatively free from bottom, feed and flies of many sorts are abundant. The early fishing in coast streams is good in its way, strengthens wrists, tones up frames relaxed by months of winter inactivity, makes more keen the eyes which have so long looked on printed pages that the first rises are often unheeded or seen too late to strike fairly. But angling for very little fish is only a placebo. The real thing is to wander among the granite mountains where streams run strong and trout are lusty and large. Where sardine cans are conspicuous only by absence, and where no well tramped trails disfigure the banks of rivers that run in eternal quiet save for their own murmuring.

A few, and among them some of the most expert prefer the ease of comfortable inns on the various well stocked lakes, of which four or five may be reached in a few hours. At Weber there is now a royal family of deft fishermen. Professor Allen and Mr. Ellard Bean, of San Jose, Messrs. Ranson, E. Wilson, Anstin Tuhhs and John M. Adams, of this city, "Petronella," of the world, or at least that by no means insignificant portion of it reached by this paper. Will Golcher and Chas. D. Laing better fitted out with tackle than any other anglers in America, and a half dozen others, are enjoying the cool and comfort of the days at Stile's anglers' home on Webber, sleeping the long nights, beyond reach of rattling wagons or rumbling cable cars, chatting and reading for hours of each sunny day until a fit ripple is on the lake, then casting about with certainty of striking good pound fish as game as need be, so frequently that the minutes from six to nine o'clock in the evening are full of excitement.

TRAP.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Death of J. W. Donaldson.

On May 5th last, at his home in Fairfield, Solom County, there died from phthisis, a man and sportsman of fair repute and wide acquaintance. Mr. J. W. Donaldson was born at London, Va., in 1824, but when young was taken to Ohio and apprenticed to a machinist. In 1855 he came to California and farmed for two years, returning in '57, and bringing his family to Fairfield in 1858, where he has since remained doing a general trading business, a part of which was dealing in fire arms, in the use of which he was very expert. In earlier days when Sacramento, Solano and Napa Counties abounded in game of all sorts from elk to snipe, Mr. Donaldson devoted a large portion of his time to shooting, and his mind was a full store-house of interesting reminiscences of the sport and sportsmen of those days. In all relations Mr. Donaldson bore himself with dignity and had the respect of all who knew him. He left a family of three sons, all fine shots and energetic young men.

A New Field Trial Venture.

The California Kennel Bench Show and Field Trial Club announces its first field trial for September next. Four tickets are to be allotted to each member of the club, and only a certain number of invited participants will be present. Mr. George Flournoy, Jr., has been elected President of the Club, and a number of additions made to the roll. The place chosen for trial purposes has not been announced, nor has any statement been made as to what stakes will be run, nor under what rules. Many good setters and pointers are owned in the club, and it is a gratifying indication of the progressive spirit of the members that they are going in for field trials. While not invariably conclusive as to the absolute merit of the dogs which run, they are yet the best test of excellence in vogue.

California Wing Shooting Club.

Several notable peculiarities characterized the meeting of the club at San Bruno on Sunday last. The birds, always quick at that place, were abnormally so on the last occasion, most of them being darting tailers and low birds which Mr. Crittenden Robinson has often said were by far the hardest to score on. A brisk wind toward the traps from the score did not help the shooters any. Another item of interest was the superb shooting done by Messrs. Osborne and Meilly. Mr. Osborne has shot but two years, and when he began was not at all handy with his gun, but each meeting has seen him in better form, and his recent scores entitle him to rank with the best. His luck was of the worst, especially with the bird scored against him. He had cut a bird down, and the gun snapped when he attempted to use the second barrel. When given another bird he got a strong old one which got out of bounds, although hard hit.

Mr. Meilly really killed all of the birds trapped for him, but his fourth died out of bounds. Meilly was extraordinarily quick with his first herrel throughout the meeting. He also is a comparatively new man at the traps, but is so enthusiastic, and practices so much, that he has immediately stepped into a position usually reached only after long series of disappointments.

Dr. Knowles' score of five is laughable, the worst by far that he has ever made, and to be accounted for only on the supposition that he was entirely out of condition. It is true he had a very hard lot of birds, but he is used to such, and has repeatedly scored tens and elevens on them when in a shooting mood. Willie De Vaul is also able to average more nearly twice five than five. He uses a 26-inch Parker, and is very sharp with it, but when his birds get well away he needs a little closer pattern to stop them.

ATHLETICS.

The Stombs' Testimonial.

The testimonial entertainment proffered by the Olympic Club on Friday evening of last week, to the widow of its recently deceased Assistant Secretary R. T. Stombs, was largely attended and netted about one thousand dollars.

The Grand Opera House was not crowded, but was comfortably filled. A gratifying feature of the evening was the presence of several distinguished athletes, not members of the club, who volunteered their services. Among them Mr. Jackson, an Australian boxer of great celebrity, and Mr. J. L. Herget, whose achievements under the title "Young Mitchell" have gained for him the utmost consideration.

President Harrison and Leader Hammersmith, upon whom much of the labor of preparing the entertainment rested, cannot be too highly complimented both for its interesting character and for the promptness with which successive numbers were gone through. The athletes were at their best, and a more brilliant exhibition has not been given in San Francisco.

The first number was on the pyramid ladders by Messrs. George A. Dull, center man; Master Eddie Stack, top man, and Messrs. John Hammersmith, J. G. Mansfield, Jas. Stack, R. C. Jones, A. Elouart, Jr., J. H. Stack and W. Henry. Next was club swinging by Professor Smythe and H. M. Vaughn, two of a trio of which the late Mr. Stombs was a graceful third.

Gladiatorial groupings by Professor Smythe, J. G. Mansfield, Ben Bogner and R. Leandro were very striking.

Then came superb exhibitions of wrestling in Greco-Roman by Director J. B. Tibbatts and E. A. Kolb, and in catch-as-catch-can by Professor Fankner and B. F. Currier. The wrestlers were loudly applauded, especially the collar-and-elbow work by Professor Corbett and W. H. Quinn, both tall and very muscular.

As number six, Leader J. A. Hammersmith did several of the representations of antique statues, which he had done before with great success.

Some very lively boxing by Professor Corbett and W. J. Kenealey; "Young Mitchell" and J. W. Geogan followed and was voted a very clever exhibition.

A horizontal bar performance by R. Leandro and Ben Bogner, and some pedestal club swinging by Cal. Godefrey were very neatly given.

Fencing by Gordon Blanding, M. J. Flavin, Chas. Johnson, E. Ends and Professor Tronchet was a brilliant number, the gentlemen showing the effectiveness of Tronchet's system of instruction.

As a final, two boxing bouts by Messrs. S. Beckett and M. Smith, Mr. Jackson and Assistant W. Dick drew forth much applause. The method of Mr. Jackson is very fine, and although his opponent is good at the sport, Jackson quite outclassed him.

N. Y. A. C. New Quarters.

A special train-load of 350 of the more prominent members of the New York Athletic Club visited Travis Island on June 23d, and informally opened the new out-door head-quarters of the club. A large tract of land has been purchased by the club which affords ample room for all desirable improvements. The new grounds are finely situated, overlooking Long Island Sound. The club house, for which ground was broken during last week, will be built upon a knoll commanding a view of Glen Island and New Rochelle. The track is now being constructed and will be a third of a mile in circumference. The boating facilities are most excellent. An establishment which will be the largest affair of its kind in this country is now partly finished, and is situated upon the north side of the island. Yachting, lawn tennis, baseball and every variety of field and aquatic sport will be the features catered to.

After a thorough inspection of the premises a collation was served to the visitors.

Attention is called to the advertisement extending the time in which plans for the new Olympic Club building may be presented.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Visit.

Mr. A. B. Truman's pointer Patti Croxteth to owners, Rush T., on June 1, 1888.

Prefix Claimed.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I beg to advise you that Mr. Jas. W. Dunlop, Utica, N. Y., has filed his application for the sole use of the prefix "Wentworth."

Objections, if any, may be forwarded to me at any time within two weeks.

Yours truly,

A. P. VREDENBURGH, Sec. A. K. C.

NEW YORK, June 22, 1888.

Sales.

Mr. A. B. Truman, Elcho Kennels, has sold to Mr. Sam'l Davis, San Francisco, an Irish red setter dog, whelped January 5, 1888, by Mike T.—Lady Elcho T.

To Mr. L. C. Reyburn, San Francisco, a litter brother to preceding.

To Mr. Jos. King, San Francisco, an Irish red setter dog, whelped August, 1886, by Pat O'More—Lena.

Name Claimed.

Mr. A. B. Truman, Elcho Kennels, claims the name Swipe for solid white fox-terrier bitch, whelped May 1, 1888, by Drumm's Young Jerry—Trnman's Fanny, imported.

Presentation.

Mr. H. A. Bassford, Vacaville, has received from Mr. J. Martin Barney, Dutch Flat, a pointer dog, lemon and white, by Tom Pinch—Galatea, whelped April 4, 1888.

From Mr. Jas. Watson.

Mr. Jas. Watson, judge of the non-sporting classes at the Pacific Kennel Club Show, writes us under date of June 19th a very pleasant note from which we venture to make excerpts of general interest. He says: "After I left you I had a lovely trip to the Yosemite, and got to Salt Lake City the following Sunday, where John Davidson joined me that night and we journeyed via the D. & R. G. R. R. to Pueblo. His ticket took him via Kansas City, and mine was by way of Omaha, so we split at Pueblo. I reached Manitou the same evening, was up early and all over the place before noon, reached Denver at 3 o'clock, saw all I needed to there before dark, and left at 9 o'clock. Never stopped after that, and had just an hour to see John H. Naylor at Chicago. Got letters at P. O. and change depots. Did it successfully and reached Philadelphia on Saturday night, just 14 days after leaving San Francisco, mighty glad to see the wife and little one again as you may believe." About the recently organized National Dog Club, Mr. Watson says: "It is a club of individuals to be elected by the committee of fifteen appointed to take charge of getting it up. The committee of fifteen is a rotary one, five members retiring each year, and their successors being elected for three years. The committee elects the President, Vice-President and a Secretary-Treasurer, and has charge of everything. The committee men are elected by a mail vote of all members, the vote being declared at the annual meeting which is held during the spring show season, but the new committee will not take office until June 1st or May 1st of '89, the idea being to let the committee which maps out the programme for the season carry it out. The rules for dog-shows are practically the same as those put in shape for the American Kennel Club, minus the registration business. They are intended for the use of shows not held under A. K. C. rules, and as a good many are small shows five firsts are necessary to entitle to place in a champion class. The Buffalo show at which $2,000 in cash prizes will be given will be held under the National Dog Club rules. I hear Colonel Taylor is coming East on a visit, and hope he will get as far as Philadelphia before he goes back."

Mr. Watson was largely instrumental in bringing about the catch-as-catch-can wrestling match between James Faulkner and Joe Acton, which is listed for July 31st at the Olympic Club, and with reference to that match he writes: "I wish I could be with you at the wrestling match, as I expect it to be one of the best of the kind ever seen. Have not seen Acton for some time, but will be sure to meet him next Monday, and will drop you a line. He and Arthur Chambers will leave here right after July 4th."

"Remember me to all enquirers, and particularly to Messrs. Watson and Schreiber. I hope the latter will have the best of luck with his new pointers and with the puppies."

National Dog Club.

The temporary officers of the National Dog Club are: President, Dr. J. F. Perry, Boston. Vice-Presidents, Miss Anna H. Whitney, Lancaster, Mass.; W. S. Jackson, Toronto, Ont.; E. S. Porter, New Haven, Conn., and Dr. C. E. Nichols, Troy, N. Y. Secretary and Treasurer, H. W. Huntington, Brooklyn, N. Y. Executive Committee, Dr. M. H. Cryer, Philadelphia, Pa.; John Davidson, Monroe, Mich.; Jean Grosvenor, Lynn, Mass.; Mitchell Harrison, Philadelphia, Pa.; H. W. Huntington, Brooklyn, N. Y.; S. R. Hemingway, New Haven, Conn.; K. E. Hopf, Arlington, N. J.; J. E. Kirk, Toronto, Ont.; A. C. Krueger, Pittsburgh, Pa.; E. Lever, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. H. Moore, Melrose, Mass.; J. H. Naylor, Chicago, Ills.; Dr. J. F. Perry, Boston; Frank Windholz, New York. There are 137 names on the membership roll, including gentlemen from eighteen states, and twelve from Canada.

Dogs for California.

Judge C. J. Pesball, of Jersey City, N. J., owner of Jimmie, Nick of Nasc, and other notable pointers, and one of the pleasantest of raconteurs, takes up the cudgels in behalf of California as follows:

I find the following in English Stock-Keeper of June 8th: "Could any reader of the Stock-Keeper give an old subscriber information as to what dogs are most general in California or the neighborhood of San Francisco; if dog shows are held there, and if small dogs, as toy spaniels, are esteemed and thrive there; also what breed of large dogs would be best to take out?"

"MIDDLESEX."

There are none of the breed most general in California. Some years ago an Englishman from Wales attempted to take a pair to San Francisco, but they dropped their h's on the way, and their bones are now bleaching with those of lost and gone buffalo.

Toy spaniels would do well in and about the neighborhood of San Francisco; in fact, in the Chinese quarter of the city toy spaniels would be fairly, yes, fully appreciated—that is, provided the toy was tender and the spaniel fat. Yes, by all means, Rex, take out some toy spaniels. They will be esteemed.

In large breeds that is the Californian's best hold. There they do everything on a large scale. If the grocer, for instance, wants to sell a pound of butter and give that amount to a customer, he weighs it on a Fairbank's scale that would weigh coal by the ton. There is nothing small in California, and won't be until Rex arrives with the toy spaniels.

If Rex can only succeed in getting into California with a sure enough large dog, he will surely be appreciated and greatly admired.

Why, these native Californians, the descendants of the forty-niner, immediately upon your arrival, would form a ring around Rex and his large dog, and wonder and admiringly gaze for hours upon the contrast.

Some years since a Swiss gentleman undertook the very difficult feat of taking a St. Bernard of the purest strain to California, but the dog got his dewclaws fastened in the rock on the top of the Rocky Mountains, and his owner had to saw one of the dewclaws off. They had neglected to properly secure the dog, and the result was that before they could saw off the other claw, that the dog, in his struggles to free himself, pushed the mountain over; and, while the gentleman from Switzerland and his dog at one time were on the very top of the Rocky Mountains, they are now at the bottom, and the contrast of the situation is now wondered at, even to this day, by Californians. There are no dogs in California now. They cannot live there. The State is the great gold-field. Large nuggets or obelisks of gold are seen dotted all over the State, and for centuries the winds have been blowing flakes of gold off these obelisks. Now flakes of gold become fastened to meat and other food that the dogs eat, and this gold accumulates in the dog's stomach, and as the acid in the stomach has no effect on the gold it won't digest. The dog not being accustomed to such rich food soon dies. Why, thousands of dollars worth of gold has been taken out of dogs' stomachs. I trust Rex will let me know when he arrives.

Rearing of Puppies.

A subject within scope of a kennel department as yet by no means exhausted, is that entitling the present article. Each year brings scores of new breeders and hundreds of recent fanciers into public recognition to whom the many problems in connection with breeding and rearing are as puzzling as to their predecessors. There seem to be several distinct theories of rearing. Breeding principles are well established and clearly stated, but in the care of young dogs practices differ widely. Recently a professional dog trainer in whose hands many puppies have grown to hearty maturity was asked the secret of his success. He replied, "Let 'em alone. The dam knows what is best for them until they are old enough to eat meat. When that time comes give the bitch plenty of meat in large lumps and she will feed the puppies." Another very successful hand at puppy-raising advises their weaning at six weeks old, and then a course of milk and oatmeal, with an occasional meal of meat. Still another, and perhaps better authority, in reply to queries, enters somewhat in extenso upon the matter, and writes so instructively that his words may well be preserved and kept at hand by every breeder. He says:

If either sire or dam should not be in a perfect state of health, how can we expect their progeny to be strong and robust? Just as we expect to breed winners from two champions, so may we expect to get weedy, sickly youngsters from unhealthy parents. On the return of a bitch from a strange kennel it is advisable to give her a good feed of warm, tempting food, and a few hours afterwards to wash her thoroughly, and with the exception of seeing she has plenty of food, and exercise, no alteration need take place in her daily routine up to the sixth week after service. About ten days or a fortnight after she returns from the dog, I think it advisable to give her a worm powder. Either one of the many compounds advertised in the papers, or three grains of santonine, half an ordinary area nut (freshly grated) and two grains of jalap, mixed with a little butte, and after this a dose of castor oil. Should she have no worms the medicine will do no harm, and the oil will be cooling to the blood. About the seventh week she begins to rapidly increase in size. It is then advisable to prevent too violent exercise; but she should be taken out as much as possible. Her food should be regulated by her condition. Should she be a gross feeder her meals should be limited; but if a dainty feeder, she should get as much as she will eat to make her strong enough to bear the strain of whelping, and to nourish the pups. A few days before she is due, her food should be of a more sloppy nature, but still nourishing. If she has been kennelled with others during pregnancy, it is as well to separate her a week or so before her time is up.

In choosing a place for her, I prefer the sleeping place to be not too large. A good-sized box—providing it is easy to get at the bitch if necessary—is as good, and on the bottom may be nailed a piece of sacking. Many people give too large a bed, and the consequence is that one or more of the first-born whelps get away from the bitch, become cold, whine and make the bitch very uneasy. If the bitch is healthy and has had plenty of exercise, no assistance will be required during whelping, as a rule, but it is advisable to offer a little warm milk, thickened slightly with fine oatmeal, and in which a small piece of butter has been melted. It helps to strengthen the bitch and is generally readily eaten. After all the puppies are born the less interference with her or them the better for the next few hours. A good basin of gruel twice or thrice a day is all that is necessary for the first two days. After this meat biscuits soaked or boiled in gravy or milk makes a capital feed, and in a week or more the old system of feeding may be returned to, providing the bitch gets plenty and it is good. The number of pups left on the dam depends very much upon her size and constitution. If she is a strong lusty bitch with plenty of milk I should never hesitate to leave six upon her, though with a weaker bitch three or four may be quite enough. It is not during the first fortnight that she feels the strain, but after that she may become so weak that she will have fits. It is as well to teach the pups to lap at about three weeks old, and this will very much help to relieve the dam. It often happens that one or two pups in a litter are smaller than the others, they seem weak and unable to stand against the others, and make little or no progress. If of little value it would be best to destroy such at once, but if the owner desires to keep them the stronger ones should be taken out of the nest after the bitch has been out for a run, and these weaker ones will then have a better chance to get a good feed. They may also be assisted by dropping a very little cod liver oil on to the tongue twice or three times a day. The bedding should be changed frequently, and the place must on no accounts be kept too warm, as this is likely to cause scouring. In such a case thicken a little milk with chalk, dip the finger in the compound and let the pup lick or suck it off. Medicine should not at such an early age be given to the pups, but if they need anything it is better to wait if possible, giving the dam a dose of oil. I would here like to mention a matter that may be of interest to the beginner, though it is not the rearing of pups. Sometimes one of the teats of the bitch becomes hard and useless. It should be bathed frequently in warm water and then well rubbed with camphorated oil. If all the puppies die give a dose of castor oil daily, very little liquid food, and rub the teats well with the above, or this liniment: Iodide of potassium two drs., oil of camphor and soap liniment of each two drs.

In feeding young puppies I think it very advisable not to give anything of a solid nature, such as boiled biscuits, meats, etc.; these things are far too difficult of digestion for young tender animals. Every breeder has noticed that at an early age the dam seems to object altogether to the pups being fed, and frequently resorts to tricks, such as overturning the dish or covering up the food, if she herself does not clear it up. Gruel, made of fine oatmeal and milk, sweetened a little with sugar, gravy or broth, from sheep's head; bread soaked in either of the above liquids forms a good food for the youngsters, and is easily digested. Some persons have a great horror of milk for puppies; they consider that cow's milk causes worms. In this I scarcely agree; but at the same time I think that cow's milk, undiluted, is too rich and strong for them, and should always be boiled and given with a little water. At about five or six weeks old, or earlier, the bitch will begin to remain away from the pups a longer time, and will evince a desire to prevent them getting to her. Their teeth will have begun to grow, and these and their claws will frequently make her teats sore, and she becomes snappish and ill-tempered with them; she should be gradually withdrawn from them, and eventually only be allowed with them in the night. This brings us to the important change in a puppy's life—weaning time. Up till now they have been drawing a considerable portion of their nourishment from their dam, and are, or should be, round, fat and plump. Directly they are taken from their parent, a change for the worse is very apparent in their general condition, they "go off," though their owner may have studied every plan to make them happy, contented and comfortable. At this age I have always found it a good plan to give all the litter a dose of worms. One of the many worm pills or powders advertised in the papers may be used, or the following: a grain and a half or two grains of santonine, and about as much jalap, mixed into a bolus with butter. Whatever is given should be administered after fasting; early in the morning is the best time, after having omitted the last meal the night before. Half an hour after having given the powder, give a little warm milk and water, in which a little fat has been melted. If thought desirable, a small quantity of linseed oil might be given the night before the powder. A short time after the milk has been devoured, let all the pups outside their kennel for a run, and if they have worms, it is like putting a vicious hard-biting terrier into a fox earth, out they must come, and from this time, with judicious attention, the youngsters begin to improve rapidly. Their food from this should be as varied as possible, ordinary meat, biscuits broken finely and boiled in milk or gravy, may serve as a staple food; oatmeal porridge, bread soaked (not boiled) in gravy or milk; a little meat finely minced, and some vegetables, are also excellent feeding stuffs.

I think very many pups owe their death to getting too much food at a time, little and often should be the principle; half a dozen times a day is not too often to feed them. They should never be allowed to eat until their stomachs are distended like blown-out toads; such feeding is sure to cause indigestion and a total disarrangement of the digestive organs. Their bedding should not be allowed to become foul and wet, but should be frequently changed. One thing I would like to mention about their food, never prepare too much at a time; sufficient for one day is quite enough; if kept longer, especially in hot weather, fermentation begins, and sour food is sure to be there. This causes diarrhoea and colic, upsets the stomach, and is the death of many a fine puppy which the owner has already looked forward to bringing home cups and honors.

A capital liquor for boiling biscuits, etc., in may be made by obtaining trimmings from bullock's heads and noses, small pieces of gristle and a portion of bullock's milt. These should be boiled altogether for several hours in plenty of water, strain, and place the liquor in a glazed earthenware vessel, it will form a thick jelly, may be cut with a knife and used as required. Regularity and cleanliness are two of the most important aids to success. Fresh water should always be accessible, and in a vessel that cannot be easily turned over; it is always best to prevent very young puppies from getting wet. As they get older, large bones, or pieces of dry biscuit, should be given them to gnaw; it helps them with their teeth. A good-sized wooden ball put in their run will afford them amusement and exercise.

The New Volume.

Six years is not a long time in the history of a paper which dates from early in the century, it is an important period when the mark is made from the initial number. With class papers, especially, it is a trying time; with journals which are "devoted to horse interests" there is an up grade to overcome, a handicap which may be termed a "crushing impost" from the start. Of all kinds of interest the horse is the most sensitive. Ownership is touchy. There is an intensity of feeling awakened which does not prevail with any other kind of property. Affection tending to jealousy. Sensitiveness which magnifies trivial objects into huge bugbears, conjures phantoms, discovers slights which were never meant, and goes so far as to consider praise of others a downright lowering of those they are bound to by chains which are so short as to confine them to a narrow circle. But this feeling is becoming weaker, and though there may be a few who are still intolerant, the great majority of California horse owners are of different temperament. There is a disposition to award credit to excellence wherever discovered, and were this disposition still more prevalent there would be fewer heartburnings and jealousies.

That California is destined to become a great horse-breeding country is now placed beyond a doubt. Those who are still tinged with unbelief can scarcely remain so if they will recall what has been done in the last ten years. The short time which measures our residence in this State, has brought about an advance which is startling. Fourteen years ago there was a general impression that home productions were inferior, and that home horses were a long way behind those which were far off. This was advantageous in one way. It was the means of introducing needed strains of blood and with these came progress. We were convinced from the outset of our acquaintance with California that granted equality in parents no country could excel the produce. It was then thought such expressions were a mark of too sanguine expectations. Now there is nearly a universal admission of the soundness of these views. Theoretical perhaps, then, now established. Our horses have journeyed "back home" and compelled acknowledgements. Volante, Emperor of Norfolk and others have upheld the fame of the Occident on the turf, Hinda Rose, Manzanita, Palo Alto and many more have won battle after battle on the tracks. With all the glorious results of the past, the future promises to be still more brilliant. Our own folks are extending their horse breeding operations, there are accessions from distant parts. By the close of this century there is nearly a certainty that "California-bred" will be an accredited stamp of value wherever fast horses are encouraged, and that there will be a full share of first class animals from this side.

We feel that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has been instrumental in bringing about the result and placing that result in a light that has been beneficial to the horse interests of the state. We have also a good deal of faith that the labor and outlay of the past six years will not be thrown away and that the weight it has carried in the handicap of the past will be hauled with ease hereafter.

The only promise offered is that there will be increased effort to do all in our power to advance the interests we have so much at heart. The horse is of paramount importance, and we think that so large a proportion of our readers as to be practically the whole, regard that department as overshadowing all others. Even those who are interested in general outdoor sports, devotees of the gun, rod and gymnasium inform us that they will be well satisfied to see these departments shortened so long as the horse world secures more space. Hereafter the columns under the various headings characteristic of field sports will be restricted to Pacific Coast doings with occasional brief summaries of the most important events of the East.

"This Coast" may be truthfully named the "Paradise for Sportsman," and though that is so trite a saying as to lose its significance, it is beyond question to state that for variety of "fur, fin and feather" it is unequalled. For all that there are comparatively few who are sufficiently interested in the exciting allurements of "flood and field" to grant support equivalent to the outlay and and hence the necessity for curtailment when the space is imperatively demanded for other matter.

Rancho Del Paso Sale.

The telegraphic account of the auction sale was so full of errors that the description is copied from the N. Y. World. It was the greatest sale which has ever been held in this or any other country, the best feature being the good prices brought outside of the sensational figure which King Thomas reached. The immense sum paid for the brother to Ban Fox and King Fox is not justified on the grounds that exceedingly rich prizes are won. Could there be an absolute certainty of foretelling the future of a yearling, such a price as $38,000 might be justified, and even then there are so many uncertainties that the hazard would outweigh the prospective remuneration.

Grant that belonging to a winning family, is the best datum upon which to build expectations, there are so many contingencies to overturn these calculations, that the careful operator would hesitate long before accepting an answer prompted by the rosiest kind of optimistic visions. That sale has little effect on the hereafter of breeding thoroughbreds, but the prices brought by the balance of the offerings is a good foundation, an underpinning which will be safe to rear a superstructure upon. The get of Sir Modred brought the highest figure ever reached by an untried sire when the number sold and the average is given proper consideration. This was in the main owing to the form and size of the colts offered. There was breeding and performance on his part, breeding and in many instances performance on the part of the dams. These latter mentioned qualifications have been met before, but without corresponding results. When to these however, were associated racing form, soundness, health and size, there were combinations of qualities which drew the attention of the most acute men in the business of racing. Excitement may send one animal far beyond what cool reflection would warrant, but when several are sold, and these to different parties, there is no such glamour to warp the judgment. When we wrote the description of the Rancho del Paso yearlings there was a feeling of reluctance to place our views in print. There would have been a greater degree of hesitancy had it been the intention to hold the sale in California, and the only fear was that the long journey might make such changes as to invalidate the truthfulness of the portrayal. This was the sole dread. We have a good deal of confidence in our estimate of form, and have seen enough to warrant a fair share of faith in that estimate. Therefore there was no trepidation in putting it on record, provided the animals could be seen in the same plight as they were at the time of our brief visit.

It may be proper to explain the statement that the sale in California would have induced more cautious limning. Had it been here there might have been the charge that favoritism had influenced the judgment, as there would have been few visitors here in comparison to the throngs who saw them en route and after their arrival in New York.

California is the only section of the United States where it can be expected to rear a band of seventy colts to the size and vigor of the delegation from Del Paso. Size might be obtained by warm stables and high feeding, but the winter gallops of the weanlings would be lacking. This was what gave the configuration of the racehorse to colts fifteen months old, and with that size and unscarred development. There are two old sayings which it will be well to keep in remembrance. These are, "an ounce of breeding is worth a pound of bone," "Blood is blood, form is superiority." At first sight they appear antagonistical, and yet they can be reconciled. The first impresses the necessity of blood, breeding, high-breed, or whatever an untainted genealogy may be termed; the other demonstrates that all other things being equal, form will decide the relative value. Breeding is dependent on ancestry, form is only partially due to progenitors. Shape may be influenced while the germ is in utero, it is positively susceptible of modulation in the first stages of growth. The natural conditions here are favorable for bringing the progeny to greater perfection than existed in the parents, and an intelligent use of these natural advantages results in decided improvement. This is what brought the average of eight of the get of Sir Modred to $2,137.50 and will insure success hereafter.

The Fairs—Sonoma and Marin.

Taking the exhibitions in the order in which they will come off and next week after Santa Rosa, Petaluma and Chico will hold their meetings. These are so far apart that there will be the slightest if any clashing from the similarity of dates.

Petaluma can be ranked as one of the great fairs of the year, and whether as a show of live stock, grains, fruits, etc., it will bear comparison with the best. Fortunately to all who are interested is the holding of two fairs in one county, and that in two consecutive weeks. It may be thought that were the two combined the advantages would be greater, though we are of the opinion that it is better as they are. It is somewhat doubtful if there would be much of an increase in the attendance were a combination agreed upon, and it is certain that a majority of horse owners would rather take part in two meetings than one, when the places are so near together as Santa Rosa and Petaluma, and the days fixed for the various classes so that horses can trot in both places without bringing the races too close together.

Thus on Tuesday, Aug. 14th, the three-minute class is trotted at Santa Rosa; on the following Tuesday the same class is billed for Petaluma. The 2:20 classes are arranged in the same way, a week apart. On the third day of the fairs a 2:23 at Santa Rosa, and on the fourth a 2:25 at Petaluma. The fourth day of each there is a 2:40 at Santa Rosa, three minutes at Petaluma, and the closing day brings the free-for-all at both places with a 2:25 additional at Santa Rosa and three minute at Petaluma. Practically the 2:23 and 2:25 are so nearly alike that the entries will be similar. A few California horses are eligible for the faster which cannot get in to the other, but as there are five clear days between the two in either case there is space enough. The programmes are admirably arranged in this respect, and for that matter, in all others. The purses at Petaluma are liberal, $700 given the 2:30 horses, all the others mentioned are $1,000 each. There is a pacing race for the 2:24 class, Belmont Boy and Patchen Vernon barred, several colt stakes, district classes and a running race for each day. Something has been said in "General Topics" about the three-year-old stake, though all of the colt stakes are more than likely to prove good races. Beside the stallions named in the three-year-old, the great gelding Grandee is named. Should he fulfill the promise of his two-year-old form it will be a smart colt, indeed, which will take his measure, but there are awfully smart ones which will be troublesome to say the least. The two-year-old stake is a stunner. At the head of the nominations is Palo Alto Belle, one of the Beautiful Belle celebrities. Sunol comes next, and it is needless to say that if she is selected to do battle for Palo Alto, expectations will run high. There are three more from Palo Alto, and then comes the Kentucky-bred filly Fortuna, the first from that great race-horse-region to be named in a California colt stake. Then a Sydney who is no sluggard, and a Mambrino Chief Jr., and an Electioneer belonging to Mr. Wilfred Page, and next a Sister to Sable Wilkes, which report rates very high. San Mateo Stock Farm has a Le Grand as an alternate to Jet Wilkes, and Director has a filly from a May Day mare. The four-year-old in numbers falls short of the two and three-year-olds with some good racers, however, and the yearling open and district, give promise of not being devoid of interest. That the purses will be well filled is beyond question. It may be that we are prone to expect too much, but if there are not double the number of entries ever received before at Petaluma, we will be greatly disappointed.

The purses are extremely liberal, the track is so good that chronic grumblers cannot find fault on that score, and the managers are as efficient and popular as those of any association in the State. Then it is so handy to reach, and one of the pleasantest to visit, and thus the list of attractions could be multiplied until all of the conditions to induce entries and a large attendance when the fair is held were presented.

Trotting Broodmares.

A very interesting article is that copied from the N. Y. Sportsman, though a few errors somewhat mar the harmony of the whole. Minuehaha is set down as having given birth to Beautiful Bells when six years old, whereas she was only four. She has produced fourteen living foals, though one of them died at three months old and two were crippled. Fertility appears to be an inheritance of her daughters, Beautiful Bells not having "missed" a single year since she was first put in the stud, nine foals in all.

Columbine is also worthy of more credit than being placed in the six-year-old list. She is the only mare which has two entire sons which have beaten 2:20, and these her first and second, Auteco foaled in 1879, Antevolo in 1881. She was not bred the year Auteco was foaled.

The Chico Fairs.

While one division of horses are battling at Petaluma, another will be busily engaged at Chico. So far apart are these places that one will scarcely interfere with the other, the southern and a portion of the centrals entering the lists at Petaluma, the steeds of the north and northern central meeting at the lively town on the upper Sacramento. The district is a large one, or rather in the races which are not "open to the State," sixteen counties are named.

The open races are arranged on a liberal scale. Thursday, August 23d, the 2:23 class, purse $750; and a free-for-all pacing, with $500 hung up. Friday there is the 2:27 class, purse $600; and 2:33 with $400 to fight for. Saturday there is a purse of $1,000, free for all, so that there is a good deal of money as well as honor to reward the victors in the northern campaign. The district purses are also liberal. A purse of $200 for two-year-olds, $300 three-minute class, $300 for three-year-olds, $400 2:40 class, and $400 for four-year-olds and under. Making the faster races open was a wise move on the part of the managers, and ensures liberal entries in the most attractive races.

It is several years since we had the pleasure of visiting Chico, though the remembrance is as vivid as if only a few months had elapsed. A grand country surrounding it, and people worthy of the advantages which Nature has granted. It would require a vivid imagination to picture a richer country than that which encircles the busy town, and a great deal of beauty as well. Rare, indeed, when there is even a partial failure of crops, and crops which include about everything grown in California. The grandest display of fruits; "corn, wine and oil" in abundance, and with folks who seem to do their utmost to impress upon visitors that it was their own fault if they did not find "nourishment, refreshment and joy" while sojourning amongst them.

As has been stated before, there are so many horses now in training in California that a division can be made and still leave large fields in different places at the same time. This can be done to the advantage of all concerned. Some of the largest stables could be divided with decided profit. A part could make the northern tour while the others took in the places nearer home.

There are some cases where there are more than one horse in the same class, and separation would give both a chance. There are plenty of drivers to carry out the scheme. We know of several which can be engaged to take charge of extras, and there is time enough between now and the closing of entries to make all necessary arrangements. There will be another advantage. Suppose one owner or one trainer has two horses in the same class, one can be named in the north country fairs, the other in those which are held in this vicinity, all of them centering at the State Fair. From that point some could go to Reno and Carson, some to Stockton, and wherever there was a duplication of meetings both could be served. In this way there will be a double benefit, and we cannot see any reason for the plan not being successful.

The Grand Fourth.

While worrying over the constant fusillade of fire crackers and bombs which put a stop to driving during the day, the whizzing rockets, Roman candles, etc., which threatened conflagration at night, there came reflections which did away with the feeling of annoyance at the disturbances incidental to the date.

Fifth years ago the boys had to be contented with pyrotechnics on a far smaller scale. Old muskets, horse pistols, anvils, with occasional six-pounders at the county seats were the noise-making implements, bonfires and fire-halls the illuminating aids. The whole country gathered at the centers to take part in the celebration, and that part of the parade which drew the most attention, and by far the most highly honored were the veterans of the revolution. At that time the country in which we were "raised" had quite a delegation of old soldiers who fought in the war, which has made the greatest change in the recent history of the world, and these were augmented by a larger number of participants in the "Last War." There were grand times in those years long bygone, and though the old "Fourths" would cut a small figure if reproduced and placed in juxtaposition with present celebrations, the fun, spirit and jollity could not be surpassed.

The crackers and bombs were readily avoided by keeping the horses in their stalls, but when night came and rockets were going up on all sides with showers of falling sparks the tribulation was not easily overcome. There are several vacant lots which we use to keep mares and colts in, and there is plenty of litter which, if once ignited, would be difficult to extinguish. By low twelve, however, there was a general cessation in our part of Oakland, another grand Fourth placed on record, and we trust with as few casualties as may be, complete immunity is impossible.

We practice leaving halters, or rather the headstalls of halters, on all the horses and colts which are kept in box stalls. Should there be fire there is no necessity for wasting time looking for halter or bridle, and without hurry or flutter the animals could be led from their stalls. Convenient at all times, in case of fire an absolute necessity.

Barrenness in Broodmares.

One of the greatest trials in breeding is the prevalence of barrenness in mares. Thoroughbred mares and those in the main trotting studs are kept entirely for procreation, and the loss of a year even is a serious inroad upon the profits. Quite a number miss year after year, and a few cannot be fertilized. A few days ago Dr. M. E. Knowles, of Terre Haute, Indiana, paid us a visit, bringing letters from breeders in the East, and also from Mr. Valensin, who had employed him to treat some of the mares on his (Mr. G's) place that could not be got in foal. Our first impression was decidedly against taking time to listen to an explanation, thinking that it was merely another phase of the empiricism which is so prevalent in this department of horse affairs. But a short conversation did away with the unfavorable estimate, and further explanations showed a basis of sound logic. Unfortunately the breeding season has practically ended, otherwise we think that Dr. Knowles would do a good business.

Another in the List.

Palo Alto's Azmoor won the free-for-all at Petaluma on the Fourth, the fastest heat being 2:24½. His previous record was 2:30½, made when a four-year-old, two years ago. Azmoor is by Electioneer, which brings another into the "list," and his dam was Mamie C., by imported Hercules; second dam by Langford; third dam by Uncle Fowler, and the fourth claimed to be thoroughbred, though her pedigree was lost. The dam of Azmoor is practically thoroughbred, and this makes the seventh by Electioneer out of royal dams, to score a mark below 2:30, four better than 2:25, three of them stallions. As the other six are from mares "strictly thoroughbred," the uncertainty regarding the blood of Azmoor's fourth dam does not cut a prominent figure. Electioneer has won the first place among living sires in the 2:30 list, and outranks both living and dead, when the standard is 2:20 or better.

Forest Home.

Our correspondent "H. L." presents a pleasing picture of the home of the pioneer shorthorn breeder of California. Colonel Younger has done so much for the cattle interests of the Pacific Coast, that it can truthfully be said that his exertions have been of greater service than all his contemporaries in that line. No wonder that the Colonel shows that his four score years, lacking one, are horn so gallantly. Plenty of outdoor exercise, a consciousness that his labors have not been barren, and above all a spirit which is never dampened. Activity, nerve and the other characteristics which Col. Younger possesses, joined to the climate and beauties of the Santa Clara Valley should bring him through a whole century. We sincerely hope that he may live that long with the full enjoyment of all of his faculties.

The Fairs of California.

Further proof that California excels any other State in the Union in the way of autumnal fairs than our advertising columns afford is an unnecessary piling up of testimony. From Chico to San Diego and from Reno to Carson on the east, the western boundary marked by the Pacific Ocean, there is a constant succession, beginning the second week in August and holding until November is reached. Following the plan heretofore adopted, specific attention will be given them from week to week until the whole series is gone through with. Salient points in each of the programmes will give opportunity for each to be discussed without tiresome repetitions. If owners and trainers respond in a kindred spirit to that shown by the managers, A. D. 1888, will be a brilliant epoch in Pacific Coast exhibitions.

W. H. Taylor, San Luis Obispo.

In your answers to correspondents through the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of April 21, 1888, you answer Geo. Woods, San Luis Obispo: Please state if Altoona is standard bred? Answer—Yes. I am well aware you would not answer a correspondent incorrectly intentionally, but the fact is Altoona is not standard bred, having only become standard last year by the performance of two of his get, Allo, 2:25½, and Flora G., 2:29½. None of Altoona's brothers or sisters are standard bred or acquired standard. See Withers' Fairlawn Catalogue. Please do me the favor to correct your answer to Mr. Woods through the columns of your valuable paper.

Answer—You are correct. Altoona is not standard bred, but is now standard by performance of his produce. The answer was given under a misunderstanding of the question.

Kate Leslie—We are in receipt of several inquiries concerning this mare. She was the dam of the stallion California Dexter. Can anyone give us her pedigree or history, or any clue to either?

D. J. Murphy, San Jose, Cal.

Can you inform me through the columns of your valuable paper: 1.—The breeding of Vibbert's Stockbridge Chief, that stood in San Jose for service. 2.—The breeding of State of Maine, a horse that stood in Santa Clara about the same time. 3.—The breeding of Capt. Hamer's horse sometimes called Santa Clara Abdallah, and their performances, if they had any?

Answer—1. Stockbridge Chief, dapple grey horse foaled 1853. He was by Stockbridge Chief, son of Vt. Black Hawk Jam Fanny Dawson, claimed to be of Messenger descent. This horse sired Abe Edgington, 2:23½.

2. Don't know. Can any reader inform us? 3. Abdallah, foaled 1854, by Rysdyk's Hambletonien, dam by Roebuck g d, by Sir Henry.

W. H. Gocher, New York.

Please publish the age, size and breeding in full of the brown gelding Little Hope, who got a record of 2:26½ at San Francisco, March 12th.

Answer—Little Hope, pacing record 2:26½; brown gelding, 15.1 hands high, foaled 1881. Sired by Tempest Jr., dam by Wilton's Blue Bull. Tempest Jr. was by Tempest, dam Kit by Henry Clay, and is the sire of the pacers Lincoln, 2:24½, Black York, 2:21½, and Silvertail, 2:16½. Little Hope was sold at the Killip auction last week by W. B. Bradbury to T. Fitzgerald for $900.

E. S. Paddock, Forestville, Cal.

Please give me the breeding of the following horses. 1. Grauger. 2. Comet. 3. Young Comet.

Answer—1. Grauger was by imp. Hercules, don't know breeding of dam. 2. There are several Comets, with and without records. Benj. Fisher's Comet, that stood in Santa Clara Co., was by Young Black Hawk (son of Vermont Black Hawk), dam by Morgan Tallyho, g d by Andrew Johnson. Tell us exactly what horse you mean.

Several letters for this department have been received without the name of the writer. These will not be answered. The inquirer may have a pseudonym in print if he wishes, but his real name must be sent us as a guarantee of good faith.

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I was much pleased by your editorial urging horsemen with their horses to attend our fair, to be held August the 6th, at Los Angeles. Allow me also to say a few words in that direction. This is the first time that we have made a bid for the patronage of the State. Heretofore we have depended largely for our amusement upon our local horses and people. We are now giving more liberal purses than any other place in the State, except the State Fair, and we have liberal concessions by the S. P. Railroad Company, so that the additional expense cuts no figure whatever. They have made the following prices: A car by freight will cost $80 from San Francisco, San Jose and Sacramento. A car by passenger train $160 the round trip from same points, and as twelve horses can be put in a car, it would make about $13.33 per horse to bring him here and return, and only half that amount by freight train. The time occupied by passenger train will only be twenty-two hours, and horses can be landed right at the Park if so desired. This makes it as easy as shipping to Sacramento; for the little additional time in transit is unimportant, and as far as risk is concerned about the same, for whatever danger there may be is largely in getting the horses into the car. The fare for passengers will be two-thirds of the ordinary rate, that is, from San Francisco, San Jose and Sacramento; $10 each way. These tickets will be on sale the 3d, 4th and 5th of August, and for those dates only, and good for the time of the fair only.

This being our first effort it is important that we meet with success, for we have an empire here in itself, and may expect, if successful now, to be of much advantage to the breeding interest of this State, for all horsemen desire opportunities to show their horses, to have profitable engagements for their stock, for this makes a desire to own them, and thus makes a market at good prices. San Diego will, too, in the near future, fall into line, and then we may expect good winter racing both here and at San Francisco, for parties from the east could afford to come if they can be assured of profitable engagements, and they will come, and this coast will become the Mecca to which many horsemen will turn when their eastern engagements are over. Should, however, our first effort be unsuccessful, then it will take years to overcome such a back-set, for we could not expect to find associations here to again try a venture which had been a failure. For this reason I appeal to all horsemen, asking them to give us their help, and all persons who have any love for sport, or even who are on pleasure bent, for they cannot find a more pleasant week's outing than coming here, for they can enjoy themselves by rides among our orange groves, by seeing our marvelous improvements by going to the beach, and we have now ample hotel accommodations where every luxury can be obtained that enjoyment can call for.

There was some talk about giving a fair at Napa City for the same date, but I believe and hope that that has been postponed to a later date, for first, it is unfair, for we took our date months ago, and have a right to expect that other associations will do by us as they would wish to be done by. Second—It would cripple both, perhaps, and make a failure. Third—it would be an advantage to them by taking a date that did not conflict with any other fair, for then they would get the entries of Los Angeles horses and other stables that will come here, and, as I understand it, their track being new and soft, will be much benefited by having time to settle; and fourth, they would ever have our good wishes and future support, whereas, if they in the very beginning run in unfair opposition to us, we will not feel that friendliness which is so essential for future prosperity.

LOS ANGELES.

The Haggin Sale Again.

The following account of the Haggin Sale, clipped from the New York World, is more complete than the telegraphic report published last week, so we give it entire.

As was expected the sale of the Ranch del Paso yearlings bred by Mr. J. B. Haggin attracted a great crowd of turfmen and others to Madison Square Garden yesterday, and when Mr. Easton mounted his rostrum he faced a representative body of horsemen from all parts of the country, and there were trainers by the score.

At 1:10 the sale began with lively bidding for the half-sister to Pontiac, but the bidding became slow until the prize of the sale, King Thomas, the brother of Ban Fox and King Fox, was led into the ring. He was introduced with a neat little speech by Mr. Easton, who detailed the circumstances of the sale of the dam of these noted colts, Maud Hampton; the untimely death of the colts and their sire, and the foaling of King Thomas, the last of the King Buns, and his being named in honor of Major B. J. Thomas, of Lexington, Ky. Mr. Easton, in conclusion, hoped that, whoever bought him, the name of the colt would not be changed. There was suppressed excitement when the auctioneer announced that Mr. Gratz had authorized him to open the bidding with $5,000, but no sooner had he said this when Capt. Connor jumped it a thousand. Like a flash it went to $15,000, which was Phil Dwyers bid. As the crowd began to applaud, Mr. Easton stopped a moment and appealed to his auditors not to occasion any excitement by applauding, as it would frighten the colt and perhaps do much injury. At this juncture Lucien Appleby mounted a chair in the rear of the circle and in front of the auctioneer, and when he bid $16,000 all eyes were directed to him. Senator Hearst and friends had seated themselves behind the auctioneer on the Twenty-sixth street side of the Garden, and a determined challenge was sent over to Appleby, with "$20,000" bid. The excitement was about to break forth, but a warning sign from Mr. Easton prevented the explosion. The bidding went on by the thousand between Senator Hearst and Appleby until $30,000 was reached. There was a pause, the pent up emotion of the crowd seemed to be straining against the thongs of safety with which Mr. Easton had bound the crowd. Appleby stood pale and trembling, and when an advance of $500 came from the Hearst party Dave Johnson moved up to his partner's side and exclaimed, "Go on, Luce, I'm with you!" By the thousand the competitors went at it again until the Senator's bid of $37,500 caused the crowd to rise and look anxious. Mr. Easton held his gavel aloft, while Appleby was the cynosure of all eyes. "Walk the colt round a little," said Appleby to the groom. A moment of intensity, then "Thirty-eight thousand" comes from Appleby. There is a stillness like death. The Senator is dumb, and nods his head to the appeal of the auctioneer, and as the gavel descends a wave of applause overcomes judgment and breaks through the garden. The colts in their stalls become frightened and try to stampede, but the excitement is suppressed in time to avoid injury. In the meantime Mr. Appleby was surrounded by friends, who congratulated him on his pluck, and to questions as to his intentions regarding the colt he said that he would be trained next year and would win the Futurity, although it was admitted that sentiment and business went together in causing a phenomenal price to be paid for the colt.

The sale of King Thomas for $38,000 completely eclipses the English record, although it has been said that an Englishman would pay a higher figure for a yearling than anyone else in the world. The highest price ever paid for a yearling in England was 3,600 guineas by the Duchess of Montrose for Whistle Jacket, by Hermit, dam Fortress, at the Doncaster sales in 1885. The other high-priced yearlings purchased at yesterday's sale were a colt by Iroquois, dam Letola, bought by Wyndham Walden for $5,500, presumably for Mr. John A. Morris, and a colt by Sir Modred, dam La Favorita, bought by Senator Hearst for $5,000.

The sixty-four yearlings sold brought a total of $112,775, an average of $1,752.

The largest individual buyer at the sale was Senator Hearst, who paid $18,975 for ten head. Of these there were four by Sir Modred, for which the Senator paid $12,200. It is assumed that they will be sent back to California to be developed and trained, and to finally become the foundation for a great breeding stud on the ranch of the Senator.

The sale was over at 5:10, having consumed less than four hours. At its conclusion Mr. Easton thanked those present for their kind attention and patience, and said that it gave him pleasure to announce that as a yearling sale it was the most successful ever held anywhere in the world.

Of those sold that are engaged in the Coney Island Jockey Club's Futurity of 1889 are lots numbered as follows: 1, 3, 7, 8, 11, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 26, 28, 31, 32, 33, 38, 39, 43, 44, 45, 48, 49, 50, 51, 54, 57, 60, 63, 64, 67 and 69.

Young Broodmares.

As a rule very little is written about broodmares unless they are fortunate enough to throw two or three performers. A mare that produces eight or ten foals, only one of which is developed, is very apt to be overlooked, although her progeny might have made her second to none of the famous broodmares, if it had been given an opportunity. Fashionable breeding places many a colt and filly that would have made a successful turf performer in the stud, as their service fees or produce, as the case may be, will net more per annum than they can win on the turf.

As soon as a mare has established the reputation of being a speed producer, her get is bought up or reserved for breeding purposes, and unless she throws an off-colored or badly marked colt that is gelded, her chances of adding another performer to her list are very slim. As I write I can name four or five mares that would to-day divide honors with Green Mountain Maid and Emeline, if all of their produce, or even 50 per cent. of it, had been trained. Waterwitch threw at least seven foals that could have made records better than 2:30, and the present season will in all probability see two more names added to the list. Three of Miss Russell's fifteen foals have been started in public. Their names are well known. Is there anyone who doubts that four or five of Nutwood's or Maud S.'s sisters or brothers could not stop a watch better than 2:30?

Who can place a limit to the speed producing qualities of Minnehaha or her greatest daughter, Beautiful Bells, and where would Dolly have stood if John F. Payne had not died and had her Almont fillies been developed?

Nearly all of these mares were bred young, and in the majority of instances their first few foals were their best. Whether this is due, as I said above, to the others not being developed, or to lack of individual merit, is more than I am able to answer, but it can be safely assumed that the first conclusion is the correct one.

The following tables, which were compiled with great difficulty, on account of the slipshod manner in which broodmares are registered, contain the names of many, not by any means all, of the mares that threw performers before the close of their seventh year. In my researches I have found where four three-year-olds—that is fillies bred at two years of age—threw horses of merit, but such instances are rare. Four-year-old speed producers are very numerous, and that table contains the names of many famous mares, for there are few familiar with trotting literature but have heard of Alma Mater, Belle Hastings, Burch Mare, Dolly, Lady Patriot, Pantelette, Madame Swiveller, Lady Thorne Jr., Glencora, Gray Goose and Lady Thorne's daughter Thornette. The five tables contain one hundred and seventy-one names, but many of them appear in two and a few in three of them. There are four three-year-olds, thirty-four four-year-olds, forty-three five-year-olds, forty-eight six-year-olds, and forty seven-year-olds. The tables are as follows:

The above tables look very well in print, but the first question that comes to the surface is what kind of performers did these fillies or young brood-mares, as they are designated, produce? Of the four bred as two-year-olds Abtillon produced Signal, sire of Jesse Hammond, 2:25½. She missed the following year, but produced Belle Thorne, now in the South Elkhorn stud, as a five-year-old. At six she produced Comhat, sire of Williams, 2:21, and Brown and Lola, who threw Cosher, 2:30, as a four-year-old the next spring. Betty Brown is one of the few great inbred Mambrino brood-mares. The Glenarvon stud is built on her blood. Her first foal was the chestnut filly Belle Clay, dam of Amy King, 2:22½, and the pacer Macey, 2:29½. Katie Patchen produced Globe, 2:21½, and Mother Lumps the brown horse Lumps, 2:21.

Alma Mater was bred as a three-year-old. Alcantara, 2:23, was her first foal, Aleyone, 2:27, the second, and Arbitrator, 2:30, the third. Belle Hastings' first foal was Kitty Van, 2:24, and Belle F., 2:15½, the second. She missed as a five-year-old. Betsy Thunder produced Bill Thunder, 2:26. The Burch Mare, dam of Rosalind, 2:21½, and Donald, 2:28, was four when Blandina, her greatest daughter, was foaled. The latter produced Abdallah Pilot as a six-year-old, and Swigert as a seven-year-old. She is also the dam of King Rene and Solicitor. Carrie Clay, by Coaster, who died in Canada last week, was a four-year-old when she dropped Stuart, 2:26½. Mambrino Chief's greatest daughter Dolly was bred as a three-year-old. Thorneale, 2:22½, was her first foal. She was six when John F. Payne was foaled. Frederica produced Little Fred, 2:20, and Fuga, the King Rene mare, Fugue, 2:24½.

Gauntlette's first foal was that magnificent race-horse William, 2:21, who has trained on from his two-year-old form. She was barren as a five-year-old, but dropped Brown the following year. Gauntlette is by Dictator out of Crop, another great speed producer. Lot Slocum, 2:17½, was Glencora's first foal. Gretchen was four when she produced Knox Girl, the dam of Aubine, 2:27½. Grey Goose was bred as a three-year-old and produced Norma, who trotted in 2:31½ twenty-five years ago.

Hattie Wood was a very uniform breeder the first four years she was in the stud. Idol, sire of Pickwick, 2:29½, was her first foal; Gazelle, 2:21, her second; Louis Napoleon, sire of Jerome Eddy, 2:16½, etc., her third, and Victor von Bismarck, sire of Kentucky Hambletonian, 2:27, her fourth. Hepsey Jane produced Young Morrissey, 2:29½. Hildegard produced Cheltenham, 2:30, as a three-year-old. Huntress produced Hidalgo, 2:27½. Jenny produced Patrick Henry, sire of the dams Bessie, 2:17½, and Boston, 2:27½. Jennie Martin foaled France's Alexander, 2:19, the spring she was a four-year-old, and threw Woolly Jim, 2:23½, when she was seven.

Lady Patriot was three, and Hambletonian four when they were first mated. Her first foal was Volunteer. She was five when she produced Hetzel's Hambletonian, and twenty-two when Marksman was foaled. Santa Claus, 2:17½, was Lady Thorne Jr.'s first foal. Lady Vail produced Ella Madden, 2:25½, the dam of Vernet, 2:23½, as a four-year-old. Logan Maid produced Lady Williams, 2:28½. Magic was Lualaba's first foal. She also produced Roger Hanson, 2:28½. Lydia Montague produced Sauveur, 2:29½, and Madam Swiveller the great horse Dick Swiveller, 2:18. His sire was a four-year-old when he got him. Mattie West produced McMahon, 2:21½, as a four-year-old, and Durango, 2:23½, the following year. Mayenne was four when she dropped Crescendo. He will trot close to 2:20 this season. Oneta produced Saturn, sire of Consul, 2:22½, and McLeod, 2:19½, as a four-year-old, and Ensign, 2:23½, the spring she was seven.

Burgular, 2:24½, and Epaulet, 2:19, were Pantalette's first foals. They were dropped when she was a four and five-year-old respectively, and her dam Florence, sister to Gambetta, was seven when Princeps' greatest producing daughter was foaled. Rebecca was four when she produced the promising young horse Rexford, 2:24, that was burned in the Palo Alto fire, and her dam, Clarabel, who was also the dam of Clifton Belle, 2:25½, was six when Rebecca was foaled. Roving Neil produced Mambrino Boy, 2:26½, and Ruby Allen the Jay Gould mare Opal, 2:23. Lady Thorne's daughter produced Patti, 2:25½, and Virginia, Confederate Chief, sire of William Arthur, 2:19½. Eros, 2:29½, was Sontag Mohawk's first foal and Sally Benton, 2:17½, her second.

Advance is first on the list of five-year-old speed producers. She threw Wildmont, 2:30. He was her second foal. Lady McFarridge, 2:29, was Bayader's second foal, and Parana, 2:19½, the first Belle of Cayuga dropped. Justina, 2:23½, was Black Goldust's second foal. Dahlia produced Dacia, 2:29½, as a five-year-old, and the latter was the same age when Daciana, 2:27½, her first foal, was dropped. Fleeta, 2:29½, was Dolly's first foal, and Envoy, 2:28, her sixth. Emma Mills produced Mott's Independent. Express, 2:29½, was the thoroughbred mare Esther's second foal. Fanny Foss was five when she produced Bashaw Jr., 2:24½, and seven when Yellowbird, dam of Trampoline, 2:23, was foaled. Merry Thought was Four Line's first foal.

As a five-year-old Green Mountain Maid produced Storm, 2:26½; as a six-year-old Electioneer, and as a seven-year-old, Prospero, 2:20. Hattie Fitch produced Mambrino Wilkes, 2:28½. Jane Brown produced Young Wilkes, 2:28½. Jewell produced The King, 2:29½, and Kate Sparkle, the fast mare Mambrino Sparkle, 2:17. Lady Abdallah was five when she threw Lady Ayres, dam of Lottie Thorne and Byerly Abdallah, sire of Jerome Turner, 2:15½, and six when Granville, 2:26, was dropped. Lizzie Abdallah produced King William, 2:20½. Valiant, 2:28½, was Lorena's first foal. Madam Ferguson produced Sir Guy, 2:23½, and Madam Temple, the famous little mare Flora Temple, 2:19½. Madge produced Marguerite, 2:24½. Mary A. produced Problem, 2:24½. Mary Borden produced Edna, 2:29½. Mary Bostwick produced Mohawk Chief, 2:30, and Mary Ellsmore, Cleveland, 2:28½.

Nutwood, 2:18½, was Miss Russell's first foal. She was seven when Cora Belmont, 2:24½, was dropped, and nine when she produced Maud S. Dream, 2:25½, was Nicola's first foal. Primrose was five when she produced Princeps, and seven when Rosebush (dam of Chichester, 2:25½), was dropped. Reina Victoria was four when Euclid, 2:26½, was foaled. She produced Princeton, 2:19½, the next season. Romance, 2:29½, was Roma's first foal, and Fiction, the dam of Fiction, 2:29½, her second. Romper produced Golden Bow, 2:27½. Santa Claus produced Emulation, 2:29½. Sally Woodford produced Brigoli, 2:29½, and Starlight threw Maud, 2:29½. Butterfly, 2:19½, was Tansey's first foal, and St. Gothard the first Zora, by American Clay produced.

Abbess comes first in the list of six-year-old speed producers. Soprano, her first foal, is the dam of C. F. Clay, 2:18, and Eminence, 2:27½. Her next foals were Steinway, 2:25½, and Solo, 2:23½. Bonnie, 2:25, was America's second foal. Bay Fanny produced Alexander, 2:28½, and Beautiful Bells, the famous record maker Hinda Rose, 2:19½. Pancoast, 2:21½, was Bicara's first foal, and promises to be her greatest. Black Bess produced Darby, 2:16½. Cachucha produced Catchfly, 2:18½, and Columbine the fast horse Antee, 2:16½. Harvey, 2:24½, was Cypher's first foal. Consuela produced Connaught, 2:24, and Dollabella, Hickory, 2:27½. Eden Lassie produced Orient, 2:30. Eventide produced Erelong. She is also the dam of Eris, 2:27, foaled in 1830, and Evermond, 2:28, foaled 1881. Fairy Belle produced Fairy Gift, and Fan the fast mare Kate Sprague, 2:18. Fanny Jackson produced Aristos, 2:27½, as a six-year-old, and Irish Maid, 2:37½, the next season. Gretchen, by Chosroes, produced Clingstone, 2:14, and Gretchen, by Mambrino Pilot, the brown horse Luca, 2:27, who was her first foal. Hattie Hogan produced Hogarth, 2:26, and Illinois Maid, Callahan Maid, 2:27, sister to Troubadour, 2:19½; Jessie Sayre threw James Howell Jr., 2:24, and Lucia the lay mare Beulah, 2:29½. Mary Ann produced Chester, 2:30, and afterwards threw the famous filly Mamie Wood, 2:23½. Alroy, 2:23, was Mason Girl's second foal, and Margaret, 2:28, out of May Squel.

Minnehaha was a six-year-old when Beautiful Bells, 2:29½, was foaled. Wilson, 2:16½, was Miss Coon's second foal. Moselle produced Clark's Mohawk Jr., 2:25. Ned threw Fanny Stoner as a six-year-old. Nelly Horton produced Fanny, 2:24½. She was her second foal. Nelly Litchfield produced Middlesex, 2:24. Nipper produced Nettie Burlew, 2:24, and Soprano was in her sixth and seventh years when she produced her two performers. Princess Ann produced Alamo, 2:34½, as a six-year-old, and Rachel, 2:26½, as a seven-year-old. Senorita produced Lucy Walker, 2:30. Skip produced Independence, 2:21½. Trusty was a six-year-old when Scotland Maid, 2:28½, was foaled. In the next two years she produced Deucalion, 2:22, and Lucia, the dam of Day Dream, 2:21½, by Cuyler.

Amy, the dam of Arbutus, 2:30, is the first of the seven-year-olds. He was her third foal. Cypress, 2:30, was Aspinola's first foal, and Patron, 2:14½, the third Beatrice produced. He is the only one of her foals that has been developed. Belle was seven when Belmont was dropped, and Belle, by Muscatine, the same age when she produced Tramp Jr., 2:30. Black Lady produced St. Albans, 2:20½, and Diana, Geo. A. Ayres, 2:30. Walkill Chief was Dolly Mills' second foal. Lady Winfield was seven when she produced Duroc Maid, who at the same age threw Femme Sole, 2:20, by Princeps. Fanny produced Pemberton, 2:29½, and Jenny Bryan the bay gelding Eric, 2:28½. Miss Brunette, dam of Black Prince, 2:25½, was Kate's first foal, and Lucy Fry, 2:20½, the only one Kitty Bates has yet produced. Lady Brown produced Wilkins Micawber, and Letitia The Jewess, 2:26. He was her second foal. Warder, her seventeenth and last, was foaled when she was twenty-four, and promises to be as fast as the first stallion that ever topped a watch in a public race in 2:20.—By Pilot in N. Y. Sportsman.

The Curse of Racing.

In Washington, on Suburban Day, there was a lively time at the Boundary Line where about 2,000 people had congregated to see racing by wire. Says The Capital: It is almost two late now to say anything about the race, as the New York papers have described it very fully, but still it may not be amiss to say something about the scene at Seventh and Boundary Thursday afternoon. Of course the attendance was not quite so large as at the course, but then at least 2,000 people were out there to "see the race run over wire." The infield at the old club house was filled with equipages of all sorts, and all sorts of people except ladies were out there. It was distinctly a "stag party." A little matter of this kind was not noticed by most of those present, but still a few felt that if the fair sex had been represented the atmosphere would not have been quite so blue after the announcement that Terra Cotta was the winner had been changed and Elkwood had been given the place of honor.

When the time rolled around, at which the great race was to be run, everyone left the "infield" and came indoors to see the race. There was a long, dreary wait, only enlivened by some fellow getting a new inspiration and backing it.

This inspiration business was of rather frequent occurrence. At last the caller shouted, "They're off!" and then you could have heard a pin drop. "Triboulet in the lead!" "Passing the stand Royal Arch leads by two lengths; Joe Cotton second!" "At the quarter, Arch six lengths in front of Eurus!" Then people began to ask if Eurus could win again. "At the half, Arch a length, Eurus and Cotton neck and neck!" "In the stretch, Elkwood a length in front of Firenze!" "Terra Cotta wins, Fenelon second!" The shout that went up then would have raised the roof of an ordinary building, but it only shook this one. The only people who did not look happy were the bookmakers. Quite a select party started for the bar, and several bottles were ordered when the caller yelled with fiendish glee: "That was a mistake. Elkwood is first, Fenelon second." The atmosphere in that neighborhood was immediately made blue, and not by "bookie" either. Pretty soon came the announcement that Ferenzi was second, but even that didn't please the crowd. Finally the caller said, after listening at the telephone for a moment, "Elkwood first, Terra second, Firenze third. Time, 2:07½."—N. Y. Sportsman.

Pancoast's Close Call.

The thunderstorm that swept over Long Island Friday night left a mark at Parkville Farm that will be remembered for many a day. One of the flashes of lightning which followed each other with great rapidity, entered the stud barn through the corner of the wire screen over the back window of Cuyler's stall, and darting over the partition between the two boxes struck Pancoast. After performing its apparently fatal mission it flashed back and left the stable, shattering a board about two feet from where it entered. Cuyler never knew that the building had been struck.

Fortunately the stud groom was not in Pancoast's stall at the time or he would have been killed, and the building together with the horses consumed, as the lightning struck the side of the door not six inches from the end of his cot. He was in the stable about fifteen minutes before it was struck, putting the muzzle on Pancoast, and had gone over to the broodmare-stable where a couple of the men were up with a mare that was going to foal, to have a chat before going to bed. When the clap of thunder that followed the almost fatal flash shook the building they were in, he instinctively thought of the stud barn and run out to see if it was struck. On one of the men asking if a light had been left in Pancoast's stall, he rushed over, unlocked the door, and found the straw on fire. One man pulled down the bars, while the others smothered the flames with the blankets. When they glanced round for the horse, they found him lying on his right side apparently dead, with his head between his front legs. He had been standing with his head towards the door when struck, and swung round before falling. All the marks discernable was a few singed hairs on his left ear, and a bruise over the left eye, received in falling.

As soon as the men recovered from the shock, a messenger was dispatched for Driscoll and Mosher, and everything possible was done for the horse, who soon began to groan. When Driscoll arrived, he started the men rubbing him. The treatment soon roused the flickering lamp of life, which was almost out, but the horse was suffering intense agony. Mosher threw the harness on Kinglight and started for Dr. Thomas Ashe, the farm's veterinary. The pace he set between Parkville and Brooklyn was fast enough to win the Suburban. Mr. Shults and Shuit were also notified. When Dr. Ashe arrived he had the horse slung up, and injected morphine to allay the pain while the rubbing was continued. Upon an examination being made it was found Pancoast's left side was paralyzed. Dr. Ashe remained with him till morning, and soon had his famous patient much easier. In the morning he asked for another veterinary to be called in so that they could consult. Dr. Heard was then sent for, and on his arrival approved of the treatment.

Pancoast improved slowly, and on Sunday morning was able to get up with very little assistance. His recovery was very rapid during the next twenty-four hours, and on Monday he was taken out of the sling for half an hour and allowed to move about. He was blind in his left eye until Tuesday, when he began to recover the use of it.

The accident, coming as it does in the middle of Pancoast's stud season, is very unfortunate, as many valuable brood-mares, including Queen's Daughter out of Flora Temple, 2:19½; Fidget out of Blandina, dam of Swigert King Rene, Abdallah Pilot, Solicitor; a sister to the dam of Dick Swiveler, 2:18; Flah, 2:19½, and several of the farm's best mares are still booked to him.

It is just possible that Pancoast may be as well as ever in a few days, and such a state of affairs is devoutly to be wished, but it is very doubtful whether Mr. Shults will let him serve any more mares this season.—N. Y. Sportsman.

Col. Wood, whose record of 2:21½ was made this season, and who has been winning a number of good races in the East, has been sold to European parties, and will probably be shipped to France in the course of the next ten days. It is a pity that the foreigners never get any of our representative trotters, but it seems to be the fate of Europeans who want American trotters to get hold of nothing but "crabs." In the case of Col. Wood it is true that he has all his speed, but he is a notorious quitter, and so peculiar a horse in regard to the manner in which he must be driven that a stranger to his ways will never have any success with him. It would be a good thing for the trotting interests of this country if some wealthy and public-spirited owner of trotters would follow the example set among the runners by Mr. Lorillard and send a string of cracks over the water to show the Europeans something in the way of trotters that is really good.

The question of jockey's fees is again being agitated in certain quarters, the charge being made that such fees are ruinously extravagant. That first-class jockeys are always certain to command higher prices is just as certain and just as reasonable as for a proven racehorse to bring more money than an untied horse, or one demonstrated to be of moderate calibre. That jockeys like Murphy, Garrison, Hayward or McLaughlin should be paid more than $25, the regulation fee, is a mere question of the great law of competition, and owners who think the best jockeys come too high are not compelled to engage them. This so-called agitation looks a decided tempest in a teapot.—N. Y. Sportsman.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS.

National Trotting Association rules to govern all trotting races. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified. Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all running. Five to enter and four to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than four to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, ten per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting, pacing and running premiums to be divided at the rate of fifty per cent. for the first horse, twenty-five per cent. to the second, fifteen per cent. to the third, and ten per cent. to the fourth.

All horses entered for trotting, pacing or running races, for which entrance has been paid and who go in the race designated, and fail to win any part of the purse, will have their entrance money returned to them after decision by the Judges.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary. For a walk-over a horse is only entitled to its entrance fee and one-half of the purse retained by the Society from the other entries for said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race, entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field then to first and fourth moneys.

Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in by 8 o'clock P. M., or they shall be required to start or forfeit the entrance money.

All purses or premiums paid as soon as a decision is rendered.

Entries to the races, except No. 8, will close with the Secretary, August 10, 1888.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. The Association is a member of the National Trotting Association. The Board of Directors will have charge of the grounds during the week of races, and will see that the Rules are strictly enforced.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races, and if sold, it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. Stables, hay and straw free to competitors. Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

FIXED EVENTS FOR 1889-90
OPEN TO THE WORLD.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared on by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over, except as otherwise specified.

Running races will be conducted under the rules of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association.

Non-starters in running races will be held for an entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in the entries.

Each day's races will commence promptly at one o'clock p. m.

All entries must be directed to C. H. Stoddard, Secretary, Reno, Nevada.

The Humboldt County District Fair begins October 2d, and ends September 29th, 1888. Six days' racing; gives $7,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address J. D. Torreyson, Secretary, Carson City.

CONDITIONS

In all trotting and pacing races, purses divided as follows: 50 per cent. to first horse, 25 per cent. to second, 15 per cent. to third, and 10 per cent. to fourth. All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, except as otherwise specified.

National Association rules to govern trotting and pacing, and rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.
The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

The Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society will co-operate in the management of the Fair.
For a walk-over in any race, a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third money.
In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under Rule 3.
All colts properly entered in district stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such race.

It is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all trotting and pacing races, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare a race off when there are less than three to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries.

When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money only, divided 66% and 33%.

Races to commence each day at 2 P. M.
Our track has had a thorough coating of loam, and is now the best and fastest track in the State.

'88 FAIRLAWN '88

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR 1888.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CATALOGUE NOW READY,

And will be mailed to all applicants who send Five Cents in Stamps to Prepay Postage.

THE FAIRLAWN CATALOGUE FOR 1888 contains descriptions and pedigrees of all the Stallions and Brood-mares in use at Fairlawn. THE 1888 CATALOGUE also contains descriptions and pedigrees, and prices of

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY HEAD OF YOUNG TROTTERS,

Consisting of Stallions and Fillies from yearlings to five years old, all of my own breeding and nearly all STANDARD BRED, and duly registered.

A specialty is made at Fairlawn of raising

STALLIONS AND FILLIES FOR BREEDING PURPOSES.

Those who wish to engage in breeding High-bred Trotters, or those already engaged who wish to add to their breeding stud, can be supplied at Fairlawn with first-class young Stallions and Fillies of the very best trotting families, uniting in their veins strains of blood that have produced Speed with the greatest uniformity.

Gentlemen who desire fine, highly bred, promising, and well-broken Young Trotters for their own driving, can be supplied at Fairlawn. Any young stallion sold for a roadster will be gelded, if the purchaser desires, at my own risk and expense.

THE ONE-PRICE PLAN is strictly adhered to at Fairlawn, and the price of every animal for sale is printed in the catalogue. Purchasers from a distance can buy on orders at exactly the same price as if present in person. All stock sold on orders can be returned if they do not come fully up to the descriptions given.

Time will be given responsible parties, on satisfactory paper, bearing interest from date.

THE STALLIONS IN USE AT FAIRLAWN ARE

Happy Medium (400).

Sire of more 2:30 performers than any living stallion, having 39 to his credit with records of 2:30 or better, among them Maxey Cobb, 2:13, the fastest stallion that ever lived.

WILL BE USED AS A PRIVATE STALLION.

Aberdeen (27).

Sire of 14 with records better than 2:30, among them Hattie Woodward, 2:15; Jim Jewell, 2:19; Modoc, 2:19; etc. Limited to 30 mares at $100 the season, or $150 to insure a mare in foal.

Alecto (2548).

By Almont, dam Violet (sister to Dauntless and Peacemaker), by Rydyk's Hambletonian, etc. Limited to 30 mares at $50 the season, or $80 by insurance.

Applications for use of Stallions will be entered in the order they are received, but after a Stallion's limit is reached no more mares will be received. For catalogues and further information, address

Lock Box 320.

L. C. SMITH' Top Action, Double Cross-Bolted BREECH-LOADING GUN!

L. C. SMITH,

Manufacturer of both Hammer and Hammerless Guns.
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th money; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70-class it took the 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

Trotting Stock

FOR SALE.

Bay View Maid, chestnut mare, foaled 1881 by Gen Benton, first dam by a son of Skenandoah (Kentucky Hunter) second dam by Skenandoah; third dam by Belmont (Williamson's). Bay View Maid could trot in three minutes when a yearling. She has never been trained but has pulled a buggy in 2:50 without work. She was bred this season to Sidney and is believed to be in foal. She is a regular breeder and has by her side a horse culled by Guy Wilkes, and has also a yearling filly by Guy Wilkes. These colts, show for themselves, and will be sold with the mare. The value of Benton mares has been fully proven at Palo Alto, and Mr. Chas. Marvin pronounces them the very best.

This Stock is offered for sale because the owner has embarked in a business that absolutely precludes any attention to horses. For further particulars apply to C. W. WELBY, 622 1/2 7th Street, San Francisco.

Notes and Comments.

There are so many intricate and puzzling questions that arise every week in relation to racing matters that it may become necessary to form a Central Association that shall have authority to carry out its rules on all the tracks in the country, somewhat similar to the English Jockey Club, but more rigorous than that aristocratic body is in carrying out its own rules. The most recent case in point is that of Louis M. Cohen, a well known sporting man who had done a brisk bookmaking business at Washington Park races, but was warned off the track by the formal complaint of the Louisville Club. The complaint in favor of his exclusion from all tracks states that Cohen has, for many years been connected with faro games, and other discreditable practices. His purchase of a few race horses two years ago is regarded by the club people with suspicion. They say, furthermore, that at Louisville he was mixed up in a scheme to have a certain horse pulled, to his own great advantage, and after he had been ejected by the Louisville Club he could not be admitted to any reputable race track in the country. Cohen took no notice of the order given by the Chicago Association, and on the following day he appeared on the grounds and began his usual bookmaking operations, but the police instructed by the management, picked him up and dropped him outside the grounds. On being refused admission on the following day, he appealed for an injunction restraining the club from keeping him from the race track or from interfering with his business. In his complaint he states that he was the owner of certain race horses on the track and interested in racing events. He was paid a salary of $100 a week to make books, and the action of the club deprived him of it. The club's only reason for ejecting him, he asserted, was that he had been ejected on false charges by the Louisville Jockey Club. The injunction was granted and as the question of making it permanent cannot be argued before August, Mr. Cohen was allowed to practice his lucrative business unmolested. The question is a very important one, but to add to the perplexity of the situation, the case may be classed under different legal lights in many States of the Union and thus cause countless confusion in carrying out the edict of exclusion. It is to be hoped, in future, that great caution will be shown by racing associations in making a full and searching examination of the accused and his witnesses, before ruling a man off the track, but that when he is clearly found guilty of nefarious actions in regard to racing matters, some means may be found for making the punishment felt on every reputable track in the country.

In England this warning off the track is generally restricted to the plunging classes, who often get far beyond their depth in wagering simply with a word of honor as the guarantee of payment. When a gentleman cannot make a settlement of his racing debts his presence on Newmarket Heath or on any of the leading tracks would lead to the request of his debtors that he be warned off until his account was compromised or paid. The Referee is very much better on the Jockey Club and its aimless decisions in this respect. It states "that as long as a man who is warned off, so long as he is a swell, you know—confines himself to the paddock and the refreshment bars, and doesn't stray into the betting enclosures, he is not infringing the law. By-and-by, when Lord Testerfield finds his way into the ring, we shall be told that the sentence was all a joke, and the Jockey Club never intended it to be taken au grand sérieux. There never was a time when the Jockey Club was so anxious to stand well with the public as it is now; and yet it allows this evasion of, or this opposition to, its edicts, and says nothing. Either the Jockey Club must be aware of the return of the "most honorable" one to the enclosures, and, knowing it, is silent or the way in which its stewards do their business is with their eyes shut—when they don't want to see anything. Anyway, the stewards seem to be the only people who don't know of this latest escapade. Personally, it does not matter a half-penny to me whether the warned-off lord comes back to the fold or remains under suspension; if I have a feeling, it is in favor of his rehabilitation, as I believe he was more foolish than wicked in regard to the transaction which led to what was at the time supposed to be his expulsion from racing society. It is the craven act of the Jockey Club I cannot swallow. The Jockey Club deprives of their licences two jockeys, who may be wicked but who have certainly not been proved wicked by means of fair trial; and while these men are still kept from earning their livings, it allows the sinner by means of whose warning-off they covered themselves with cheap glory to return to the race enclosures, and profess to know nothing at all about it. Let us have either King Log or King Stork; not a combination of the worst attributes of those two wretched monarchs." Some of these days we shall be face to face with the same difficulty and then what are we going to do about it.

There was a time some quarter of a century since when the Derby was looked upon as the chief turf event of the world, but owing to the immense impetus given in later years to racing in America, Australia and on the European continent, and especially to the system of levying an entrance fee to enclosed grounds, and a percentage on bookmaking and other privileges, there are now racing events of larger value than the aggregate amount of the Derby Stakes. The great classic event, as is well known, is for three-year-old colts and fillies, £50 entrance and half forfeit, but as the Epsom Racing Association gives no added money, the owners are simply racing for their own cash. This parsimonious action, that compares so unfavorably with the princely sum offered by more modern associations in England in addition to the stakes, is producing its effect, and there is almost yearly a gradual diminution in the number of entries to the Blue Ribbon of the turf, so as to cause the birds of ill omen to croak on its ultimate omission from the racing calendar. But that there is a long life yet to the classic event is evidenced by the great array of noblemen and rich commoners who still regard the Derby as the main event of the year, and consequently make liberal nominations in the hope of carrying off the prize, as also by the fact that French, Germans, Austrians, Americans and even Australians are willing to compete with the best English horses in their three-year-old form on their own tracks. It was a common turf axiom in England that their best horses could give a foreigner of the finest breeding a stone and a beating, but this insular pride was, figuratively speaking, knocked into a cocked hat when the French horse Gladiateur won the Derby in 1863, and the American horse Iroquois captured the race in 1881. Since that date there has been a diminution in the number of foreign entries, but from present appearance there will be a grand International battle in 1890 for this coveted prize of the turf. Thus the Hon. J. White, a great and spirited owner in Australia, intends to send to England an own brother to Cranbrook and a sister to Acme, a daughter of the great Australian sire Chester, and they will be nominated for the chief two year and three-year-old events, while Mr. Belmont has followed suit in shipping a St. Blaise and a Kingfisher colt for the same purpose. There is not a more grandly bred horse in all the British Isles than Kingfisher, sired by Lexington, who is most inbred to Diomed, the first winner of the Derby, while his dam Eltham Lass, is by Kingston, a son of Venison, her dam being a daughter of Palmyra by Sultan, while the sire of Eltham Lass was Pyrrhus, the first who won the Derby in 1846. May the best horse win, but it would be a great triumph for America if a son of Kingfisher could carry off the great race in 1890, as his ancestors have done years and years before him.

There are mysteries connected with the English law that would bether a score of Philadelphia pettifoggers to elucidate. Here is a case in point. Some years since, the young heir of a noted count's family came into his estates that had been so carefully nursed during his minority that not only was the property free from mortgages and incumbrances, but there was a very handsome surplus at his disposal. He entered the army, but was soon bored by the enforced state of discipline, so he resigned, joined half a dozen gay and exclusive clubs, and entered on a fast life as a man about town. Then the mania for racing and speculations came upon him with all its fierce fascination. He mounted a stable of horses, for which, of course he paid double their value and became known as one of the boldest plungers at Tattersall's and at the chief tracks of France, England and Germany. In a short time he met with such reverse that he had to mortgage his estates and dispose of his stable, but he is now suffering hardships and degradation that must be galling to the death to a man who has figured in the leading classes of society. After disposing of everything about the estate that was not entailed and borrowing money from all his friends, he gradually sank so low in the social grades as to visit the minor gambling halls of the metropolis where he would wager every shilling he could borrow from the very bookmakers who had caused his ruin. His relatives have offered time and again to pay his expenses for a trip around the world, but their overtures are received with contempt. It was only recently that this gentleman figured in a case before Judge Bayley at the Westminster County Court for the cost of a pair of boots. For sixteen miles he had wearily trudged to the court, glad to munch a piece of dry bread to assuage the pangs of hunger, while he admitted that for some time past dry bread and nuts had been his only food. For many weeks he had tasted no meat. His club subscriptions, it seems, were paid by his friends. Yet what a mockery in fate there is here. Starvation in the stately apartments of a palatial Pall Mall club boasting a first-class chef! The very, very poor have not the mental misery which this picture calls up, superadded to their physical woes.

A great deal of unfavorable comment has been made at leading trotting circles at the East at the action of the timers giving a heat to Rosalind Wilkes in 2:17 in the 2:19 class at the Charter Oak meeting. A correspondent recently had an interview with H. B. Sire, the part owner of the mare, who was very bitter in his attitude over the matter. He said: "I think the management, judges and all included, did a piece of injustice in the case of Rosalind Wilkes by giving her the benefit of the fastest time recorded by their watches, as it is a well-known fact that outsiders and disinterested gentlemen who sat opposite the wire, such as Mr. David Bonner, made the time 2:17½, and a member of Charter Oak Association made it 2:17½, and so told the judges. Of scores of other gentlemen none of them made it faster than 2:17½. It looked to us that there was a sort of a combine who wished this mare out of their way, and the best way to do it was to get her out of the 2:18 class, and Hartford was the place selected. What business had driver L. H. Hard or any other outsider in the judges' stand timing other people's horses and expressing his opinion to the judges when he was not an official? I think it a great hardship that so young a mare should be forced into the free-for-all class so early in the season, while she more properly belongs in the 2:18 class, and could add much interest to it. While the time classification should prevail in trotting races, yet circumstances alter cases, and it is better to give the horse the benefit of a doubt, and induce owners to go to the front, than have them give the public merely conditioning races in the spring circuit." It is a pity that such heart burning cannot be avoided among the leading owners of first-class trotting stock, who in some instances injure their own prospects by any method of unjustly lowering the record of rival horses who are often so needed in the 2:18 and free-for-all classes.

General Topics.

"Jogging" in company with a driver a few days ago, driving in races became the topic. My companion was driving a three-year-old colt, which while in the stud I saw trot a mile in 2:29½, showing capacity to go faster. He is the owner of this one and trains another of the same age which has shown faster, a good deal faster. At the solicitation of the driver the owner of the last mentioned colt had secured the services of an expert to drive him in his races, and with additional agreement that he should make occasional visits before the first race came off so as to get the hang of the colt. The man selected in my opinion has no superior as a driver of races, and so on that score the arrangement was all right. But my advice to owner and trainer would be to continue the practice which has prevailed, and which has resulted so satisfactorily. The present trainer broke the colt and has handled him since the close of last season. He has made wonderful progress, shown a flight of speed rarely equaled by a colt of his age, and that his condition is about right is proved by going three or four heats with comparative ease. He works as steadily as an old campaigner, never gets "rattled," and so far as can be told by exercise is all that a reasonable man could desire. Now the question is whether it will be good policy to change until the time comes, or so near it that he is on the ground where the race is to be trotted. In favor of having the man who is to drive him in the races commencing several weeks before the date fixed for the actual battle, is that colt and man become familiarized with the peculiarities of each other, and this is certainly a strong argument on that side of the question. But there is an increased risk of the colt getting off as it is seldom, indeed, that two men handle the reins in the same manner, and not infrequently, what appears to be trivial things have a potent effect.

The difference in "handling" is not so liable to work injuriously in a race as in the regular work. The noise, bustle and excitement do away, in a measure, with the facility of close observation, and what might cause rebellion at one time be unnoticed at another. There is dissimilarity in drivers in methods of reinsmanship. More striking, perhaps, in the usual exercise than when trotting races. The race compels the employment of tactics, which are never, or rarely, used in "working out days." The horse becomes accustomed to the change, most of them "cotton" to it with a very short experience. There is also a wide variation in the capacity to drive strange horses, with some it is intuitive, others never acquire the knack. The man selected to drive the animal under consideration is peculiarly skilled in that way, so that in all probability the "warming up heat" will place man and colt on good terms with each other. At all events one time working out, the last previous to the race, would be sufficient to learn the way of the colt, and if more is required, there ought to be a more radical change than occasional trials. Were the colt retrograding, or standing in the same notch for weeks where there were good reasons to look for improvement, it would be wise then to entrust the whole charge to the man who is to drive him. It was not my intention, however, to speculate on this one case, but rather to take the remarks of the trainer as the basis of a few notes, especially, as some few weeks ago, several letters were received requesting information in regard to driving in races. The question was asked of the man who has demonstrated that he is a superior educator of trotters, who has been connected with trotters for many years, who reads and studies far more than a large majority of the profession, and who apparently has the qualifications for a really good driver. What reason have you for not driving him yourself?

His reply, "I have not confidence. The races are likely to be stubbornly contested, large fields of starters, and the best drivers on the coast to contend against." I admire modesty. Unwarranted conceit is offensive, but in this instance the self-disparagement is not justified, and, in all probability, were the want of confidence overcome, a valuable accession to public drivers would result. While it is beyond question that a man may be a successful educator of trotters, and lack some of the qualities necessary for driving in races, until it is demonstrated by actual trials that there is a want, it should not be taken for granted. The difficulty in many cases arises from overestimating the job. According to the belief of many people, the talent for driving trotters is so rare a gift that only a few possess the necessary attributes. There are grades as there are in every business, but it would be just as sensible to claim that only one in a thousand apprentices will be worthy of the name of mechanic as that a young man of ordinary intelligence will not prove a driver after he has served his time. Head and hands are the main essentials. Nerve, which so many expatiate upon, is a necessity, though when coupled with a want of sense, it is anything but valuable. The courage required to drive in races is the heritage of so many people, that its absence is more rare than the possession. We hear a great deal of talk about desperate drivers, and extolling the "taking of chances" in unmeasured terms. I have seen a far greater number of races lost by recklessness than ever were won, and the whole jargon of "winning a race out of the fire," "lifting the horse in," and a lot more phrases of like meaning are claptrap, a jingle of words and nothing more.

Head and hands. The importance of head-work is not overrated, but when a man exemplifies that he has that quality by being uniformly successful as an educator of trotting horses and colts it is a fair inference that he will also exhibit in other parts of the business. The brain must work quickly to adopt the proper tactics in the hurry and excitement of a race. Although the course may have been decided upon before the start, it is seldom that a preconceived idea can be fully carried out. There may be a score of incidents never thought of until they are presented, and they must be acted upon without hesitation. Should a person be upset by excitement, until that is overcome he is not likely to distinguish himself. But the idea that such is going to be the case may prove erroneous, and expectation be more harassing than actuality. There may be such a degree of trepidation at the mere thoughts of coming prominently before a large crowd that the sufferer makes up his mind that there is no use trying, whereas the real is not beset with a tithe of the difficulty of the ideal. The head has led its possessor astray, or rather the fancy has raised apprehensions which are not solidly founded. It is very true that a great many people are so constituted that excitement completely incapacitates them. It is also true that this feeling may be overcome, the most potent ally being habit. "Stage fright," or the mere expectation that such would come, has deterred many people from attempting a public role. Fear of criticism has also had the same effect, but above all a lack of self-confidence, as expressed by the quoted remarks.

Hands and head. It is nearly certain that our friend has hands. The success met in teaching colts to trot is a guaranty that this grand requisite is not wanting. English writers lay a great deal of stress on this desideratum, and with good reasons. "Head, hands and heels," is their alliterative phrase, and it may be defined, head the generalship, hands the power to execute the orders, heels the stimulus, the power to bring out the supreme effort at the right time. "Good hands" on a racehorse means the power to restrain without making the restraint tiring or irksome, and also as an aid in bringing out the full speed. With trotters it is all that and a good deal more. The hands are the main dependence to guard against breaking, the means to bring the horse back to the trot when a break is made. When to "pull," when to ease the tension on the bit, when to make that movement which is oftentimes more effective in stimulating the horse than whip and voice to come at the critical period is the triumph of hands in driving trotters. More than that, downright force applied to the reins may bring about what the intention was to guard against. For instance, it is evident that a horse is likely to "overtrot" himself if he is not restrained. Merestrength entirely dependent upon the pain caused by the heavy pull may bring about the catastrophe where a lighter would accomplish the purpose. "Ride your horse as though the reins were a silk thread," was Chifney's advice, given the best part of a century ago, and the magician of his day was not far from wrong. This delicacy of touch is not entirely a natural gift. With greater propriety it may be termed the result of practice, or still better, a natural adaptation perfected by practice and observation.

When a man has had more than an average degree of success in bringing out young trotters, it is a fair inference that he will not lack in that part of race-driving. He has proved that he knows how to handle them so as to give speed, and also that his manipulation is proper for them to show speed. What then is the difference between the capacity to show well in a trial and make the like display in a public race? To revert to the case which instituted these notes. Let us suppose that the man who is to do the race-driving should fail to drive the colt as fast as the trainer who has him in charge. It would be a just conclusion that the trainer and colt were more in harmony, and that if the race were governed by the same conditions as the trials, that a like result would prevail. In all probability it would if the trainer entered upon the public performance with like confidence. Even if he lacked reliance in his own powers before he "weighed in," by the time a few scores were made, that feeling might be replaced by one of greater confidence. Timidity, too, is likely to be more fanciful than real. There are few who are without animal courage enough to meet the exigencies of a race. There is comparatively little danger of bodily injury. If sulkies come together it does not follow that there must be a crashing of bones as well as splintering of spokes, and even a tumble on the smooth surface of a track is not so bad as to be thrown out of a wagon on the drives of the park. So far as chances of accident are concerned, the odds are much shorter in favor of one occurring on a crowded street, or where road-driving rules, than in a race, no matter how many starters there may be. There are rules to govern in the latter, and the abler the competing drivers the less likelihood of trouble.

I am not surprised, however, that a beginner should prefer an easier job than that which is likely to be offered in our three-year-old races of this year. After making due allowance for exaggerated reports, there is enough to show that a colt would have to possess phenomenal powers to win with ease. Phenomena may be the correct expression, and in place a single "wonder," there may be several entitled to the appellation. That is also a disturbing element to an intending debentante. He magnifies what he hears, and though he expresses disbelief when he is told of some terribly fast trial, it weighs on his spirits and is an incubus that he cannot shake off. An old campaigner is not cast down from the knowledge that he is sure to meet some fearfully fast competitors. He has been so many times in the same situation that his equanimity is not disturbed by any amount of talk, the effect being mainly to redouble his exertions. This is one of the advantages which the veterans of the sulky hold over equally as good reinsmen who are without the experience.

Bair's Bad Break.

The following, cut from the San Jose Daily Mercury, gives a full account of what has been the topic of many conversations since the news of the defalcation was received. Although a one-sided statement, there can scarcely be a doubt that the man who was successful in making a fast trotter of Maud S. is guilty of the great crime of ingratitude, and therefore doubly culpable. If arrested and brought back to San Jose his evidence may give a different bearing, though there seems to be small chance to remove the odium.

A great sensation was created in sporting circles yesterday morning by an announcement to the effect that W. W. Bair, the horse trainer who drove Billy in the races on the Fourth, and who has been connected for some time with our horsey fraternity, had skipped the town, taking with him not only his good name and several trade debts, but $750 belonging to Fred Stern and $200 or $300 belonging to a few of the boys about town.

It seems that Fred Stern was desirous of helping Bair to get money enough to go East by advancing a few dollars for speculation in the races which took place at the Agricultural Park on Wednesday, for which purpose he placed $500 in the hands of Bair, for that gentleman to put on the winning horse of that day. Bair to receive half the profits for his judgment. Bair was of opinion that the winner would be Billy, and invested the capital on him, receiving the winnings on Thursday afternoon. However, hating to part with such a nice little sum, more especially as he was rather hard up, he seems to have left the town on the afternoon of that day, and has not been heard of since.

Mr. Stern yesterday swore out a warrant against Bair in Justice Buckner's Court for embezzlement, and the police are now looking for him, although Constable Haley had a warrant for him on Thursday afternoon, sworn out before Justice Pfister by Rudolph Messing, on a charge of leaving the State with intent to defraud him out of $150, the price of a sulky he had bought.

Mr. Messing went to Salinas by the freight train on Thursday night for the purpose of taking possession of the sulky, he having received information through a friend that the sulky was down there, and he recovered it yesterday.

"That's so!" said Mr. Stern, when asked by a Mercury representative if Bair had left him so badly in the lurch, and I'll tell you how it happened. You see, I've known him for quite a while, and besides he is an old friend of my foreman, Thornhill, who knew him back East sixteen years ago, and ever since he's been here he has come to the shop every day, and need to make use of my office to write letters.

"Well, he came to me last week and told me that he was going back East, as he couldn't make anything out here, and as he hadn't got a bean he asked me if I'd put up a little money on the horse he named, and we'd divide the profits, saying that if the horse didn't win he'd walk back to Philadelphia. Just to do him a good turn, as I liked the fellow, I gave him $500 to put on Billy, the money being placed in the hands of Jim Boyd.

"After giving him the money I went to Jim and told him to be careful with the money as it was mine, and asking him to let me know before he paid it to Bair, but he never did so, or else I wouldn't have lost my money. Anyway I haven't lost anything, as I hedged and won the money he skipped with, and about $180 more, from some of the boys, but I intended going away this summer and having a good time on my winnings, but as it is I will have to content myself with going to Milpitas or Gilroy now."

"How did you know that he had skipped out?" said the reporter.

"Well, you see, I heard he had settled up with Jim Boyd and that he was seen yesterday to get into one of the Stockton buggies with Jack Fleming and drive to Santa Clara and catch the 4:30 train, and as he told me that he had intended going away Friday (to-day), after he had squared up with me, I got kind of suspicious and then went down and swore out a warrant, and I hope they'll catch him."

"Did he let the firm in for anything?"

"Oh, about $10 or $12, besides $20 I lent him last week."

"Do you know if he owes anybody else any money?"

"Yes; as far as I can make out he owes the Fredricksburg Brewery boarding house about $75, Messing & Son about $150, Fykes $125 for feed for the horses, Lick House about $50, Adam Farrington $100 and Jim Herd, his rubber, about $40. He did owe Stockton Bros. some money, but I think he sold them a buggy or two and some harness and things to cover the debt."

"So you'll prosecute if he's caught."

"You bet your life I will! I wouldn't mind so much if I had put the money up on my own hook, but to put up the money to do him a good turn, and for him to turn round and serve me a dirty trick like that, I'll fix him if I get a show."

Bair came to San Jose some time last January from Philadelphia, where he had the lease of the Driving Park for the year 1887, but at the expiration of that year some one else bidding higher than he, he gave up the lease and came out here, bringing considerable experience with him, as he is the man who drove the world-famed Maud S. for Bonner, winning the race with the fastest time on record—2:03½.

Why he should have come out here is a mystery, as a man with his reputation as a horse trainer should be able to do well back East, but he is supposed to have flown pretty high, back in Lexington, or probably our climate attracted him. Anyway, he came here, leaving a wife in Cincinnati, probably because he had not sufficient of the ready to bring her with him.

He inveigled himself into the good graces of the sports here, and has had charge of a dozen horses more or less ever since his arrival, from which he must have made $300 to $400 a month, although what he did with it is a mystery, as he seems to have been pretty steady.

With a view of sending for his wife he rented a house belonging to J. H. Barber, on the Alameda, a few weeks ago, but owing to an alteration of his plans he gave it up, as he thought he would like to go back East, and probably he is on the way now, as up to the present his whereabouts are not known. As soon as a warrant was issued telegrams were sent to all points in this vicinity, but no information has as yet been received.

Mr. Thornhill stated to a Mercury representative that he was thunderstruck when he heard of Bair's action. "He sold himself too cheaply," he said. "All he had was his reputation, and that was worth more by far than the few hundred dollars he got away with. I was on very friendly terms with him back East, and when he came here, too. I never knew him to take a drink or smoke a cigar, and when he was running the park he was handling both every day. He had the management of Chester Park, Cincinnati, for nine years, and that is where he was bound for, as Captain Stone wanted him to come back and take charge of it again."

"What do you think he did with his money?"

"He will play faro."

Views of Great Breeders.

Some time during March the Lewiston (Maine) Journal addressed a circular to prominent breeders, asking their judgment on the best speed of which the trotter is capable, and if in their opinion 2:20 horses would be as plentiful in the middle of the twentieth century as the 2:30 are to-day, and their idea of the size of the future horse, etc. We copy a few replies:

I believe the 2:20 horse will be more plentiful in the middle of next century than the 2:30 horse now is. Perhaps twenty years hence the 2:20 lists will exceed the present 2:30 lists. The cross-bred trotting and road horse of the future will be required to be from 15½ to 16 hands high, by the best trotting progenitors, with a strong infusion of thoroughbred running blood, in both sire and dam. In this way you get courage, good, hard legs, and staying qualities, speed and a horse fit for the track, road and general utility, free from curby hock, ring-bone, spavin, and swelled legs. We believe in breaking colts when fifteen months old. Moderate work develops the muscle, and they make gentler and better horses.

T. E. MOORE.

Sbawhan, Ky.

I think a trotter will some day make a mile to harness, weights off, in 2:00.

I do not think the 2:20 horse will ever be as plentiful as the 2:30 horse of to-day.

Horses for road or track must be under 16 hands to stand the work. From 15½ to 15¾ hands is the best size for light driving.

The methods of training, feeding and handling must be decided by studying the horse, as hardly any two are alike.

The best blooded horse for the road is Morgan, crossed with the thoroughbred. You get style and finish, good legs and feet, and a will to do or die.

E. L. NORCROSS.

Fearnaught Farm, Manchester, Me.

The ultimate speed of the trotting horse in the near future will be close to two minutes. I am confident that 2:20 horses, inside of thirty years, will be as common as 2:30 horses are at the present time.

The future trotter will be a horse of fifteen hands, of the Sable Wilkes pattern, very short backs, "big timber," with the Wilkes propelling power and revolving gait, which must go without friction. I am satisfied most of the breeders of the trotting horse are sacrificing size for speed, to the detriment of the future breeding interests of New England.

I believe that within ten years there will be breeding farms for road horses, combining size, style, good tempo and natural trotting gait, without the thoroughbred blood, or at least having it a good way back.

There is no doubt in my mind that the trotting race-horse of the future must have a large proportion of thoroughbred blood in his veins, when three-minute races will be trotted in 2:15 or better. The best road horses of the present time are the class called quitters. The road horse of the future will be produced by a combination of the blood of the Morgan, Alexander Abdallah and Cuyler, which will give the pure trotting gait without weights or boots, and will be natural trotters.

If I were to advise the breeders of Maine for their future success, I would say: Breed for style, size and gait; look more to the stallion produce and what his get is than to himself individually; look up his ancestors; see there is no small blood back of him.

If you want a trotter, how easy it is to find him, but try and find a pair of nice roadsters, bay, 15.3, well-mated and can trot in 2:50, and see how hard they are to find, and after you have them, how easy it is to sell them for a good profit. The time is coming when the brood mares out of producing dams will be eagerly sought for and will bring very high prices. I believe in young mares that have not been worked much, and would prefer them out of 2:30 performers.

JOHN R. GRAHAM.

Boston, Mass.

A horse will trot just as fast as the natural and mechanical laws will permit, but I doubt if 2:06 will be beaten much. When you find an animal that can trot a quarter in 26 or 27 seconds, and with this speed has the necessary power and courage to go on and average as they do now, you have very near the two-minute trotter.

The 2:20 horse will be quite as numerous in the next century as the 2:30 horse of to-day. The future horse will be about 15.2, of substance, power and quality. For all harness purposes, on the track or on the road, more valuable than a 15-hand horse.

I agree with you that the scarcest article is a gentleman's road horse. An inbred Morgan will, in my opinion, best meet all the requirements, harring speed, but speed considered, the Wilkes family beats the world.

Lexington, Ky.

WM. L. SIMMONS.

I believe that two minutes will be very nearly, if not quite approached. I believe the 2:20 horse will be as plentiful long before the middle of the twentieth century as the 2:30 horse is to-day. Twenty years from now there will be as many 2:20 horses as there are 2:30 now. I do not believe the demand will be for much larger horses, however, than at present. The best size for a road and trotting horse combined is about 15.2, and that I think will be about the mark to aim at. I do not think that a 16-hand horse can and will be more valuable than a 15-hand one, but 15.2 or 15.3 is better than either.

The main object to be achieved by breeders is to develop stock young and then sell early. In order to do this, extra care in feeding and training young will be necessary. Plenty of feed and exercise the first two years will accomplish this. The best blood to produce a turf and road horse in my opinion is the Clay and Morgan, or Clay and Hambletonian, or Hambletonian and Morgan. At all events I think you must have some Clay or Morgan to make the road horse or gentlemen's driver.

J. W. DAY, M. D.

Waterloo, N. Y.

I have no doubt that the horse is capable of trotting in two minutes, and will reach that point by the twentieth century. I have no doubt that the little horse George O. trotted in his last race from the three-quarter pole to the head of the stretch, a two-minute clip. I should hardly think that the 2:20 horse would be as plentiful in the twentieth century as the 2:30 horse is to-day. I don't think the horse will be very much larger, and don't think it desirable. In my judgment the horse 15.1 to 15.3 is more desirable for speed and endurance than any other height; and for speed alone, I should be of the opinion that 15 hands would be better than 16. I think the team horses are being very much improved in size and quality. I am satisfied that the handling of horses has very much to do with their speed. I think the combination of Hambletonian and Knox the best for speed and endurance. It used to be thought that good feed was not what a colt wanted, but to let him come up on hay and grass; but I believe in good, generous feed, and continued good banding with all care.

GEO. O. BAILEY.

Belfast, Maine.

In answer to question first: About where it now is, not faster than 2:08. We have had the rate of 2:12 for nearly twenty years, but not the lasting powers to trot the last half till the last few years. Answer to second: Yes, if we continue the line of breeding we are now following, which is quite likely. Third: For all practical purposes, a 15-hand horse, if properly proportioned, will then, as now, be the horse sought. Then a 16-hand one will be the most valuable. Regarding the methods of breeding for the trotter, I can only give my own ideas. Want to breed to developed sires and dams, so far as practicable. Want young, sound mares bred in line, just as far as we can get them. Don't think the Creator is going to change the laws of nature to accommodate any one; while, consequently, if I want a trotter, I will have to breed to trotting lines on both sides to obtain the object sought. All stallions in service should be exercised daily, to barness, from eight to ten miles, and at least twice a week trotted out from a half to a full mile, part of the way at, or close to their highest rate of speed. We want all the flesh we can get on them, on the outside, but none on the inside. From experience and observation, we want both stallions and mares to be full of individuality, full of nervous energy, even to a little fullness.

Match Race at Portland.

There was quite a large attendance on June 23d at the City View Park, Portland, to witness a match race for $1,000 a side, between A. C. Brey's Little Joe and L. B. Lindsey's mare Palatina, so well known on our trotting tracks. The conditions were to rule, save that Mianer, the driver of Little Joe, was to pack up Lindsey's weight, which was about 175 pounds. The betting was almost even, but the mare was not in the best fix, so Little Joe took the lead in each heat and won handily in three straight heats in 2:43, 2:27½ and 2:27½. Following is a summary:

CITY VIEW PARK, June 23d—Match trotting, $1,000 a side to rule, save that Little Joe was to carry Lindsey's weight, about 175 pounds.
A. C. Brey names br g Little Joe, aged, by Bob Hunter, dam by St. Lawrence.....Miser 1 1
L. B. Lindsey names sp m Palatina by Milton Medium, dam Snowflake.....Lindsey 2 2
Time, 2:43, 2:27½, 2:27½.

Monmouth Park Races.

For New Yorkers there is no more popular track than Monmouth Park. On a fine, warm day, the trip down the bay and back is very pleasant, and as the cars run to the gates of the racetrack there is no fatigue attending the journey. The management is second to none in liberality and enterprise, and as a proof it may be mentioned that the moneys run for during the present meeting will average upwards of $8,000 a day. The grand stand and club house are built on a handsome and capacious scale, and as the track is within an easy drive from Long Branch, a great many ladies visit the track and form on the grand days a brilliant and fashionable assemblage.

On the 5th a heavy storm passed over the park which cooled and freshened the atmosphere, but at the same time, as usual, such an event had a disastrous effect on the favorites as not one could score a winning during the day. There were six races on the card, the main event being a dash of a mile for three-year-olds, in which the California filly Gorgo confirmed the good impressions she had made in the East by her form and pedigree, by winning in a handy manner, Mr. Belmont's George Oyster being the favorite and her chief opponent. Garrison had the mount on George Oyster but did not ride with his usual judgment, as he got pocketed on the turn, and when in the straight was utterly unable to get through. Senator Hearst's California-foaled filly Gorgo won very easily. She showed excellent form at Sheephead Bay, and if judiciously handled will certainly win some of the filly stakes. She is by Isonomy out of Faint, by Hermit. Isonomy, it will be remembered, was the horse that Parole beat for the Newmarket handicap on the occasion of his first race in England.

The only other starters from the Coast were Haggin's filly Blithesom, in the five-furlong dash, which Volta won handsly, and Porter Ashe's Flood Tide, who ran in a field of two-year-olds during the thunder-storm, neither showing prominently at any time.

The sensation of the day was the defeat of the fast mare Telie Doe by Paragon, a very commonplace colt from Cassatt's string. These two were the only starters, Favor and Prince Royal being scratched. Telie Doe wouldn't or couldn't run at all, and it is believed she was "stiffened" before the race.

The other races call only for the summaries which are as follow:

Three-quarters of a mile—Salisbury won, Lady Primrose second, Patrocles third. Time, 1:14.

Three-quarters of a mile—Diablo won, Holiday second, Gypsy Queen third. Time, 1:16.

One mile—Gorgo won, Inverwick second, George Oyster third. Time, 1:44.

One and one-eighth of mile—Tarragon won. Only two in the race.

Five-eighths of a mile—Volta won, Freedom second, Mona third. Time, 1:02.

One and one fourth miles over hurdles—Burr Oak won, Ed. Gilman second, Will Davis third. Time, 2:23.

On Saturday there was an immense attendance, the chief events being the Hopeful for two-year-olds, and the Lorillard Stakes for three-year-olds, in which some very prominent California horses were engaged. Mr. Baldwin had sent on Los Angeles from Chicago to do battle in the Lorillard Stakes, but unfortunately he did not send Murphy to ride the filly, and thus he failed to carry off the rich stake of $18,000. Mr. Haggin's Fitzjames, a half brother to Hidalgo, made his first appearance this season, but again Garrison disappointed his many backers by his poor riding. He ran under a strong pull for nearly a mile, when Los Angeles and Sir Dixon were fully six lengths in the lead. Most people now looked to see Garrison cut loose with Fitzjames at the end of the mile at least, considering the big gap he had to make up, but he waited nearly a quarter of a mile further. There Los Angeles and Sir Dixon were on nearly even terms, fully ten lengths ahead of Prince Royal and Fitzjames. The latter was now given his head, but it was too late, and the choking colt had got seemed to have taken all the race out of him. Coming into the homestretch Sir Dixon was at Los Angeles' neck, and in the run home McLoughlin sat right down on Sir Dixon, and finally won the big prize by two lengths. Los Angeles was six lengths ahead of Prince Royal and the others cantered home. Fitzjames was pulled up.

In the Hopeful stakes Haggin's colt Winfield showed improvement, with Brussels and Singlestone close up. Winfield led the party at a merry clip to the lower turn, where Singlestone was run into and pulled up. Winfield led into the homestretch, but there Withers' Favordale colt came on with a rush, and once in front he stayed there, winning by two lengths. Diablo, the favorite, did not get away any too well, but in the stretch he came with a rush, Winfield only heating him a head for the second place. The betting against the winner was 10 to 1, making two facers for the talent.

The third race, the Long Branch Handicap, was made the medium of some heavy betting. Kingston's good race with The Bard on Independence Day caused a plunge on him by the Dwyers and the public, and he started as the favorite at even money. Elkwood was quoted at 7 to 2, against 8 to 1 each against Eurus, Dunboyne and Triboulet, 12 to 1 against Favor, 15 to 1 against Belvidere, 20 to 1 against Lelogas, 25 to 1 against Stockton, and 30 to 1 each against Pirate and Bainbridge. The latter ran his first race for the year for Serator Hearst. Although the jockey did all he could his company was too good. The race was a grand one. For nearly a mile Eurus, Dunboyne, Favor and Pirate ran on nearly even terms, with Elkwood last of all. Then Pirate on the lower turn shot out and made up a gap of three lengths, leading into the homestretch. In the straight Kingston, Eurus, Dunboyne, Triboulet, and Elkwood came so fast that they all headed Pirate, and at the eighth furlong pole the horses were all abreast, with Belvidere closing fast. Eurus then swerved into Dunboyne, and Elkwood took the lead, only to be reached by Belvidere in the last few strides, the latter winning by a neck, with Kingstone third, a length behind Elkwood. Dunboyne will do to keep an eye on for distances of a mile or under.

Following is a recapitulation of the races:

First race, seven-eighths of a mile—Inspector B. won, Bradford second, Cambyes third. Time, 1:29.

Second race, three-fourths of a mile—Favordale won, Winfield second, Diablo third. Time, 1:16.

Third race, 1 1/2 miles—Belvidere won, Elkwood second, Langston third. Time, 2:10.

Fourth race, 1 1/2 miles—Sir Dixon won, Los Angeles second, Prince Royal third. Time, 2:37.

Fifth race, three-fourths of a mile—King Crsb won, Fulton second, Miracle third. Time, 1:16.

Sixth race, one mile—Long Knight won, Golden Reel second, Doric third. Time, 1:43.

Seventh race, steeplechase—Referee won, Bassanio second, Major Pickett third. Time, 5:09. John Henry and King Troubler fell.

John Henry was killed and his jockey, Dickens, seriously hurt.

It was a good day for the California horses on July 10th, for although they were disappointed in two races, they managed to capture two important stakes. The first was the Monmouth Oaks, worth $5,000, for which Mr. Baldwin's Los Angeles was first favorite, especially when it became known that Hayward was to ride the filly, and she won in the handiest possible fashion from a field of six others. The Dwyer Brothers depended upon Bella B. to win for them, but she failed utterly in the heavy going, and was beaten for place by ex-Governor Bowie's filly Belle d'Or.

Haggin's filly Firenze was looked upon as a certainty to win the Shrewsbury handicap at a mile and a half, but Eurus, who revels in mud, romped away from her in the easiest possible fashion, the pair spread-eagling the rest of the field of seven, in which Porter Ashe's Triboulet, who was looked upon as a particularly good thing, finished sixth. The mud plainly stopped him, for he ran well for a mile.

D. J. McCarthy won the rich July stakes, worth nearly $7,000, with his colt Sorrento, who is a fine brother to the winner of the Chicago Derby of a year ago, C. H. Todd. The colt ran a splendid race. He was last up to the last furlong pole. He then shot through and won in capital style with comparative ease. Like most of the Joe Hookers, the colt runs well in the mud, and the pace was not at all fast. He was able to lay well up all the time and win in the slowest time the stake has been run in since Ecola and George Kinney were winners in 1883 and 1882. Twenty to one straight, and 8 to 1 for place could be had against him in the books. Haggin's colt, Winfield, was looked upon as a good thing for this race, but he failed utterly and finished absolutely last.

Haggin's Aurelia, a hot favorite in the opening dash of a mile, was badly beaten, finishing fourth, which was the best place she could get at any time in the race. Recapitulation:

First race, one mile—Raspine won, Cambyes second, Oarsman third. Time, 1:46.

Second race, three-quarters of a mile (July stakes)—Sorrento won, Cyclone (colt) second, Gallop third. Time, 1:19.

Third race, one and a half miles (Shrewsbury handicap)—Eurus won, Firenze second, Rupert third. Time, 2:41.

Fourth race, one and a quarter miles (Monmouth Oaks)—Los Angeles won, Belle d'Or second, Belle B. third. Time, 1:54.

Fifth race, one and a sixteenth miles—King B. won, Sam Keene second, Clay Plate third. Time, 1:55.

Handicap Steeplechase (short course)—Bracahan won, Hill Davis second, Retribution third. Time, 3:19.

The Chicago Meeting.

Outside of the Emperor of Norfolk, Volante and Lee Angeles, the Santa Anita stable has not raced up to public expectation this season, but on the 5th, Caliente, the son of Rutherford, dam Marie Stuart, won the valuable Hyde Park stake for two-year-olds, three-quarters of a mile, with 79 subscribers. In the small field that contested for the stake, Liberty was made an even money favorite, some of the book-makers only laying 4 to 5, though a few of the venturesome ones risked 11 to 10. Mamie Fonso was strongly backed at 2 to 1, and 6 to 1 was laid against Spokane, 7 to 1 against Caliente, and 10 to 1 against Unlucky. Liberty had but little to do with the actual racing, and ran so poorly as to suggest loss of form. Mamie Fonso took the track at the start and set the pace, followed closely by Caliente and Liberty. At the half Liberty was second, but soon after passing that point he began to lose ground and gradually fell to the rear. At the three-quarters Mamie Fonso was half a length in front of Unlucky and he had Caliente's head at his saddle-girths. Mamie led into the stretch, but there she failed to hold her own and a merry run to the wire brought Caliente home a winner by three parts of a length in front of Unlucky, Mamie Fonso a good third. Caliente paid $26.10 straight and $17.50 for place, and Unlucky paid for place $24.80. The other races were of an uneventful character, so the summaries are given.

Six furlongs—Hector and Golightly ran a dead heat, Chancellor third. Time, 1:18. After the fifth race the dead heat was run off, Hector winning. Time, 1:18.

One mile—Wahoo won, Frederica second, Lemar third. Time, 1:48.

Three-quarters of a mile—Caliente won, Unlucky second, Mamie Fonso third. Time, 1:18.

One and one-sixteenth miles—Orderly won, Aristi second, Keynote third. Time, 1:56.

Six furlongs—Lithboet won, Carus second, Kedarkan third. Time, 1:18.

On the 6th seven races with eighty-eight entries, constituted the sport at Washington Park to-day, and despite the tropical heat 3,000 spectators enjoyed themselves. It was an extra day with no event of particular importance on the card.

Following is the recapitulation:

First race, five-eighths of a mile (selling), Joyful won, Benson second, Maud Ward third. Time, 1:02.

Second race, five-eighths of a mile (selling), Irish Dan won, Cassandra second, L. Dinkel-peil third. Time, 1:03.

Third race, one mile (selling), Irma H. won, Balance second, Mirth third. Time, 1:43.

Fourth race, seven-eighths of a mile (selling), Antonio won, Jim Ware second, Redstone third. Time, 1:30.

Fifth race, one and one-sixteenth miles, Santslene won, Fannie second, Says third. Time, 1:50.

Sixth race, three-quarters of a mile, Destruction won, Weaver second, Allie third. Time, 1:16.

Seventh race, three-quarters of a mile, Wary won, Lafitte second, Jacobin third. Time, 1:14.

The main event of the 7th was the Great Western Handicap, a mile and a half, for which the Chicago talent was very sweet on Bonita, but although she was very prominent in the running for a time, she gave place to Montrose, who came away and won in a very handy manner.

The second race was a mile and an eighth, for three-year-old fillies, for which Mr. Haggin's pair, Yum Yum and Prose, were the favorites. Yum Yum was fractions at the post, but at last got away in good style. She was about the middle of the bunch until rounding into the stretch. Then Hamilton caressed her slightly and she walked home comfortably, Amelia taking place by a short nose from Prose.

The other races merely call for a recapitulation:

First race, three-quarters of a mile—Queen of Trumps won, Bonnie Bonance second, Redlight third. Time, 1:17.

Second race, one and an eighth miles—Haggin's Yum Yum won, Amelia second, Haggin's Prose third. Time, 1:57.

Third race, one and a half miles—Montrose won, Longsight second, Woodcraft third. Time, 2:37.

Fourth race, seven eighths of a mile (selling)—Lepanto won, Castilian second, Jim Jordan third. Time, 1:29.

Fifth race, seven-eighths of a mile (extra)—Jennie McFarland won, Grey Cloud second, Jim Jordan third. Time, 1:29.

Sixth race, one mile—Badge won, Orderly second, Lelex third. Time, 1:42.

On the 10th the attendance was fair, and although the fields were small, the races were very good. The main event was the Maiden Stake, for which Lavinia Belle was a hot favorite on her public form. The horses were sent away abreast, and dashed past the stand with Amado a long neck in front of Leontine, and Prophecy following. The order was the same at the quarter, but at the half Lavinia Belle had moved into second place and Prophecy had gone to the rear. At the three-quarters Lavinia Belle was heads apart, and Murphy was trying to bring Winons upon terms with the pair. The California filly could not go the pace and was soon beaten. In the stretch a hard-driving race all the way down took place between Amado and Lavinia Belle, and the filly was clearly beaten when Amado suddenly swerved to get away from the whip, and let the filly get up and win. Silver Bell finished third.

The other races were of minor interest, so we restrict ourselves to the summaries:

First race, one and a sixteenth miles—Keder Kshn won, Irma H. second, Bonanza third. Time, 2:01.

Second race, one mile—Libretto won, Wahoo second, Galatin third. Time, 1:52.

Third race, one and an eighth miles (Maiden Stakes)—Lavinia Belle won, Amos second, Silver Bell third. Time, 2:08.

Fourth race, five-eighths of a mile—Mamie Fonso won, Unlucky second, Sportsman third. Time, 1:08.

Fifth race, one and a quarter miles (handicap sweepstakes)—Dad won, Lela May second, Arndel third. Time, 2:20.

On the 11th the track was still very heavy, and consequently a great many horses were stricken from their engagements, still the entries were fair enough to make good sport, the principle event being the Lake View Handicap. For this event there was some stiff wagering. Heron was a big favorite, and carried cords of bank notes, but for the third time he failed to justify the reputation for being a real good one that he has long enjoyed. The start was anything but good for him, he being absolutely last away, but the distance separating him from the leader at the start was not so great but what he should have won if he had been all that has been claimed for him. Either he has been over-rated or else he is not in form at this time. The Ireland pair—Haviland and Hindoo Craft—had no trouble in landing the rich stake, they running first and second. Benson ran well and may score a win before the meeting ends.

The summaries of the other events are as follows:

Six furlongs—Shotover won, Gleaner second. Time, 1:18.

One mile and one-eighth—Bonita won, Somerset second, Frederica third. Time, 2:05.

Three-quarters of a mile—Haviland won, Hindoo Craft second, Bisonclue third. Time, 1:18.

One mile and one-sixteenth—Maori won, Mirth second, Tudor third. Time, 1:55.

One mile—Business won, Kensington second, Antois third. Time, 1:48.

Favorites Against the Field.

Out of one hundred and nine English Derbies the favorite has won thirty-eight times only. That is to say, backers have been wrong in their choice twice out of every three times since Diomed won in 1780. On thirty-two occasions the first choice of the backers has been placed, which shows that the favorite is almost as likely not to get into the first three as he is to win, and thirty-nine times he has run second or third. Only twice in the history of the race has a first favorite started with as much as 5 to 1 against him. Glenartney, which was second to Manchester in 1827, and Fancypoppy, second to Pyrrhus the First in 1846, having been only 5 to 1 chances. "Odds out" favorites have been beaten for the Derby oftener than they have been successful. Eleven to 10 was laid on Gobannu, and he ran second to Waxy (12 to 1) in 1793; 6 to 4 was laid on Leon next year, and he ran third to Dædalus (6 to 1) in the smallest field that ever went to the post for this event—only four starters. The 5 to 4 on Wizard ran second to Pope (20 to 1) in 1809. After a dead heat with Cadland (whose name is kept alive by Cadland House, near the Newmarket station) in 1828, odds of 6 to 5 were laid on The Colonel and he was beaten. Riddlesworth, 6 to 4 on, ran second to the 50 to 1 chance, Spaniel, in 1831. MacGregor, 9 to 4 on, was unplaced to Kingcraft (20 to 1) in 1870; and last year The Baron, 5 to 4 on—lots of sixes were laid, though this is the quotation—was, as so many have cause to remember, second to Merry Hampton (100 to 9). Against these have to be set Sir Thomas, 1788, 6 to 5 on; Glyceraper, 1789, 7 to 4 on; John Bull, 1792, 6 to 4 on; Lord Lyon, 1866, 6 to 5 on, and now Agshire, which landed the same shade of odds this year. Favorites have been hot but unsuccessful.

CORRESPONDENCE.

In the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of June 30th, I was attracted by questions from "Subscriber, San Jose," affecting Killarney (pacer) and John Nelson (trotter), two stallions which have been to Yolo and adjoining counties very much what the Morgans and Messengers were to the steppers of the early trotting regions in our northeastern states. The question as to John Nelson is answered that he was a chestnut horse, foaled 1851, by a son of imported Trustee, dam Redwood mare by Old Abdallah. The correct answer should have been that John Nelson was sired by imported Trustee out of the Redmond mare (2:35), a daughter of Old Abdallah. He was the fastest trotter ever produced by Trustee, except trotting Trustee. John Nelson, the three-quarters bred son of the original Trustee, was too hot headed to make fame for himself, except as the sire of several fast ones in the second and later generations, and his name now in a pedigree is becoming the synonym of speed and gameness.

The other query was about Killarney (pacer), and the reply was: Killarney, bay horse, by Black Ralph, pacing record 2:20½. Pedigree of Black Ralph and of the dam of Killarney are unknown. The fact is that Killarney's record of 2:20½ in a fourth heat at Sacramento is better than the record above given. His dam was a dark brown mare brought from Kentucky by John Low, or his brother Ex-Governor Low, sired by imported Eclipse, a mare of very speedy private records, but never tried on the track. She fell into the hands of Dr. Barlow Smith, of San Francisco, and afterwards became the property of John Campbell, of Madison, Yolo County, who bred Killarney from her. Black Ralph was by David Hill, son of Vermont Black Hawk. The dam of Black Ralph, was by Maj. Winfield, afterward Edward Everett, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

The progeny of John Nelson and Killarney are very numerous in Yolo County, and are becoming very important to breeders, so I promise that there will be a further and more complete investigation as to the dam of Killarney, and some points in the pedigree of Black Ralph.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Please give prominent notice in your next issue to a change in dates of the fall meeting of the Overland Park Club Association of Denver, Col. The dates have now been fixed so that the meeting will commence Saturday, October 20th, and end on Saturday, October 27th. The change has been made in order that stables who may be engaged at the Latonia and other Kentucky racing meetings and the St. Louis and Lexington Fall Trotting Meetings will be enabled to reach Denver in time for the meeting. A full programme has been adopted, and will be advertised in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN in the next issue if possible to get it to you in time, certainly in that of the week succeeding. The entries will close on Wednesday, August 15th. The premiums will amount to $10,000.

Yours truly D. L. HALL, Secretary.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—From all sides I hear wonderful men tell what they think and pretend to know about the get of stallions, whose produce has not yet made a name upon the turf, that these failures and not good as speed producers, and that their trainers are failures in their profession. Now it would be better if these would-be wise men assuming such authority should study the opportunity that stallion or man has had in the past, before casting them off as rubbish. A stallion from a speed producing sire and dam, can't be a failure with fair opportunity in serving mares from speed producing sires and dams. This will make the man successful as a trainer and driver, and without such good qualities and opportunity the stallion must be a failure. It is needless to make comparison, unless such comparisons teach a lesson of some value to these would-be wise men, and hotel and blacksmith shop lobbyists of the different producing sires.

Take for instance Geo. Wilkes and Electioneer which lead all other stallions of this age, in turf performers. It is partly opportunity that makes Electioneer such a uniform speed producer. I wish to call the attention of these wise lobbyists of men to the produce of his dam which is Storm, 2:26½; Prospero 2:20; Dame Trot 2:22; Elaine 2:20; Mansfield 2:26; Antonio 2:28½, and you see that there was no such thing as Electioneer failing as a producer, but he was condemned and placed one side at one time of his life. The same with Geo. Wilkes. Now, I predict that Bell Boy will surpass his sire Electioneer as a producer of uniform speed, Guy Wilkes will surpass his sire Geo. Wilkes, and Director, Dictator; Stamboul and Alcazar surpass Sultan, and Steinway that of Strathmore. When men talk to me about what their stallions accomplish you can go to them with some strong facts. But here is one lobbyist comes at me single handed, rubbing his eyes and yawning the enquiry, "how is it that Anteeo, Cresco, Antevolo, Yosemite, Sable Wilkes, Norval, Dexter Prince, Hawthorne, Fallis, Clovis, Woodnut, Elect and many others that could be named, do not produce speed. All these come from speed producing lines." I answer them as I answered many such enquirers years ago that Sultan would justify my great expectation of him as a producer in a short time, he has fulfilled that promise; just so will the above horses fulfill my promise.

The same in the case of "Steinway." It is certain that he will produce speed, and his daughters will be valuable in the brood mare list. Now, as the season is over I don't say this to get mares, but to do justice to "Steinway," and the gentlemen who owns colts and fillies by him. The following is a list of mares having foals sired by him while in this State, so that competent men can judge for themselves:

"Steinway," bay horse foaled 1876, by Strathmore, sire of twenty-three in the 2:30 list, and four better than 2:20½. Yearling trial 2:58, two-year-old record 2:31½, three-year-old record fourth heat 2:25½, half-mile to wagon in 1:07½; dam Abbess, the dam of Solo, five-year-old record 2:28½, trial 2:21, and Soprano, (who produced C. F. Clay, five-year-old stallion record 2:18, and Eminence three-year-old record 2:27½;) Abbess was by Albion, sire of Vanity Fair, 2:24, 2d dam by Marshal Ney, son of imp. Emancipation.

Lady Blanchard, one filly, trotted a quarter in 38 seconds, now in stud at Mr. Corbitt's stock farm, one five-year-old gelding now in Philadelphia, trial for John Turner 2:25.

Carry Clay, horse colt, one filly now in stud.
Dazzle, by Billy Goldust, one filly and one horse Capt. Kohl.

Lady Dudley, one filly, can trot in 2:40, one gelding.

Grapevine mare, a colt, died in foaling.

Kishencower, two fillies, one dead, and one horse colt.

Leah, one filly.

Maud M., one filly record 2:31, and two horse colts.

Nourmahal, one filly, fast, died, and two horse colts.

Priceless, a gelding, on road in city.

Sciatica, thoroughbred, one filly and one horse colt, trial 2:38.

Ellen Swigert, two colts, both dead.

Lady Winkley, one filly, refused $2,500 for her, owned by R. Hastings.

Tiffany mare, (dam of Gibraltar), one filly, one horse colt.

Phacola, one filly now in stud at Cook Farm, and one weanling.

Katy Tricks, one two-year-old gelding, driven a quarter in 43 seconds.

Imogene, one filly, fast pacer.

Fanny Malone, one filly, new in stud.

Alla, by Almont, one filly now in stud, one three year-old gelding.

Maud H. (by The Moor), a three-year-old gelding.

Mattie, two fillies, two and three-year-olds, both can trot quarters better than forty seconds.

Katie G, by Electioneer, one filly and three colts.

Annie Laurie, one filly and two geldings.

Kittie, saddle mare, one filly, one gelding.

Old Dove, farm mare, one filly, one gelding.

J. D. Smith's mare, a filly.

Crosey, one filly, one gelding colt.

Baldwin mare, a filly, died.

Nettie, by Elmo, one filly and one gelding.

Olita, by Nutwood, one gelding, three years old, fast pacer.

Billie, farm mare, two colts.

Gray Norman, farm mare, one filly.

Roan Fanny, farm mare, one filly.

Dove Jr., a Norman farm mare, a horse colt.

Magie, Norman farm mare, a filly.

Lodi mare, two foals, property of R. G. Head, Napa.

Nella Grant, one filly, property R. G. Head, Napa.

Dolly McMann, (dam of Lilly Stanley, 2:20), a filly, Zinfandel, now in the stud of L. J. Rose.

William Meese, one filly, in stud, and one colt.

Bloomfield Maid, I think one gelding.

Harry Meeks, a filly, a fast pacer.

Countess, (dam of Dawn, 2:19½), a horse colt Strathway.

Wiley farm mare, one filly and one gelding.

Puss, Mustang saddle mare, two geldings.

Woods black road mare, one weanling.

Miss Arner, saddle pony, a two-year-old gelding.

Mr. Edda's farm mare, a filly.

C. Derby's mare, four foals.

Lady Wattle, a two-year-old colt, sold in N. Y.

Whitman's chestnut mare, a weanling.

Princess, a weanling filly.

Kittie, two colts.

Ramona, by Anteeo, a horse weanling.

So your readers can see that Steinway has but seventy-six living foals out of all classes of mares; two seven-year olds, five five-year-olds, six four-year-olds and ten three-year-olds, and from that to weanlings. Now can any fair-minded man say that Steinway has had a good chance to show himself a fast producer? Out of the seventy-six foals, I know one with a record at four years old of 2:31, six trotters and pacers that have gone the mile out in 2:30 and better, so I am told, and one three-year-old that trotted a quarter in 38 seconds, and a two-year-old full sister in 50 seconds, so I am told by their owners. I never trained but two of his colts and they were Conny and Derby, one month at any one time.

Yours very truly, SAM'L GAMBLE.
DANVILLE, Contra Costa Co., Cal., July 4th, 1888.

On Hereditary Descent.

A very important and wide-reaching movement has recently been inaugurated in England in connection with cattle shows, which in a measure correspond with our agricultural fairs. It has now become the rule of these associations to exact a veterinary certificate as to the soundness of the stallions and mares to be used for breeding purposes that are exhibited at these show yards. The consequence was the enforced rejection of a number of stallions because pronounced unsound, and this has been followed by a somewhat heated controversy on the subject, the owners of the rejected horses in some cases even claiming that the action of the association has been prompted by a spirit of jealousy among other more favored exhibitors. The following from an English County journal very ably represents the necessity of a thorough examination of every stallion competing for show prizes:

Breeders of horses are specially interested in questions regarding the conformation, soundness and suitability of the horses and mares they are using for breeding. The standard of type and character varies much; admittedly it is not so universally good as it should be; but in most districts breeders are more particular than they have been as to the choice both of sire and dam. Following the example of the Royal Agricultural Society of England and the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland, many local associations and farmers' clubs are exerting themselves to procure for their districts superior, serviceable, sound stud horses, both of the heavier and lighter breeds. These exertions have a notable educating effect; they bring together more choice, good animals; they thus afford breeders the opportunity of seeing useful, profitable horses of several descriptions, and must gradually multiply the number of salable horses of good class and diminish the proportion of unprofitable nondescripts.

It is obviously desirable that the interest now developed should be kept alive and bear as much practical fruit as possible. Competent judges and observant veterinarians realize that a vast amount of faulty conformation, thriftless weakness, and preventible disease has heretofore been ignorantly and carelessly procreated. Some hopeful improvement has been made in the selection and distribution of good stud horses free from hereditary disease. The system ought to be more generally and widely adopted, alike in regard to the heavier and lighter breeds of horses. In further encouragement of the use of sound sires, is it not practicable that all stud horses, whether exhibited for national or county premiums, or taking money for service, should obtain the certificate of a qualified veterinarian? Insistence on a veterinary certificate for all horses entered for exhibition might at present thin considerably the ranks of many show-yards; but certainly, without a certificate, no animal should be entitled to either premium, commendation, or honorable mention. The possession of useful points and freedom from hereditary disease are equally essential for breeding animals. It is impossible to say which is the more important. The one without the other is almost worthless. The horse, no matter how good-looking, if marred by serious unsoundness, is of small value. An animal, on the other hand, may be perfectly sound, but from faulty shape or want of action may be almost useless for breeding purposes. To endow such an unworthy subject with a certificate of soundness might unjustifiably give him very undeserved preferment.

Not much has been done in the way of keeping any reliable systematic record of the progeny of even first-class horses, and yet such records would convey much valuable information as to hereditary transmission and other practical matters. To be of service they would, however, require to include a record also of the mares, which, unfortunately, are often judged of by even a lower standard than that applied to the horse. To raise this standard is difficult; some farmers still breed chiefly from mares that are old or otherwise unfit for work. They ignore the fact that the female parent contributes equally with the male to the size, style, serviceable qualities and soundness of the progeny. In order to discourage the use of inferior and unsound mares, it has been suggested that the committee engaging horses throughout a district, on their own initiation or on requisition of the owner of such horses, presumably solicitous for their credit, should take authority to prevent worthless or unsuitable mares being mated with them.

Breeders are less scrupulous than they should be regarding soundness either in the sire or dam, inasmuch as the penalty in many cases is a remote one. The horse that is blind, a roarer, or has weak, bad feet, does not beget foals in which such patent defects are apparent. Indeed, it is often only when the young animals reach adolescence, and have, perhaps, passed into other hands, and are subjected to full work, that the inborn hereditary disease manifests itself. Some astute horse-breeders endeavor to deceive themselves and others by arguing that the transmission of so-called hereditary diseases is by no means certain, and that faulty animals produce tolerably sound and salable stock. This certainly may occur, but it is the exception and not the rule. There is no gainsaying the old aphorism that "like produces like." The unbroken colts of unsound parents may show no indications of disease, but the inborn hereditary tendency renders them specially liable to the family ailment so soon as they are subjected to trying hard work.

Diseases, although depending upon heredity, it is stated with truth, are likewise producible by other causes. Blindness, for example, may result from specific ophthalmia, which is hereditary, or from an accidental injury. Spavin may be caused by inherent fault of conformation, from a young growing horse being unfairly worked, or occasionally it may result from an external injury. The blind or spavined horse, it is sometimes declared, has come by his fault by accident and not by inheritance, and it is protested—we think, quite erroneously—that diseases thus accidentally produced are not transmissible. Neither the symptoms nor the nature of the case enable the practitioner to determine the precise cause of the unsoundness. Even a candid history seldom enables a judgment to be formed as to the causes that have produced disease. Roaring, for example, occurs in many big, fine, carriage horses; it is notoriously hereditary; but owners and breeders sometimes endeavor to justify the use of a sire which has this serious defect, by the statement that the disease was accidentally caused by an attack of strangles or by a bad cold. Without the hereditary predisposition, these conditions would probably, however, have been insufficient to produce roaring. Even could it be demonstrated that this form of defective breathing had apparently resulted from accidental conditions, experience and observation go to show that it is nevertheless liable to be transmitted. The wise and safe practical rule must, therefore, be adhered to—that horses affected by hereditary disease, despite such disease being stated to depend upon accidental causes, should not be used for breeding purposes. Especially should this rule be insisted upon in regard to such serious forms of unsoundness as blindness, roaring, spavins, curbs, navicular disease, ring-bones, and side-bones.

An intelligent examination of such considerations exhibits the wide, far-reaching bearing of hereditary descent, and the necessity of horse owners being scrupulous and careful in breeding from such animals only as possess the type, qualities and sound health which they desire to secure in the progeny. Adhering strictly to such principles, the breeding of horses need not be the lottery it has sometimes unfairly been stated to be, and might be rendered greatly more certain and profitable than it generally is, for, in spite of the complaint of bad times, there is an increasing demand for superior horses of every description; while dealers rightly affirm that the best become more scarce, and can always be disposed of at full value.

WHIP AND REIN.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

The Victoria, Australia, Racing Association will give over $130,000 at the spring meeting this year, the Melbourne Cup being worth over $20,000.

French Park, that is the best two-year-old on the running turf this season, pulled up lame a few days ago, and has been thrown out of training.

Patron, 2:14½, will not be trotted in races this year, and the engagements made for him have been cancelled. A heavy season in the stud is the reason given for the move.

I. U. Shippee, Stockton, Cal., has purchased from L. & G. Strass, Lexington, Ky., for $1,100, the four-year-old bay broodmare The Teal by Hindoo, out of Mundane, and her colt at foot by Leonatus.

William Doble, father of the well-known trainers Budd and Charley Doble, celebrated his seventy-second birthday at Belmont Course, Philadelphia, recently. He is a well-preserved and active old gentleman.

The pacing filly Irma H., by Nutwood, that made a record of 2:24½ last season as a two-year-old, was driven a quarter in 31½ seconds over the Lexington track not long ago, and it is thought by her sanguine trainer that she may beat Sable Wilkes' record of 2:18 as a three-year-old this season.

Minnie R., the double-gaited Kittson mare, is the phenomenal variety performer, and her trotting record of 2:19, pacing record of 2:16½, and mile, with running mate, in 2:03½, remain unequalled. She was purchased at the recent closing out sale of the Kittson stock by I. N. D. Solomon, of Omaha, Neb., for $1,825.

Mr. Swigert's Rotherhill has a good two-year-old out in England this year. Link Boy, by Rotherhill, out of Last Link, by Albert Victor or Chevron, has won three stakes this spring. He is a strongly in-bred colt, the dam of Rotherhill, Laura, being also the dam of Last Link.

The three stallion stakes of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association filled well. The 2:21 class has 16 entries, the 2:25 class 18 entries, and the 2:30 class 26 entries. The Ashland stakes for yearlings has 50 entries. The meeting will be held at Lexington Ky., October 8 to 13.

The Kittson Sale.

The sale of trotting stock left by the late Commodore Kittson, took place at the Midway Farm, near St. Paul, on Wednesday of last week and was a great success. A list of the animals disposed of and the prices obtained is as follows:

STALLIONS.

Blackwood Jr., rec. 2:22½, black h. foaled 1871, by Blackwood, dam Belle Sheridan by Blood's Black Hawk; 2d dam by Moreland's Highlander. This is the sire of Miss Woodford, 2:23½; Hardwood, 2:24½, and Little Tommy, 2:27½. Bought by James Hazelton, Indianapolis, Ind., $1,400.

Revenue, rec. 2:22½, bay h. foaled 1876, by Smuggler 2:15½, dam May Morning, 2:30, by Daniel Lambert, 2:42; second dam May Queen by Ethau Allen, 2:25½; third dam Pocahontas pacer, 2:17½, (dam of Pocahontas, 2:26½, Strideaway, 2:31, and Tom Rolfe, 2:33½), by Iron's Cadmus. Bought by Thomas H. Bagnell, Marshall, Mo., $2,350.

Vou Arnim, rec. 2:19½, bay h. foaled 1874, by Sentinel, 2:29½, dam Mary Short by Blood's Black Hawk; second dam by Downing's Bay Messenger. Bought by J. R. Boyd, Defiance, Ia., $1,050.

BROODMARES.

Astoria, rec. 2:29½, br m. foaled 1870, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam Clara by Seely's American Star. This is a full sister to Dexter, 2:17½, Alma 2:23½ and Dictator. She has a suckling colt by Revenue, 2:22½, and is bred to Vou Arnim, 2:19½. Bought by A. H. Warren, St. Paul, for the stable of Mr. Bonner, New York, $2,350.

Brightlight, bay m. foaled 1878, by Lyle Wilkes, dam by Clay, in foal to Revenue. Bought by J. W. Booker, Champaign, Ill., $500.

Daisy Rolfe, bay m. foaled 1884, by Blackwood Jr., 2:22½, dam Lady Rolfe, 2:22½, by Tom Rolfe, 2:33½, with suckling filly by Revenue, 2:22½, and bred back to Revenue. Bought by J. I. Case, Racine, Wis., $550.

Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16½, two mile record 4:43, ch m. foaled 1874, by Almont, dam Lizzie Witherspoon by Gough's Wagner, bred to All-So. Bought by E. C. Long, St. Paul, Minn., $4,500.

Gem, pacer, 2:13½, b m. foaled 1875, by Tom Rolfe, 2:33½, out of Lady Gem by Sam Hazard, bred to All-So. Bought by C. C. Lyford, Minneapolis, Minn., $2,025.

Juliet, bay m. foaled 1875, by Western Chief, dam Bay Fanny (dam of Resolute, 2:27½, and Alexander, 2:28½), by Richard's Bellfounder; second dam Lady Mary by Signal, with suckling filly by Revenue, bred to Blackwood Jr. Bought by James Hazelton, $650.

Lady Grosbeck, 2:25½, gray m. foaled 1871, by Star of the West, 2:26½, dam Fanny Jewett (dam of John R. King, 2:29½), with suckling filly by Revenue. Bought by Thomas R. King, Morrison, Ill., $510.

Lady Rolfe, 2:22½, bay m. foaled 1875, by Tom Rolfe, 2:33½, dam Nellie, bred to All-So. Bought by J. I. Case, $925.

Minnie R., (trotting record 2:19, pacing record 2:16½, with running mate 2:03½); bay m. foaled 1873, by J. C. Breckenridge, dam by Exchequer, a thoroughbred, bred to All-So. Bought by I. N. D. Solomon, Omaha, Neb., $1,825.

Sannie G., 2:27, gray mare foaled 1872, by Almont, dam Wiltona by imp. Moklahdi (Arabian); second dam Medora by Roderick Dhu, third dam Medora Howard by Carolinian; with suckling colt by All-So, bred back to All-So. Bought by Vibelin Bros., Milwaukee, Wis., $850.

So-So, 2:17½, bay foaled 1876, by George Wilkes, dam Little Ida by Alexander's Elwin Forrest; second dam Ida May by Red Jacket, with suckling colt by Blackwood Jr. Bought by F. D. Stout, Dubuque, Ia., $8,500.

Zs Von, bay foaled 1884, by Von Arnim, dam Zalia; with suckling colt by Revenue, bred back to Revenue. Bought by Thomas H. Bagnell, $570.

FILLIES.

Minnie Winnie, chestnut filly, foaled 1884, by Simmons, dam Annie Cook, by Pacing Abdullah; second dam Carrie by Mambrino Medley; third dam Martha Woods, by son of Mambrino Chief. Bought by Vibelin Bros., Milwaukee, Wis., $2,100.

Restoria, chestnut filly, foaled 1886, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam Astoria, 2:29½, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Clara (dam of Dexter, 2:17½, and Alma, 2:23½), by American Star. Bought by J. I. Case, $1,600.

Revelight, bay filly, foaled 1887, by Revenue, dam Bright Light, by Lyle Wilkes, 2d dam by Clay. Bought by J. R. Boyd, $285.

Revespoon, chestnut filly, foaled 1887, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16½, by Almont; second dam Lizzie Witherspoon, by Gough's Wagner. Bought by Charles Thompson, $2,250.

Reve-So, bay, foaled 1886, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam So So, 2:17½, by Geo. Wilkes; second dam Little Ida, by Elwin Forrest. Bought by J. I. Case, $1,800.

COLTS.

All-So, bay h. foaled 1884, by Blackwood Jr., 2:23½, dam So-So, 2:17½, by Geo. Wilkes; second dam Little Ida by Edwin Forrest. Bought by M. T. Pooler, Skowhegan, Me., $1,300.

Asteroid, seal brown h. foaled 1884, by Blackwood Jr., dam Astoria, 2:29½, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Clara (dam of Dexter). Bought by J. W. Booker, Champaign, Ill., $1,600.

Collector, bay h. foaled 1885, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam Lady Rolfe, 2:22½. Bought by W. E. Ragsdale, Hopkinsville, Ky., $1,710.

Felix Jr., bay h. foaled 1887, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam Minnie R., trotting 2:19, pacing 2:16½, by J. C. Breckenridge, bought by H. Charlton, Pembina, Dak., $925.

Renown, bay h. foaled 1886, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam Sannie G., 2:27, by Almont; second dam Wiltona by imp. Moklahdi. Bought by J. S. O'Brien, Stillwater, Minn., $975.

Rolfe, bay h. foaled 1886, by Revenue, 2:22½, dam Lady Rolfe, 2:22½. Bought by H. C. Moore, Fond du Lac, Wis., $1,300.

Von R., bay foaled 1886, by Vou Arnim, 2:19½, dam Sister by Swigert; second dam by Richard's Bellfounder. Bought by J. W. Booker, $800.

Woodlight, bay foaled 1886, by Blackwood Jr., 2:23½, dam Brightlight by Lyle Wilkes; second dam by Clay. Bought by J. R. Boyd, $310.

Important Sale of Short Horns.

Messrs. Killip & Co., are authorized to announce an auction sale on Thursday, August 16, of the noted Short-Horn herd of Cattle of Mr. Robert Ashburner of Baden Station, San Mateo Co. Mr. Ashburner has long been celebrated as one of the leading cattle men of the State, and his herd is well known throughout the Coast. The sale will comprise fifty head each of thoroughbreds and high grade cattle. Further particulars will appear in our advertising columns.

Colusa Tournament.

The scores of the trap tournament given at Colusa on July 2d and 3d, reached us last week through the kindness of Mr. Al. Donaldson, but too late for publication. As to number of participants the event was not of especial note, but when the prominence at the spot of those who did attend is considered the tournament may be considered a notable affair. Colusa sportsmen are noted for liberality of entertainment, and they did not belie their fair fame. The visitors found pleasant accommodations ready, and several evening diversions arranged, which contributed much to the pleasure of the meeting. Such as have been seen unite in thinking the tournament one of the most delightful trap gatherings of the year. Some difficulty was found in getting birds, and the surrounding farms were levied upon, the result being the strongest and liveliest lot of birds shot at this season. Added to this there was a strong wind favoring the birds and making tailers the rule. The best shooting during both days was done by Messrs. F. J. Bassford, Al. Donaldson and Crittenden Robinson. Henry Bassford was out of practice and form. George W. Watson had not handled a gun for months. Lopez was in good shape, but had much bad luck, and fair excuses might be offered for the rest who failed to win. It was a meeting of experts of the highest rank, any one whom would be a safe choice if a wager was pending. On the evening of the first day a ball was given, at which the shooters demonstrated their command of all social graces and became acquainted with the townspeople, particularly those in whom youth, beauty, amiability and femininity concentrated. The matches were all but one Hurlingham style, at 30 yards rise, from five ground traps.

FIRST DAY.

At 5 birds. $5 entrance. F. J. Bassford, first; Al. Donaldson, second, in tie; third divided by G. W. Watson and Lopez.

At 20 birds. $15 entrance. Al. Donaldson, first; F. J. Bassford, second; third divided by Lopez and McGonigle.

At 15 birds. $10 entrance. F. J. Bassford, first; C. Robinson, second; Lopez and F. Watson divided third.

At 13 birds. $10 entrance. F. J. Bassford, first; C. Robinson, second; Lopez and F. Watson divided third.

At 4 pairs, 18 yards rise, plunge trap rules. $5 entrance. Al. Donaldson and C. Robinson divided first and second; H. A. Bassford and F. J. Bassford divided third.

At 10 birds. $5 entrance. Won by F. J. Bassford.

At 10 birds. $5 entrance. Won by F. J. Bassford.

At 10 birds. $5 entrance. Won by F. J. Bassford.

Decision in the Bennett-Paine Match.

The referee in the revolver match for the world championship between Messrs. Bennett and Paine has sent the following decision to the stakeholder.

N. R. A. OFFICE, New York, June 26.—A. G. McVey, Esq., Boston Herald: The Paine-Bennett dispute in the recent revolver match having been left to me for final settlement, I have to-day heard the case as presented by the respective judges, Messrs. Dexter and Fellows and Mr. Bull the referee. In my judgment the provisions in the terms of the match, that it should be "play or pay" and that "either party failing to observe any of the conditions herein agreed to shall forfeit all money deposited," required that each contestant should fire 600 shots. Chevalier Paine having refused to do this he thereby forfeited his right to the stakes. It is immaterial in my opinion whether Mr. Bennett used a proper pistol or not. Chevalier Paine should have shot the match through if he intended to claim the stakes. If the rules of the association are to be strictly adhered to, the protests are of no value, for No. 5 of the general regulations plainly says, "all protests must be made in writing in duplicate." The protest of June 7 was against the sights used by Mr. Bennett as not being what was demanded in the articles of agreement. The terms of the match were that the revolvers should be a Smith & Wesson .44cal. Russian model. There is no mention made of any particular sight. I understand that in revolver competitions the description of this pistol allows it to be used with the wedge sight used upon military revolvers or with a target sight; that it is sold with both, and that the latter is the sight which is used by all contestants in competitions with this pistol. Both the competitors used front sights of this description, there being but little difference between them, and I see no reason why one sight was not as fully within the rules as the other, and why both were not admissible. I do not think that the regulations of the N. R. A. in regard to time allowed competitors to shoot at Creedmore with rifles apply to a match of this description. There is no limitation in the rules or is any enforced in regard to the time allowed in revolver competitions, nor do I consider that the words "100 shots a day" can be construed to mean 100 shots in 100 minutes. I therefore decide that the protest cannot be sustained, and that Mr. Bennett is the winner of the match. Yours very respectfully, JOHN S. SHEPHERD, Sec. N. R. A.

Blue Rock Club.

A July attendance of but five at the Blue Rock meeting at Bird's Point on Saturday last, argues very strong counter attractions in the way of trout fishing and dove shooting. A strong northeast wind materially assisted the flight of the targets and accounts in a great degree for the rather low scores of those who shot.

At 20 single Blue Rock targets, 18 yards rise. For club trophies.

At 10 singles, similar conditions.

At Bakersfield.

A team from the Traver Gun Club visited Bakersfield on July 4th and shot a match with a like number of members of The Knights of the Trigger.

The visitors were entertained at the elegant club rooms of the local organization and passed a pleasant day. The birds were fresh, but the stillness of the day and intensity of the heat made it easy to roll up high scores. Secretary, P. C. Jurgens of the Traver team had a clean score until some fair admirer remarked that he was the best shot present, an intimation that so rattled him that he got four straight "eggs."

But two clean scores were made, by Messrs. Fitzgerald and Day of the home team. The Knights won by 36 to 32.

At 10 birds. TRAVER TEAM.

At 10 birds. BAKERSFIELD TEAM.

The Humboldt County Sportsman's Club holds its first trap meeting to-morrow, using live birds.

Trinity Summit, in Humboldt County, referred to elsewhere, is near Hoopa Valley, Indian Reservation, and is easily reached.

The Lincoln Gun Club has challenged the Blue Rock Club to shoot for the inter-club trophy, recently won by the latter. Time and place to be at option of the B. R. C.

To-day and to-morrow at San Diego the "Standard Medal Shooting Tournament" is to be shot. The prizes are valuable and general interest is being taken in the event. We expect to receive full scores.

A picturesque ten bird pigeon match was that shot at Cincinnati by Miss Annie Oakley and Mr. Al. Bandle. The petite lady handles her gun like a Robinson, and is an antagonist not safely to be underestimated. It was thought that Mr. Bandle's gallantry would make him lose the match, but he won by 10 to 9.

On Crossa Creek and its branches, near Traver, Tulare County, the grass is alive with young ducks. We regret to learn that they are being killed in large numbers. The practice is unsportsmanlike, and the game is soft, tasteless and quite worthless. The Traver Gun Club should put a stop to the killing of flappers.

A correspondent writes from Humboldt County that a party of hide hunters is camped on Trinity Summit, and has been killing deer wholesale for their skins. Trinity Summit is one of the best regions in the State for deer, the forked-horn or chemise deer, the heaviest and best deer of the coast, being especially numerous. The party referred to is reported to have killed more than one hundred deer, leaving the carcasses to the buzzards and coyotes, a criminal waste, in contemplation of which ordinary phrases of animadversion seem stale and ineffectual. After all efforts of the press, local and general, after repeated convictions for like offenses, after many demonstrations of a public sentiment abhorrent to such villany, that citizens of Humboldt can be so lost to regard for the good opinion of their neighbors, and so utterly lacking self respect, may well excite remark. If there was no statute law in the premises, there would yet be sufficient influence in a sense of right to restrain really decent men, but when there is added to the instinctive repugnance to mere slaughter, an express mandate of the written law, the man who puts both to contempt may well be avoided and stigmatized as a fit associate only for the criminal classes, against whom the machinery of the office of the District Attorney of Humboldt County has been so effectively put in operation heretofore. The names of the offenders have not been given, nor is it likely that if published their despicable owners would feel the sting of shame; but we may urge upon the sportsmen of Eureka and the county the necessity of stopping such unlawful and ruinous practices as that referred to. If sportsmen work together, their influence cannot but move the proper authorities.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Whelps.

Mr. H. T. Payne's English setter Princess Claude, whelped June 26th, 1888, seven, four dogs, to Melua's Grouse II. Five since dead.

Prefix Claimed.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I beg to advise you that Mr. W. Stewart Diffenderfer, Baltimore, Md., has filed his application, for the sole use of the prefix Woodbrook. Objections, if any, may be forwarded to me at any time within two weeks. A. P. VREDENBURGH, Secretary A. K. C. NEW YORK, N. Y., June 30, 1888.

A special meeting of the American Kennel Club will be held at No. 44 Broadway, N. Y., on July 23d, for the purpose of acting upon applications for membership from clubs whose shows are to be held early in the autumn, and other urgent business. Members of the Pacific Kennel Club who desire to offer suggestions or amendments to enactments of the A. K. C. should address the representative of the club, Mr. Elliot Smith, at 59 Wall St., N. Y.

Kennel readers will sympathize with Mr. Payne in the loss of a valuable litter of English setters noted elsewhere. Mr. Payne's brood bitch Claude is a very good one indeed, being out of a daughter of Bergundthal's Rake and by Rake. An infusion of the blood of Llewellyn's Dan, stronger than in any other setter in America, if memory serves. The sire Grouse, is by Mayberry's Dan, a grandson of Duke and Rhoebe, the parents of Llewellyn's Dan, and is a very good dog. A previous litter of the same breeding has grown into sound, able dogs. We are not advised about the cause of death.

ROD.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Angling folks differ from sportsmen of other degrees in more respects than one. Shooting men are less given to pure speculation. Given a hardy man a gun and a dog, the problem is how quickest to fill the bag, and as a rule it may be said that nothing but concentration upon that thought will ensure creditable success. Coursers must perforce watch the slips, the dogs and surrounding hummocks until game is sighted, at which moment all interest centers in the hare and dogs, with no room for discussion or thought and less care for collateral incidents. The lone fisherman is usually cast in different mould. It may be true that ultimately his incentive to excursions is the same, but it seems also true that he is more prone to linger by the wayside and drink in the thousand beauties as "the exposed fleece drinks in the dew." The very implements of the craft suggest the lover of peace and quiet. A simple rod, a line and some flies, noiseless in operation and bloodless in effect, suffice, with a good conscience, to outfit the angler.

Most fishermen begin their careers queerly. Taken out by friends and given opportunity to hook a trout, or mayhap a salmon, if they have the vis naturale on returning to civilization, they prepare for future independent visits to water-sides, and usually begin by selecting rods, the least essential of the few traps needed in taking game fish. In fact, many men of many minds agree in purchasing elaborate sets of rods and reels before providing the most necessary articles. The reasonable man who desires to catch fish would perhaps argue thus, "What do fish first see of all the tackle," and answering say, "the fly." So beginning with his hook he would build up his system of fishing impedimenta. As to hooks, opinions differ widely, as may be proven to the satisfaction of any one who will be at the trouble of gathering samples from distinguished adepts. A whole gamut of forms, bends and barbs can be arranged from those chosen by any score of anglers. The tyro will, despite advice and the uniform success of advisers, usually try for himself a lot of hooks, most of them vitally faulty, and at last settle upon the style now most generally used, some sneek bend. As to size, it is hard to convince the raw hand that the actual pull of the trout which seems to weigh a pound, is but a very few ounces, which the smallest and lightest wire will easily sustain if the angler but has his wits about him, and uses his wrist and arm like anything but a rigid walking beam. It may be said that the smaller the hook, the greater the number of trout raised. Then of course it follows that with small hooks and fairly commensurate skill, the man who uses large sizes must be beaten at the sport. For those who insist upon striking with all possible force, no tackle is suitable but the coarse things in common use among them. It is the quickness rather than the power, which sets keen hooks into finny jaws, just while the fish is debating whether the tempting but prickly fly is bona fide or to be rejected.

From the hook to the dressing might be thought by the casual reader no wide interval, but to one familiar with the varied abominations sold by unknowing dealers, there is a world of room for choice and speculation. It would seem that fly tying should have its origin at the hands of men who angle, and with them alone. That dealers and non-fishing tyers should merely follow minutely the patterns set by those most expert on the streams and lakes, but the rule is quite the contrary. A visit to any tackle shop will be convincing after the frightful bunches of feathers and silk have been inspected which are exposed for sale to all but expert buyers, who know precisely what they wish and will take nothing else.

Preferences among anglers in the matter of flies, divide upon color and form. Graceful Harrington Keene in Wild-woods Magazine says in answer to the question, "what are trout flies?" "They are imitations of those born of the particular water in which the trout are found—or they should be. Not imitations of insects that have never been seen in propria persona nearer than some English river three thousand miles away. Yet the majority of the flies in use by American fishermen are usually made after patterns of English insects furnished by British angling authors. Can anything be more egregious. Such flies as the March Brown, Cochy bonddhu, Silver Horns, Green Drake, etc., have absolutely no actual counterpart on the streams of this country, yet they are imitated and catch fish: Indeed anything will catch fish on occasions, if it sufficiently resembles the general form and movement of a living insect, but the principle is startlingly wrong, and its continuance cannot be justified. The result of this haphazard procedure is that instead of there being certain standard imitations of specific American insects, there are a thousand and one different kinds totally foreign, and existing only because of the ignorance of both fly-maker and fly-user who conanmes them."

From precisely what standpoint the excerpt was written cannot be known, but with the conclusion reached, any practical angler may be permitted to differ, in our opinion. If there be anything more atrocious and more likely to handicap the angler than the huge, indeterminate things sometimes sold as the work of skilled American fly-tyers, we do not recall it. The best fly, tied to form cannot be said, after being wet, to resemble anything in the insect kingdom, and if fish be taken upon it the natural inference is that all is food that comes to the eye of the trout. As to color, however, a contrary opinion may be held, as may readily be proven by any one who will fish a dozen palmers of different dyes. Suppose there is no March Brown on local waters, there are brown mottled insects by thousands, and we have often noted a difference between the attractive power of the male and female March Browns, the light wing of the one, making it effective over the darker color of the other. A like remark might be made as to the killing quality of the ants. Very often have we cast a black ant without success, and begun filling the basket simply by changing to a red ant, both being tied on hooks of the same size, and alike in form, the only difference being in color. Any angler of more than limited experience must recall similar convincing proofs that in color more than in form lies the key to success when choosing flies.

Passing by logical steps to the rest of the tackle to be chosen by the beginner, and having selected small hooks dressed lightly in good subdued colors, the natural query is, how best to present the fly to the fish with least disturbance of the water and fewest chances of startling the always wary trout? There is but one answer, practically, viz: to use the lightest gut suitable to the character of the water to be fished and the size of the fish. There are extremists who advocate the use of filamentary drawn gut at all times, but without reason. In a boiling mountain stream where no slack water is found, gut should be strong enough to sustain a dead pull of not less than one or one and one half pounds. Such gut will hold any fish up to five pounds weight if fairly used. For low, clear, comparatively still streams or lake use, we prefer gut drawn to stand a strain of a half pound, or even a little heavier if it can be had undrawn. With the latter no indiscretions are permissible, but it casts so lightly and is so nearly invisible as to be very killing, while it is quite strong enough to account for a two or three pound fish, har accident or fouling. Such gut in any thing like skilled hands will fill the basket with more and better fish, two to one, than the heavier strands not uncommonly used.

After the gut the line, and here again good anglers differ, some preferring a very light silken braid, while others go in for one of considerable size. Both are amply strong, but the heavier is easy to cast, especially where short casts are the rule. A controlling factor in choice of line should be the rod found most comfortable to use. A stiffish single action rod certainly will not handle a short, light line so accurately nor with such ease as will a more withy one, but in many hands the very light rods are more tiresome than those of six or seven ounces weight. Perhaps a mean would be an F line of pure silk, level, waterproofed, of American manufacture, for a seven ounce rod. If a feather weight rod is preferred the line may be G or even finer.

Lastly as to the rod. Time was when "poles" were used and in those days of the Fathers, sound hickory and ash sufficed, with a bit of string and barbarous hooks like Dame Berners', nor is it long since that angling appliances were much improved. But it may be safely said that fishers of the generation generally go in for the utmost casting and killing power in their rods, combined with life and lightness, and it seems that no material so nearly combines necessary properties as bamboo, either whole or preferably split and glued up in sections. Perhaps in no direction has American supremacy been better shown than in the laying up, balancing and finishing of split bamboo rods. Certainly no like work of English or other makers that has come to notice can in any wise compare with that done by either of the four or five American artisans. The tyro will do well to step at once into possession of a really good split rod. Its cost may make him pause, but if he consults any old hand he will be told that the durability, pleasantness in use and efficiency of such a rod vastly more than repay its increased cost. As to weight and length no invariable rule can be laid down. Just as strength and steeliness of wrists and arms differ so do preferences as to rods. One thing may be well noted, that if he found that the wrist and arm cannot readily be educated into lightness in striking, a very light rod with much play will save many fish over one more prompt in action. That weight of rod should be selected which can most comfortably be used through a long day of almost continuous casting, and if fitted out on the lines suggested in the foregoing paragraphs, the angler may perhaps feel justified in going abroad in proper seasons without fear of unrewarded days.

Not that the anglers' reward is alone the weighty basket jugged home at evening, albeit there is solid pleasure in having good fish. Even on blank days much can be learned and enjoyed if the fisherman be anything but a clod. Eloquent sentences are those written by the delightful Honorary Chaplain of the English Fishing Gazette:

"Those whom the gods love die young," is one of the most pathetic of the many sad sayings of old days. But what of those whom the gods hate?

"Whom the gods would destroy they first drive to madness." But do they always destroy those whom they hate? Some strange and rather weird fancies have come into my mind of late on this subject.

Is it possible that those whom the gods hate are condemned to live to the utmost possible span of human life, ever tormented by some mad passion, some wild uncontrollable longing for that which never can be grasped? Must we go on to the very end, longing, craving, striving, with the full knowledge all the while that we never shall succeed?

Can it be that at my birth I had breathed into me the seeds of a devouring passion for dry fly fishing because the gods hated me? Anyway, they could not have endowed me with a more disastrous and ever-to-be disappointed propensity if they had tried. As for catching fish, that to me is quite a secondary consideration. If no fish are rising, it contents me well to cast for practice. To try how best to put the fly over this or that spot, to try all sorts of dodges to prevent the fly from dragging when the line must be cast across a weed, to study the effect of wind upon the cast is full of interest, and one can store up any amount of practical knowledge for future use."

Nor need he have ceased at the pleasures purely incident to fishing. It has so often been written from Berners down that a contemplative mind should be the anglers, as to have grown trite to readers in whom only a cooking-fire burns. But to those in perpetual conflagration, there is much in angling beside pounds of fish, and the power to discern grows stronger with each excursion, until it really seems at times that the fishing is the incident rather than the central idea. Not loquacious, it is no easy matter to start the old-time angler upon a recital of his adventures, but when such an one is found, strenuous effort to induce the unlocking of his hoard of recollections is always worth while. Rare bits of knowledge about flies. Curious fancies to colors, and, perhaps, exclusive control of particular feathers often repay such an effort.

THE RIFLE

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

A Nevada Rifleman Abroad.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The riflemen of Springfield were recently favored by a call from that fine shot and gentleman, Mr. George C. Thaxter of Carson City, Nevada. Although Mr. Thaxter was in the city but a short time, the few marksmen who met him were highly pleased with him and regretted to have him leave. Your correspondent took him in hand and showed him around over our beautiful city, visiting among other places, the United States Army, where the regulation musket is built. Mr. Thaxter was surprised to find it under military discipline, and was much interested in noting the various operations of milling, turning and boring which go on in the huge Government plant. After luncheon we visited the rifle range, accompanied by two of the local experts with whom we shot a little match. Mr. Thaxter used an entire y strange gun and sights, but he shot well enough to convince us that he could shoot when all conditions suited him perfectly. The scores made were not large; in fact, none of us expected high scores from a man who had just attended the Republican Convention, and come East with the California delegation in all their glory and style. No man could be expected to return to normal steadiness for a month after such an experience. It was easy to see however, that our visitor had great bolding power and command of his rifle. At 200 yards, using the Bullard military rifle, on the Hinman target, Mr. Thaxter scored 72, your correspondent 72, Mr. M. W. Bull 71 and Mr. T. B. Wilson 69. Our guest showed us photographs of the wonderful rifle team of the Carson City Guards, a team which I consider the best from any one city in the world.

Mr. Thaxter intimated a belief that San Francisco possessed the best two off-hand military shots in America in Sergeant Ed. Hovey and Mr. Johnston. All I can say is, that if they can beat Mr. Thaxter, they can undoubtedly shoot. Our guest left us with a promise to attend the great shooting festival at Newark, N. J. Rifle interests are lively, many men being in preparation for the Newark tournament.

The new Whitmore hammerless shotgun recently spoken of in your columns is well under way, the tools and gauges having been finished and the first hundred of the guns being about ready for the market. It combines several new and valuable ideas, and will be built under the immediate supervision of Mr. Whitmore, one of the best gun mechanics in the country. As soon as the gun is ready for sale, the manufacturers will address themselves to the Pacific Coast sportsmen through your interesting columns, and they will find much of interest in the new system.

C.
SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 7, 1888.

Last Sunday being the second Sunday of the month Capt. Siebe's popular range at Shell Mound was crowded, despite the coldness of the day and the strong wind that blew across the range. Some excellent rifle shooting was done, however, at 200 yards, and with revolvers at 50 yards, the latter by Mr. S. Carr and Mr. Ed. Hovey, being really brilliant.

The National's Shooting Club did some class shooting at 200 yards, making high scores. The winning scores are given.

Letters intended for publication should reach this office not later than Wednesday of each week, to secure a place in the issue of the following Saturday. Such letters should be addressed to the "BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN," because if otherwise addressed they may be delayed until too late.
Letters which demand immediate attention may be delayed, and still worse be entirely neglected.

Whatever pertains to the paper should be addressed to it.
This will insure immediate attention.

To Subscribers.

Look carefully at the date on the label of your paper.
Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time he intends to pay for it, let him not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party being requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Views of Trotting Horse Breeders.

Elsewhere will be found the views of some prominent breeders regarding the trotting horse of the future which were drawn out by a circular from the Leiston Journal.
As was to be expected there is a good deal of variation.
Locality has something to do with opinions, and predilections are oftentimes based on trivial grounds. We all are more or less impressed with favoritism, whether there are logical grounds to warrant it or not. The views of Capt. T. E. Moore come nearer to what we fancy than any of the others, and though condensed into few words express a great deal.

That preference is given to horses under what is now considered a medium size is not strange, when in all probability the breeders quoted have a greater number of that description. That fast trotters will be of larger size in the future than they have rated in the past, is just as sure as that the best race-horses of to-day will average a hand higher than the best of a century ago. We have yet to meet a breeder who would not prefer a sixteen-land horse to one which was below that mark, provided all other things were equal; and purchasers, unless guided by special reasons, will also pay more for a good big one than one of the same capacity which is smaller.

Had the query been added, what in your opinion is the best form for a fast trotter to possess? all who are well posted on configuration and candid enough to admit, would answer the type more frequently seen in the thoroughbred than in any other family.

Desecration of the Tracks.

We should be derelict in our duty were the late Roman chariot race allowed to pass without reprehending the practice. It did not better it that it was held on Sunday, though that is a feature not necessary to dilate upon at present. Having taken place on one of the most prominent tracks of the State with long accounts published in the dailies, people at a distance will form estimates of our turf and track sports which are far from being correct. That such a desecration was possible is owing to the public pool and betting rooms of San Francisco. They have broken into the legitimate business of the racecourses, so that something had to be done to cover the expenses, and the question is, whether the tracks shall be closed, or measures adopted to keep them running.

Last week we copied from the N. Y. Sportsman, an article to which we placed as an appropriate headline,
"The Curse of Racing." It was a description of the Suburban in Washington, and we learn that it was duplicated in San Francisco, with the further addition that in lieu of one place there are three in our city. The same scenes are produced; an eager, excited throng anxiously awaiting the announcement, the eagerness and excitement which in place of being due to witnessing the contest, depend on the dollars which have been staked on the result.

There is a fascination in betting rooms which old and young find hard to resist when once the habit has been formed. A much stronger attraction when there are accessories to heighten the interest. The bell which announces that the horses are at the post on a course thousands of miles away is the signal for a cessation of the tumult of voices. The suspense is evidently intensified by the imagination, and whereas there may be anxiety and irritation in witnessing the start of an actual race, and these relieved by moments when there is no chance for them to set off, the telegraph keeps the faculties on a strain without a loosening of the tension until the flag falls. The money which it would cost to visit the track is saved, and even that trifling sum invested adds to the excitement. There is a crush of people to countenance them in being present. Young men whose time should be given to their employers rush in for a few minutes if longer absence is not proper, and this is repeated day in and day out, so long as the eastern racing season lasts. The curse of racing is none too strong a term. The gambling features are alone presented, the benefits entirely ignored. The money the dupes expend does not aid horse breeding a particle. The large sums which are required to run these establishments go to the proprietors and their servants, to telegraph companies, to rent of rooms, and we are creditably informed a big sop to those who "run" San Francisco. In lieu of being an aid to horse-breeding, it is a load which will ultimately handicap it out of the race; or at the best restrict it to animals which are sent out of the state. The home demand will be nil when the race courses in the vicinity of San Francisco are closed, and then the adverse current will operate all over the State.

Although there will be a general feeling of condemnation among those who have the real welfare of racing and trotting at heart that such an exhibition should be tolerated on a respectable track, it must be borne in mind that the lessee has heavy expenditures to meet, and when debarrd from a legitimate source of remuneration, necessity compels him to pursue a course which he would fain avoid. Before the establishment of betting rooms, occasional races could be given with some accompanying profit. Now when the attempt is made there is a positive loss, and a further consequence is that fewer horses are trained. With even first-class horses engaged a large proportion of those who patronized the sport are better pleased with the attractions of racing by telegraph, the rooms are thronged, the course desolate.
Rent and other expenses run on, however, and if an attempt is made to provide for payment, commiseration palliates the offence and we condone what it is not possible to approve.

"Hereditary Descent."

The article copied from an English paper under the above heading contains some good suggestions, but if carried out in a strict sense would create dire confusion among public stallions. Like many other things it is the safest to permit that business to regulate itself.
Enlightened breeders are competent to judge for themselves, and the few who are not capable of discerning what is for their own interest, will not make their choice contingent on the certificate of a man who may not be capable, and who if capable, could not be trusted with so much power.

The licensing system has some advantages, and if a law were put on the books, similar to the one advocated by the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN some years ago, that was, to issue licenses on a graduated scale for all classes of horses, and turn over the money to the District Agricultural Societies to add to their premium lists. Thus whatever was paid by thoroughbreds, trotters, general purposes and draft horses should be given to the classes from which it was drawn, in this way encouraging breeding, and giving some return to stallions.

Veterinary certificates may be very well when an intending purchaser has not the knowledge which he can rely upon to discover unsoundness; but make it obligatory that before a horse can enter a show ring, or be permitted to do public service he must have such a voucher, and the door is opened for a great deal of trouble.
When there is a degree of unsoundness which is likely to affect the progeny, there are few breeders who are incompetent to make the discovery. There is a great deal of talk about occult spavins, blind splints, ringbones, side-bones, etc., but if these are so occult as not to be noticed by an observer who has a degree of "horse knowledge," or to cause even slight lameness, it is a fair inference that they are fancies of the expert. A horse may pass the most critical examination as to soundness, and yet be utterly worthless as a progenitor, while some of the most successful sires could not stand the test.
Abnormal deposits of bone, and diseases of the lungs and bronchial tubes are held to be transmissible, and with good reason. Still a horse which has a spavin as big as an egg may be less likely to transmit the extra osseous growth than one which is entirely free from even a suspicion of unsound hocks. The "model" hock may have become diseased from direct injury, while a joint which is faulty in every point be as sound as a newly coined double eagle. We should prefer one which had neither objection, though if compelled to select would discard the sound and weak, and accept the strong and deformed.
Then, too, if a horse is hopelessly unsound in wind, but has the proper shape in chest, neck and nostrils, we should prefer him to one which is all right in his respiratory organs, but faulty in configuration of the parts on which the breathing partially depends. Although clearness of wind is not absolutely indicated by outward shape still, when a horse is deep in the chest, large windpipe, wide between the jaws, nostrils which show that there is a chance for the fullest extension when the breathing is rapid, there is nearly a certainty that in a normal condition the organs of respiration were all right. Roaring is unquestionably one of the greatest drawbacks against which English breeders of thoroughbreds have to contend. It is comparatively rare in the East, practically unknown in California. Heaves, or what veterinarians term "broken wind," is found in horses which are of the proper shape. That this unsoundness is due to conditions outside of heredity is beyond question. It was unknown in the part of Iowa where we formerly resided as long as as the native grasses were used for forage, and it is only within the last few years that we have seen it in California, and only two cases at that.

There is some and good a great deal of humbug in relation to unsoundness in horses. Old maxims, still older prejudices, old laws, and heaps and heaps of old rubbish.
Still more. There are plenty of people who imagine they will not be considered a "good judge" of the form of a horse unless they pick flaws, and we have known quite a number of this class which were just as likely to condemn good points and extol deficiencies as to be right in their opinions, so there are some veterinaries who have a mania for discovering ailments, thinking that it is an evidence of superior skill.

To form a correct diagnosis of disease, or to discover cause of lameness which is not readily apparent, requires practice as well as "book learning." But it does not require a very large amount of either to judge whether sire or dam are fit to breed from so far as soundness is concerned. The coupling which will ensure the desired form and attributes is a more difficult problem.

The Fairs—Marysville and Glenbrook.

The next fairs in line of dates are Marysville and Glenbrook, which open August 28th. The Golden Gate has also been held on a corresponding date heretofore, but as it has not been advertised yet, we are in the dark of what the intentions for this year are. At first sight it would seem that the clash between the two places mentioned, would cause serious injury to both, but when the large number of horses in training are taken into calculation, there are good reasons for the belief that there will be plenty of participants. That is the only feature which gives cause for apprehension, and when the programmes are studied, this in a great measure disappears. For instance the open trotting and pacing are as follows: Marysville, three minute, 2:35, three-year-old, 2:27, 2:20 pacing, 2:40, 2:50, 2:30 and 2:23.
Glenbrook, 2:30, 2:50, 2:40, 2:30 pacing, 2:24, 2:27 and 2:20. The 2:30 is set for the first day at Glenbrook, and comes off on the last at Marysville, leaving three clear days between, which would give this class a chance to compete at both places. But with the number of horses at work, there need be no lack of entries, and if owners and trainers were to consult, a fair division could be agreed upon. Locality will, of course, govern in many instances, and in others predilections have weight, though with those who have not a decided choice there might be an understanding which will advance all interests.

There is no difficulty with the running events. There are three open to all at Marysville. At Glenbrook, six which are free to all comers. There are plenty of race-horses in California, notwithstanding many which are owned here, are battling gallantly in the East, and there is little doubt that there will be good fields and grand racing in both places. Therefore there is little risk in predicting successful fairs in the upper country even with the contingency that Golden Gate occupies the same week.

There is no necessity for repeating the programmes as all who are interested will scan the advertisements which give full particulars.

From what we know and learn it will be a difficult thing to choose which place to visit. That is, for people who are footloose and who desire an outing which will afford the most pleasure. Several years ago we attended the fair at Marysville and can vouch for the hospitality and warm-heartedness of the people, and those who have spent fair week at Glenbrook are unanimous in voting it one of the most attractive places on the coast, and that is praise enough. It strikes us that the attractions are so nearly balanced that a person who was cogitating over a choice would be somewhat in the fix of Captain McHeath when he sang, "How happy could I be with either, were other dear charmer away." With this advantage that a "toss-up" could decide in the case of the fairs, whereas his doubt could not be solved so readily. Those who are in doubt might dispel the cloud by resolving to take them both in, two days at one, a day for the intervening trip and two days at the other. Then again would come the difficulty of interrupting the "good time" which must necessarily be under way at either place.

The fairs of California, what a grand array for our State, and telling more for the enterprise of the people than chapters could fairly calculate. Mountain land and valley, and those which are held on the same week, exemplars of fertility of both sections. Marysville the center of a region which can be classed with the richest of the world. Glenbrook among the mines and hills from which are dug tons of auriferous and argentiferous ores, and with glens and slopes bedecked with fruits and flowers.

That there should be grand displays when nature has done so much "goes without saying." When joined to the prevailing spirit that characterizes inhabitants of mountains, hills and plains of California it is not surprising that the first place is cheerfully conceded.

Golden Gate Fair.

Since writing the notices of the Marysville and Glenbrook Fairs, we have received the "ad" of the Golden Gate. It appears that there was some delay in arranging terms, though everything is now fixed, and it will be held on the Oakland Trotting Park. There is not time to prepare an article, commensurate with the importance of this fair, for the paper of this week, but fortunately there is space enough before the closing of entries to accomplish the task.

Task is not correct. Now that everything is satisfactorily arranged it will be a "labor of love." We have, from the time that the organization was first made, been firm in the belief that the Golden Gate exhibition would ultimately rank with the great fairs of the country, and that before many years. It is saying a good deal, when the prophecy is made, that in the not distant future it will equal the California State Fair in attractions, but we have not the least hesitation in offering the prediction.

The only part of the programme we can notice now is the stallion purse of $1,500, and that we were requested to review. It strikes us to be a wise move, and that it will receive entries enough to make it one of the great races of the season. If our information be correct, the only stallions engaged in the National, which will not be in readiness to trot at the Golden Gate Fair, are Director, Antevolo, and, perhaps, Guy Wilkes, and then there are Ansel, Mt. Vernon, Menlo, Sable Wilkes, and several others which are fit competitors. Those engaged in the Grand will be all the better for a race when there is plenty of time between the engagements as there is in this case.

With the required number of entries it will draw like a chimney afire as the public will be all agog to see the horses which are so much talked about come together. Leaving out the three which are problematic and there is a grand field, any three of which will make a hot contest. With a good chance for six starters there will be such an intense desire to witness the tournament, that all who have the least fancy for trotting horses, and those who are interested in the breeding of trotters will be sure to be on hand. The purse is liberal and the time for trotting coming so soon after the close of the entries that there is little risk in the horses getting out of fix.

At all events it will be worth a trial, as should there be a failure in obtaining entries there is still time enough to substitute something else. There certainly can be nothing in the way of horses being named in it excepting too short a time for preparation. Horses which ended their season the first of June will have nearly three months, and if not overloaded with flesh, eighty odd days should put them in fair order.

Palo Alto, Ansel, Stamboul, Woodnut, Dawn, Jim Mulvenna, Mt. Vernon, Menlo, Sable Wilkes. What a field to draw upon, and it may be that others who were not far behind may stand a show with the best of these named.

This can be called the stallion year, as never before since trotting was given a place, has there been such an opportunity to gain renown, and with lots of money as well as glory to the victors.

Flossie G.

It is a moral certainty that the man who does the trotting horse for the Breeders' Gazette was not aware that Iceberg was a thoroughbred, or Flossie G. would not have obtained the encomiums given her. The granddam of her sire is also claimed to be by a thoroughbred, so that there are two near crosses of the blood. But somehow that blood has a strange faculty of asserting its potency in the face of this wonderfully wise lecturers, and it will not down, though commanded in tones which are deemed imperative. Here are the praises which are worthily bestowed:

But of all the races at Janesville, that for horses of the 2:18 class furnished the sensation, not only of the meeting, but of the season thus far. Among the starters was the chestnut mare Flossie G., that last year at Janesville had made a record of 2:22½ in her first race, and shown then that she was capable of even greater things. Horsemen noted how easily she had done the trick, and learning that she was well bred—by Anter, son of Almont, dam by Iceberg—they tried to buy her, but the mare's owner was a man who knew the value of the goods he had on hand, and wanted too much money to suit the boys. Flossie G. was not given a hard campaign in 1887, a few easy races near home being all that was asked of her, and the result of this policy was that she wintered beautifully, and this spring was better than ever. Janesville was again her first start, but this time she was obliged to go against the cracks, White Stockings, Loretta F. and Gov. Hill opposing her. White Stockings won the first heat in 2:24½, and then Flossie G. was sent along, winning the next three heats in 2:18½, 2:21½, 2:19½. This performance satisfied even the worst doubters that she was a mare of the highest quality, and on the following day she was sold for $10,000 cash to M. E. McHenry, the driver, although who his principal in the transaction is has not yet been made public. One thing is certain, Flossie G. is a great young mare, and those who saw her race at Janesville do not hesitate to say that she can go a mile in 2:15 right now. Of course McHenry will take her East, and it is likely that her first start in the Central Circuit will be made at Cleveland.

Tuscarora, Nev.

Will you inform in your paper if the California mare Mollie McCarthy was in Chicago in the year of 1875 or 1876, and if so, did she run in a four mile race in that city?

Answer.—She was not. Went East in 1878. Her four mile race there was at Louisville.

IGO WILKES, for chestnut colt, small white strip in face, no other white, foaled March 6th, by Guy Wilkes, dam by Gen. Benton.

SALE OF TROTTING STOCK.—Mr. W. H. Wilson, of Ahdallah Park, Cynthia, Ky., has sold to Hubinger Bros., of New Haven, Conn., the dark bay stallion Persimmons, foaled 1885, by Simmons, record 2:28; dam Nona B. by Administrator, record 2:29½; second dam Ella Lewis by Ericsson, record 2:30½.

The Petaluma Association have added to their already attractive list, a 2:23 class to be trotted Tuesday, August 1. Purse $700. All the trots will be under the rules of the American Trotting Association. Pool selling will be allowed on the ground, but no other form of gambling.

MR. E. H. DeCAMP, the energetic secretary of the Los Angeles Association, called at our office. He informs us that he has made arrangements to assist owners of stock entered at Los Angeles, in shipping to that place, as he will have them collect at various convenient points so as to ship together. This will greatly reduce the expense and trouble. The enterprise shown by our southern friends ought to be rewarded by the presence of a crowd of sneaky horses. In case any race should fail to start, the association has decided to offer special purses to suit such horses as are at the meeting. Each horse will have a chance to trot although his particular race may not be filled. The running races are half forfeit. Mr. DeCamp will remain in San Francisco until Wednesday next, and may be addressed in care of this office. Don't forget that the Los Angeles entries close July 15.

An Eastern Weeding-Out Sale.

The annual weeding-out sale of the Dwyer Brothers and a few horses owned by others took place at Sheephead Bay track on June 30th. Colonel S. D. Bruce was the auctioneer. Among the more prominent horsemen present were Dave Johnson, the Lamasney Brothers, Dave Pulsifer, William Jennings, Walter Gratz, J. M. Brown, G. H. Kernaghan, A. Garson, M. Huggins, M. Hitchcock, Frank McCabe, John Henry, Matt Burns, J. W. Rogers, Major Elliott, James Rowe, C. Littlefield, William Sloops, and many others. The following horses were sold:

Victress, bay filly, 2, by Luke Blackburn, out of Moselle; to Lamasney Brothers, for $1,525.

Passport, chestnut colt, 2, by Enquirer, out of Martica; to W. C. Daly, for $1,275.

Ocean, bay filly, 3, by imp. Billett, out of Sahina; to G. B. Morris, for $1,100.

Battery, bay colt, 3, by Onondaga, out of Emily; to F. A. Garson, for $825.

Carleton, chestnut colt, 2, by King Alfonso, out of Miranda; to Lamasney Brothers, for $700.

Perkins, bay colt, 3, by imp. Billett, out of Vassar; to Lamasney Brothers, for $650.

Wilton, chestnut gelding, 3, by Willful, out of Ecliptic; to E. W. Knowlton, for $500.

Denver, black colt, 2, by Virgil, out of Air; to R. McBride, for $475.

Bay Ridge, bay colt, 3, by imp. Billett, out of Hi; to F. Costello, for $425.

Penman, bay colt, 2, by Virgil, out of Asia; to A. Garson, for $425.

Bay filly, 2, by imp. Billett, out of Hi; to W. C. Daly, for $425.

Montgomery, brown colt, 2, by Falsetto, out of Mint Drop; to John Hannigan, for $400.

St. Albus, bay colt, 3, by Falsetto, out of Crucifix; to James Brown, for $350.

Long Time, black colt, 2, by Longfellow, out of Lucy Garnet; to B. Doswell, for $350.

Hailstone, chestnut colt, 3, by Hindoo, out of Delight; to H. D. Markston, for $325.

Cabinet, bay colt, 2, by Pat Malloy, out of imp. Queen Craft; to A. Burrows, for $300.

Penelon, brown colt, 4, by Reform, out of Megara; to J. Schmidt, for $300.

Spring Breeze, chestnut filly, 3, by Eolus, out of Spring Dance; to E. H. Hitchen, for $300.

Remsen, bay colt, 2, by King Alfonso, out of Anxiety; to C. Cornelsen, for $275.

Bay colt, 2, by Virgil, out of Althea; to B. Doswell, for $275.

Fargo, chestnut colt, 2, by Onondaga, out of Fanwitch; to A. Fitzgerald, for $275.

Bay colt, 2, by Voltigeur, out of Nellie Archer; to J. Eblick, for $260.

Bay colt, 2, by Duke of Montrose, out of Belle Waywood; to A. Purcell, for $200.

Swarthmore, chestnut colt, 4, by Stampede, out of Blossom; to J. H. Lewis, Jr., for $185.

Tam O'Shanter, bay colt, 4, by Harry O'Fallon, out of Tillie Babbitt; to A. Garson, for $170.

Bay colt, yearling, by Fellowcraft, out of Rokee; to J. Ehlick, for $110.

Huron, bay colt, by Saxon, out of Vandolite; to A. Purcell, for $100.

Doc Robbins, bay gelding, 3, by Duke, out of Slambang; to B. Doswell, for $60.

The Eureka Meeting.

The fair at Eureka, Humboldt County, was very successful, as although under peculiar conditions it was impossible to have a full number of nominations in the trotting races. The entries were very numerous in the running events, and they gave general satisfaction to the crowds who visited the track on every racing day. We have received a full account of the races, together with the summaries, but they were too late for this week's issue.

Not W. W. Bair.

The article elsewhere copied, it is now supposed refers to some unprincipled personator of the famous driver Bair. Mr. Corey of San Jose, being in Philadelphia, visited Mrs. Bair, who stated that Mr. Bair was not in California; whereon Mr. Corey telegraphed, ordering that his horses be taken away from the pseudo Bair who had them in charge. This would indicate that the fellow wanted now in San Jose is a rascal even more unprincipled than was at first supposed.

"Who steals my purse, steals trash,
But he who filches my good name
Takes that, " " " which leaves me poor indeed."

The First Appearance of Maud S.

Maud S., under the careful training of Murphy, is gradually trotting into grand form. Recently Mr. Bonner drove her to the Fleetwood Park, and seeing that the track was in very fair order, he told Murphy to give the mare a couple of easy miles. There were a number of visitors at the track, and soon a score of watches were clicking the performance of the peerless mare. The first mile was looked upon as a mere warming up for a better turn of speed in the second attempt. Murphy started her off very easy, going to the quarter pole in 38½ seconds, making the half in 1:15½, and came home under the wire very easy in 2:24. She was cooled out and then sent another mile. This time she started off like a piece of machinery, and it was thought a wonderful mile would be made, but Murphy had his instructions and sent her to the quarter pole in 36½ seconds. Then on she came to the half mile, which she left behind her in 1:11. Now came the tug up the hill, which she heaved bravely, and coming down the stretch like a quarter horse, passed under the wire in the fast time of 2:15½. Just as she had reached the half-mile pole she threw off her hind shoe, and therefore trotted the last half mile in 1:04½, with only three shoes on, making the third and uphill quarter in 31 seconds—a 2:04 gait. This is really the first time that Maud S. has been hitched to a sulky this season and given fast work. It is predicted that if Maud S. is given a thorough preparation, she will heat her own record of 2:08½ before the close of the season.

Mr. Lindsey, of Portland, is in receipt of a letter from Detroit which says Mollie Bond, full sister to Jane L., is trotting very fast. She had already showed a half in 1:12—a 2:24 gait.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Thos. Bowhill, M. R. C. V. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by three dollars, and addressed to Dr. Bowhill, 1523 California St., San Francisco.

Hereditary Diseases and Veterinary Opinions.

In my last communication I finished the diseases of the organs of respiration, and the next in order will be those of the organs of locomotion.

Diseases that produce lameness in the horse are plentiful and various. Their causes are many, and if we can remove any one of them we shall be doing good work. Heredity plays an important part as one of the causes, and can only be met and eliminated by attention to the parents. Bone spavin is a disease, the hereditary predisposition to which is beyond doubt, all writers of authority being agreed on this point, which is also well known to breeders of horses. This hereditary predisposition is not always due to peculiarity of conformation, as many breeds or families of horses with well formed hocks often become unsound from this cause. Peculiarity of conformation is nevertheless not only hereditary, but is of itself a predisposing cause of spavin. Professor Williams says he has seen unbroken colts so prone in their economy to the production of bone, that without any assignable outward cause, without recognisable injury of any kind, they have at an early stage exhibited spavin, splints and ring-bones. Growing young horses, and particularly such as are called "over-grown," may be said to be predisposed to spavin, simply from the circumstance of the weakness manifested in their hocks, as well as other joints. Many horses are foated with irregular hocks, very often with one hock larger than the other, and such are apt to be condemned as being diseased and unsound. Again, a horse at four years old will look coarse in the hocks, or even spavined; but when he is six, the same horse will appear quite fine and sound, provided he has been properly cared for. Spavins in front of the hocks are generally condemned, and justly so, and all stallions suffering from spavin should be rejected as unfit for breeding purposes.

Curb—When curbs are found in both hocks of horses that have done little or no work, or so young that little work can have been done, one can conclude that they are due to hereditary predisposition, and consequently will most likely be transmitted. Curb hocks are overbent or sickle-shaped, and if associated with long ossa calcium, are almost sure to become the seat of true curb. The best and healthiest horse may develop a curb as the result of a sprain, and the existence of one curb in a horse that has done hard work should not cause him to be rejected as likely to transmit that defect.

Splint—Splints are very frequently, and nearly always due to hereditary causes. Professor Williams says the causes of splints are "Concussion and hereditary predisposition, more especially that arising from shape and form of leg, which descends from parent to offspring." A young stallion with splints on both forelegs, occupying the same position on both, may safely be charged with suffering from hereditary disease. Such disease is almost certain to be transmitted; but what if it is? Splints are sometimes a nuisance, very seldom the cause of prolonged lameness, and hardly ever the cause of permanent lameness. We are all bound to admit their hereditary nature, but should regret giving such an opinion if it would be followed by the disqualification of a horse for stud purposes. Splints are too trivial an unsoundness upon which to reject a horse.

Windgalls—It is doubtful if this defect can be classed as a hereditary disease, and its existence on a stallion, unless positive evidence of marked transmission can be adduced, should be treated as a harmless condition.

Ringbone—This is one of the worst causes of lameness met with in horses, and as its hereditary predisposition is sufficiently proved and acknowledged by all authorities, a simple advice can be given, and that is, never breed from a sire or dam having ringbones, unless their origin can be readily traced to some accidental cause.

Side-bone—There is probably no unsoundness which owes its prevalence so exclusively to heredity as side-bone. It is the bane of big horses, and should be vigorously attacked by the rejection of all stud animals afflicted with it.

Diseases of the feet are too common in horses. Some depend entirely upon external injury; some, though directly excited by injury, are only met with in feet, the form or structure of which supply the predisposing cause. To say that conformation is hereditary is only to vary the old formula, "like produces like." Narrow feet, wide feet, and flat feet are formations undoubtedly transmitted from parents to offspring. With less certainty, and in a less degree, are transmitted qualities of hoof. Strong, tough horn is a characteristic of some families as is a dry shelly horn of others. These conditions vary in degree, and may exist without any disease. Unless disease is present a veterinary surgeon cannot class them as unsoundness. He may call them hereditary conformations of an undesirable kind, but he cannot pronounce them hereditary diseases. The line of demarcation between transmissible conformation and transmissible disease is difficult to trace, and each case must be judged by itself.

Corns are certainly not hereditary; they are only bruises, but most likely to occur on broad, open feet.

Sand-crack—If one sand-crack exists on a foot, the horn of which appears of good quality, there is not sufficient evidence to consider it likely to be transmitted. But if sand-cracks in two or more feet are found in conjunction with a hard, dry horn, an opposite opinion can be given.

Laminitis—A horse suffering from this disease is not likely to be submitted to a veterinary examination, but an opinion may be asked concerning feet which may be altered in form as a result of that disease. A flat sole is a conformation probably transmissible. A convex sole is a change of structure due to disease. Is it likely to be transmitted? Would the foal of such a parent have convex soles, or would it be especially liable to laminitis? Such a horse should not be disqualified if it is sound in action.

Navicular Disease—This is the most fertile cause of lameness that we know of in the better bred horse—the tane of horse flesh. Professor Williams says, "The most frequent predisposing cause is the abnormally relative position of the phalangeal bones, either arising from congenital formation of limb, or induced by shoeing with thick-heeled shoes. Race horses, so long as they are shod with racing shoes, seldom suffer from navicular disease, but when put to harness work and shod with thick shoes, they soon become unsound." Navicular disease is also due to the Rheumatoid diathesis, and this liability to suffer from this originates in hereditary predisposition and accidental circumstances. The evidence necessary to include heredity amongst the causes of navicular disease is capable of being strengthened by further observation.

Contraction—A contracted foot is not necessarily a diseased one, nor is it to be looked upon as a predisposing cause of disease. When both feet are contracted this cause of the defect is generally in the shoeing. When one foot is contracted it may be the result of or accompanied by disease, but it may be congenital, or accidental. A contracted foot in the absence of any other sign of disease, cannot be classed as hereditary, nor even a condition offering any evidence of its probable transmission to the offspring.

Disease of the Nervous System—By some authors strabismus is said to be hereditary, and by others no such cause is given.

Shivering—This serious but somewhat ill defined disease is said to be hereditary. Professor Williams records the case of a mare which suffered from "shivering." She had three or four colts, each of which became affected in the spine before the age of three years.

Epilepsy in Dogs—This disease is undoubtedly transmissible, and Mr. Hunting records the case of certain families, no member of which escaped. Some forms of megrims in the horse are undoubtedly of an epileptic nature, and the experience of the effects of breeding from such animals would be interesting.

Diseases of the Skin—Eczema in man and dog is undoubtedly hereditary. In the horse the analogous condition commonly known as "grease" is said to be hereditary by some authorities, while others again deny the analogy, as well as its being hereditary.

In conclusion I may state that this communication giving the opinions of the leading writers on the subject of heredity has been compiled, not with the object of laying down a standard of what diseases are considered hereditary, and the evil effects of breeding from animals so affected, but as a means of opening up a subject of vital importance to breeders as well as horsemen, and I hope my communication will cause others to give their opinions and experiences on this subject, and also records of any cases of transmissibility of disease that may have come under their notice.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9, 1888.

Chicago Belles at the Races.

In addition to the picturesque there is a comedy side to the scene. Walk along the balconies at Washington Park and keep your eyes and ears open. There is a youth with an expansive shirt front entertaining a couple of pretty young ladies. He is talking to them about horses, and he knows all about them, because his father has always kept a pair. He has a laudable ambition to enlighten the young ladies.

"The Emperor is the favorite," he says, with a knowing air, "but in my opinion he won't win. You see, he ran in the Derby last year, and—"

"But I thought the Derby was only for three-year-olds," one young lady interrupts.

"Oh, dear, no," he replies promptly. "You're not thinking of the Derby; you're thinking of the Sweepstakes. That won't be run to-day."

Then the young ladies feel that they have learned something, and are duly grateful to the young and expansive-shirted horseman.

A little further along you notice another little incident that arouses you, and at the same time makes you envious. A young lady is betting. A pair of gloves or a box of candy? No, indeed; money. Don't be surprised. A great many of the young ladies bet, and they have an excellent and economical way of doing it, besides having a most remarkable method of choosing the winning horse. How? Well, listen.

"Whom do you want to bet on this time, Miss Brown?" "O, I don't know. I want to see them all out first. O, there they are. Now let me see."

She knits her pretty brows, and eyes them all critically for a moment.

"O, I want to bet on that one," she cries.

"Which one is it?"

"I don't know his name. I mean that little bit of a fellow with such pretty colors on his jacket."

"You're talking about the jockey, aren't you?"

"Yes. He's such a cute little fellow. I am going to bet on him."

The youth sighs and goes off to put $5 on the "cute little jockey" that hasn't one chance in a hundred of getting under the wire first. Where does the envy come in? Wait till he comes back. If the horse wins they divide the money; if he loses—well the youth is $5 out of pocket. Nor is the clubhouse the only place where this style is in vogue; there is much of it also in the grand stand.

The comedy scenes are innumerable. The amount and the character of the information concerning horses that can be overheard would startle a veteran horseman, and there are society people who talk not of the horses but of parties, hops and summer resorts. And there are the jolly people who talk of none of these things, but sit in a circle and tell stories. There is plenty to interest and amuse you if you never saw a race.

Now, how many should you say there were? A member of the club estimates the crowd at 4,000. Not room enough for that many on the front balconies? True; but come inside. There is the cafe—a large room—and that is filled. Upstairs there is the large dining-room, and every table has its party. All of the many private dining-rooms are full. Look into the parlors. There are quite a number there. This member is not so far wrong after all.

Another scene that is worthy of attention is the view from the upper balcony looking towards the grand stand. You can stare all you want to there. The crowd on this plebeian side of the fence won't notice it, and they wouldn't care if they did. You can look into the grand stand and see it packed; you can look down on a sea of hats in the open space in front of it. You can hear the cries of the crowd as the horses "get off;" you can hear the low murmur as they turn into the stretch gradually swelling into all manner and kinds of cries. That is a scene worth witnessing, and seldom seen except from such a point of vantage.

But another thing worth seeing is the crowd during a race. Take your station on the balcony, and mind you don't look at the race. Keep your eyes on the people. Notice how the conversation ceases when the horses are brought, and how it is taken right up again a moment later. They are at the post, but society goes on talking. They have made a false start, but society does not notice it.

"They're off!"

Society knows that cry, and in an instant every one is excited. Notice the eyes of the pretty girls. How they sparkle! How the cheeks flush with excitement.

"He's gaining! He's gaining!" cries one little maid, and she claps her hands in an ecstasy of excitement.

She has a bet on the race.

"O, dear, he's fallen away back," says another.

"Murphy'll win!" exclaims a third, "he always does."

Murphy is known to nearly every young lady who goes to the club-house.

As the horses came down the stretch the excitement increases, and then—society is talking again—it is over.—Chicago Tribune.

Dark Speedy Trotters.

The remarkable prices paid for celebrated trotters stands out in bold figures as the auspicious omens of the future prospects of that breed. Robert Bonner, of New York, has purchased for the last twenty years the most distinguished champions and famous flyers of the trotting turf. Dexter cost him $33,000, in 1867; Rarus he purchased at $35,000, and Mand S. at $40,000. His stock in young winners and in old campaigners would, perhaps, foot up to nearly $200,000. They include the most renowned trotting magnates with the lowest records in the world.

There are many despised colts that have been coveted at high prices when matured. Wellesley Boy was an ill-formed, homely colt. He was sold for $50 on account of his conformation and awkward appearance. The second owner sold this once despised colt to James Gray of Wellesley, for $800, who, after campaigning him successfully for two years, sold him to Mr. Bonner for $16,000. Little Brown Jug was such an unpromising youth that he was sold for $35. In three or four years this despised colt developed so much speed as a pacer that he sold for $18,000. Flora Temple was so diminutive in size that she sold for $13 as a weanling. She would have brought as many thousands when in the palm of her greatness and glory. Wedgewood, son of Belmont, out of Woodbins by Woodford, thoroughbred son of Kosciusko, by Sir Archy, was sold to C. F. Emory, Newburgh, Ohio, by him to R. B. Conklin, Long Island, and by him to W. H. Balch, of Boston, for $12,000, as the agent of I. S. Clark, who quartered him in the barn at the Bates Farm. He was reported to have earned his owner an enormous profit in the stud, when he sold him for $25,000 to a southern syndicate. It was the popular pedigree, the rich blood that flowed in his veins that gave to Wedgewood his valuable reputation. Some of his colts were priced high up in the thousands when their sire last changed hands. The stallion, Gov. Sprague, record 2:20½, was reported to have been purchased by J. I. Chase for $27,500. Alcantara and Alcylene, brothers, sold for $50,000 to Eliza Smith a few years ago. One of Alcantara's colts, Alcegetta, owned by Mr. Gilbert, of Connecticut, made a two-year-old filly record of 2:31, at the breeders' meeting at Mystic Park last fall. The owner refused $5,000 for her directly after the race. Commonwealth was sold to J. R. Farnum for $8,000. Pan-coast sold at auction for $23,000, and Nutwood was sold at public sale for $22,000. Old Smuggler, record 2:15½, was sold to H. S. Russell for $36,000. Westmont, the pacer, made a mile in 2:01½ with running mate, and was sold for $25,000. Harry Wilkes, the famous champion of the trotting course, has changed hands at a fabulous price, reported at $60,000. High figures have been kept up on trotting stallions by their celebrated get. A few winners will establish the reputation of a sire for the value of his stock.

George Wilkes paid a large interest in the stud upon his first cost, besides establishing a reputation that will last as long as the breed survives. Electioneer has undoubtedly paid for himself many times over by the remarkable speed and early maturity of his colts. The brood mare, Naisd Queen, sold at auction for $5,050, at a Kentucky sale in 1857. Gov. Stanford's Beautiful Bells has, perhaps, eclipsed Green Mountain Maid in the value of her produce. This latter has produced seven colts that have entered the magic circle of 2:30 trotters. According to reports, Gov. Stanford has sold $39,500 worth of colts from his famous mare, Beautiful Bells. Bell Boy, by Electioneer, out of Beautiful Bells, was sold last year as a two-year-old to parties in Kalamazoo, Mich., for $5,000. He won all his engagements and a large sum in stakes. He was sold this year as a three-year-old to go to Kentucky, for $35,000. The last year's colt of this remarkable mare sold as a weanling for $5,000.

One first-class colt that has triumphed over his contemporaries and shown remarkable speed or uncommon endurance, will establish the reputation of this brood mare and double her relative value. The dam of Dexter bred but one winner out of a dozen foals. That winner had so much influence over the public that all of his immediate relatives sold at high prices. You may examine the record of three hundred mares devoted to breeding, and you will not find more than ten in a hundred that have dropped more than one winner. Lady Suffolk, Flora Temple, Goldsmith Maid and Lady Thorne were all confined to this single rule of production. The want of condition of the dam at the period of gestation has made this rule almost positive. It is unfortunate that there are not more noted exceptions to this rule. There are some improvements in the theory of generation, introduced by skillful breeders in modern times, that may ultimately counteract this negative rule.

How can the public afford to purchase and use such high-priced stock? How will they make returns upon so much capital invested? They can afford to use them because they will perform more service than the diminutive scrub or dung-hill. This breeder can afford to use them because high-bred horses will produce high-priced colts. He makes one hand wash the other. If he raises a valuable animal he can sell it at a profit on the cost of production. It is the quality of the breed that gives convertible value to his stock. It is safe to say that there never was an overproduction of first-class horses. It is the inferior kind that floods the market. They are not worth the cost of production. If the breeder would cross mares of uncommon endurance with sires of great speed, he would be almost sure to get an enduring roadster, if he did not produce a renowned champion of the trotting course.—OBSERVER, in the National Live Stock Journal.

Death of a Valuable Mare.

J. R. Hodson suffered a serious loss on the 8th inst. in the death of his promising trotting mare by Nintwood, out of Williamson's Belmont. She was ill but a few hours, and died of inflammation of the bowels. This valuable mare was closely allied in blood to Senator Stanford's Belmont strain, and gave promise of becoming a speedy animal. She was seven years old, and had been stunted to Walstein, the popular son of Director. She had been in training but two months, and was under the care of T. D. White at Agricultural Park. Mr. Hodson paid $2,000 for her last April at Oakland.—Record Union.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the two-year-old, unless otherwise specified, five to enter, and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 50 per cent to first horse, 25 per cent to second, 15 per cent to third, and 10 per cent to fourth.

The National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66 2/3 to the first, and 33 1/3 to the second.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all race entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running races, except when conditions are named otherwise.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Entries in all, except otherwise stated, to close with the Secretary, Wednesday, August 1, 1888.

The Plungers of the Day.

All games of chance are peculiarly fascinating to the betting man, and none more so than that of horse-racing, which affords a larger scope for good judgment, clear discernment and shrewdness than any other sport into which the element of speculation enters. New York with its great racing attractions at Gravesend, Jerome Park, Sheepshead Bay and Monmouth Park, is the Mecca of betting men every spring, and hither they flock in thousands from the west, south and north. All are in search of the mighty dollar, and all have an idea that they can beat the game.

The most conspicuous and daring bettor of the lot is Pittsburgh Phil, who is known from New York to San Francisco, and from Maine to Florida. Phil, whose name is George Smith, and who, as his sobriquet indicates, is a resident of Pittsburgh, is, along with Michael Dwyer, probably the heaviest and most daring bettor on the turf to-day. He is but 25 years of age, and has been following the horses for the last eight years, and is to-day worth a quarter of a million, all of which he has gathered since 1880 by judicious betting on fleet-footed thoroughbreds. This young man may be seen at any of the great race tracks. His slim figure is well known to race-goers, and his popularity is wonderful. He makes a study of race horses in the same manner that a broker interests himself in the financial details of railroading, and adopts betting on them as a means of livelihood just as the broker buys a seat on the Stock Exchange, in order that he may speculate on his knowledge of railroad and other corporations. The secret of Pittsburgh Phil's phenomenal success is his close attention to public form. From the day that a yearling is sold Phil never loses sight of him until the colt appears on the turf as a two-year-old to begin his racing career. He is carefully watched during his "insider" effort, and his good or bad points noted and marked down for future reference. When Phil thinks the colt is well placed—that is, engaged with youngsters of an inferior class—the money goes on in good lumps, and is generally landed.

The same policy is pursued with older horses, and days pass without Phil making a single bet. He occupies a prominent seat on the grand stand, and, racing-glass in hand, closely scans the field and follows every movement of the horses under supervision during the contest. When the time is ripe for action he bets his money and wins or loses with the utmost sang froid. Mr. Smith acquired his title several years ago in a Chicago pool-room. Pittsburgh was too slow to suit his tastes, and desiring to see some life he went to Chicago and invariably replied "Phil" to the call of "Name, sir," from the auctioneer. His wonderful success set the town by the ears. "Who was he?" He was Phil. "Phil who?" "Don't know. He is a Pittsburgher," and that was all the information the inquisitive received. He has since been known as Pittsburgh Phil. An incident of Mr. Smith's Chicago experience is interesting. He is very boyish in appearance, and looks more like a divinity student than a shrewd bettor. He was seated in Riley's pool-room, back of the old Board of Trade, on the afternoon of the day three years ago when Volante and Dewdrop met at Monmouth Park. Mr. Riley was a firm believer in the western horse's powers, and, mounting the rostrum, offered to bet anybody present any part of $5,000 that Volante would win. "I'll go you," came from the lips of a youth seated in a chair in the corner of the room, and all eyes were turned in that direction. Riley was nettled at being picked up by a mere boy, and shouted angrily, "Any part of $5,000 more Volante beats the filly." The bet was accepted with a calm nod. "Five thousand more," came from Mr. Riley's lips with much less force than his former challenge. Again the calm nod, and Mr. Riley, recognizing that he had met his match, weakened, saying, "Have you got enough?" "Not of a good thing," was Phil's response. "Have you got enough on Volante?" Mr. Riley thought he had, and sat down to await developments. The wire shortly after announced Dewdrop's victory, and Chicago had something to talk about for weeks afterward.

The young Pennsylvanian's nerve is remarkable. The writer sat by his side one day last summer at Monmouth Park during a head and head finish between Cambyssa and Banner Bearer. If Cambyssa won it would mean $12,000 in Phil's pocket, and yet not an eyelash quivered as the horses darted under the wire, nose and nose. As Cambyssa's number was hoisted on the telegraph board, Phil smiled quietly and remarked: "Well, that lands my money." He is always followed by a horde of small betters when he appears in the betting ring, eager to learn which animals he is playing. His influence with this class is so great that, not many years ago, he was approached by a Western pool-room owner, who offered him a very large sum to make "stiff" or crooked bets in order to mislead those who followed him. Phil is as honest as the ann is bright, and refused the offer with scorn. Like most betting men, he is a trifle superstitious, and has his mascot—two of them, in fact. One is a small golden horse; the other, and just now favored emblem, is a gold horse-shoe. Last season was a good one for the youthful plunger from the Keystone State, and his earnings have been estimated at $125,000. He won alone on the horse Richmond at different times, $60,000. One day at Gravesend last fall he landed $15,000 on the brown son of Virgil. Many people think that Phil controls this horse's running qualities and receives information when the horse is ready to win. "This is an error," said Phil a few days ago. "I have no interest in him whatever, and receive no information from the stable. I always play Richmond on the form he exhibits in preliminary work. I am so familiar with his peculiarities that I can always place him." Mr. Smith is at present at the Sturtevant House, and is accompanied by a younger brother. In his hour of success he has not forgotten his relatives, and is devoted to his mother and sisters.

Michael Dwyer, the younger of the celebrated Dwyer brothers, is a compactly built man of 38 years, and his ruddy face, blue eyes, and close-curling brown mustache are as familiar to race-goers as the gorgeous costumes of Evander Berry Wall. He is an enthusiastic lover of a good horse, and he and his brother conduct their famous stable on the most honorable and conscientious principle. Mr. Dwyer generally confines his betting to the animals in his own string, but is not at all adverse to taking a flyer on an outsider when a good thing turns up. He rarely appears in the ring himself, the bulk of his money being placed through his commissioner, smiling John Kelly. Mr. Dwyer is credited with having bet $60,000 against $6,000 in a race at Sheepshead Bay last autumn between his own horse, Joe Cotton, and the California-owned mare Binette, and Cotton was then at his best and won handsily. He bet $30,000 against $8,000 on Hanover in 1887, and $25,000 against $5,000 on Tremont in 1886 and won both. He is perfectly intrepid, and shares with Pittsburgh Phil the reputation of being the heaviest bettor in America. He, like his brother, is married, and lives in a brown-stone house on Eighth avenue, Brooklyn.

Davy Johnston, the handsome hookmaker, is also a high roller among betters. He is the Adonis of the ring, and his style of dress is always correct. When the horses are out running at any of the tracks in this vicinity, Mr. Johnston can be seen any afternoon on Broadway, between Twenty-third and Thirtieth streets. He has the reputation of being a game and shrewd bettor, and was a heavy winner on The Bird in the Brooklyn Handicap, St. James Stakes and Brooklyn Cup, and is reported to have doubled up each time. It is known to be a fact that his winnings on the former event netted $20,000. He is the partner of L. F. Appleby, and with that gentleman owns a number of horses. Mr. Johnston is a stalwart, dark-complexioned man of 32, and is a Benedict. His home is in New York.

J. E. McDonald, owner of Long Knight and other famous racers, is also a hookmaker, and is known to his friends as a good judge of a thoroughbred. He has a fondness for long shots, and will bet more money on a short horse than any other man who visits the race-tracks. He is 30 years old, stoutly built, and as smoothly shaven as a boy of 18. He is genial and popular with his associates to a marked degree.

Ben Ali Haggin, son of the San Francisco millionaire banker, J. B. Haggin, greatly resembles Davy Johnston in personal appearance. He was a very heavy bettor two years ago, and won very largely on Tyrant's victory in the Withers in 1885.

The Lorillards, Pierre and Pierre Jr., are both good betters, and the former is said to have won $6,000 on Blazon at Gravesend less than two weeks ago.

Isaac Thompson, another Gothamite, is 35 years of age, of medium height and of slender build. He is fond of short horses, and this spring at Washington won $25,000 when Paymaster beat Lottery.

George Godfrey, Snapper Garrison and Fitzpatrick, the well-known jockeys, have more grit than thousands of men of double and treble their avoirdupois, and at times touch their ring ring merrily. Last year at Sheepshead Bay, Godfrey rode Choctaw to victory when he was 10 to 1 against. He won $18,000 in bets, having put his last $800 on his own mounts.

The scene in the ring at Gravesend, Sheepshead Bay or Monmouth Park on days when the Brooklyn Handicap, Suburban Handicap, or Omnibus stakes are run is something never to be forgotten by a novice. An adequate idea of the amount of money handled in the betting-ring on such days as those mentioned can be drawn from the fact that on Decoration Day at Gravesend sixty-three bookmakers did a business of $1,260,000. This was exclusive of auction and mutual pools.—Star Sayings.

Range Cattle Industry.

The progress and success of the cattle industry of the West has been marvelous. For many years the business was conducted almost entirely by individuals, and so widened and prospered that in a few years the cattle kings were almost as opulent as the "bonanza kings." They had a personal supervision over their range and stock, and as the circle of their dominion broadened the "round-up" and the line riders found here and there fields of all the game animals which in former times swarmed over the country. Indian tradition told them that away back in the forties a certain winter had left no living creature for spring to make glad with her balmy air and green grass. So the idea was born to them that it would be well to take in partners while the business was yet in its glory. So friends in the East were written to concerning the profits and small costs of cattle raising. Individuals purchased half, third or fourth in the ranges of herds, as the case might be, and then came about the formation of syndicates and companies.

The profits were large. Each successive "beef round-up" brought to the eastern markets thousands of head of cattle, comparing favorably with the "pampered corn-fed" stock of Nebraska and Illinois. Newspaper writers set forth the business in the most glowing colors; magazines gave facts and figures with elaborate care; money flowed in from the commercial centers; new companies were formed every day, and the festive cowboy grew apace and flourished his six-shooter with impunity, while their employers sat by their warm fires in esse. Did not the cowboys look after their interests on the stormy range? So they must not be curbed, even if they did sometimes make things lively in these little western towns. In those days the owners of small herds had no rights these reckless fellows were bound to respect. A regular recorded brand was the only thing that insured anything like safety to the herds. Indeed, it was no unusual thing to see during the spring round-up a dozen men, mounted on broncos, ride up to a farmer's gate, open it and gallop pell mell across the pasture and "round-up" his whole herd of tame cows. If there was any doubt in their minds about the brand on a creature the lassos were taken from their places on the saddle, there were a few dexterous flings of the rope in the air and then the animal was stretched upon the ground. May he it was the children's pet heifer but for fear of hurting her, the hot iron in the timid hands had pressed too lightly and there was no mark on the hide. So she was a "maverick," and regardless of threats and precautions, she was driven away to starve to death the next winter on a bare range.

But the day of retribution was coming. The spring of 1886 opened up clear and bright, with but little rain to call forth the grass from the whole earth. During the whole summer there was a terrible drouth, and the hot wind swept over the parched plains, shivering up and killing all vegetation. The grass was as dry and brown in June as if the frosts of August had already come and locked up a goodly supply of nourishment in the dead looking blades for hungry cattle during the long winter months. But the old frontier men knew that there were too many cattle on the range, and that, even if the grass was good enough to keep them during the summer and fall, a great many must die in the cold storms of winter. In September and October there was a larger drive from the South than ever before. Cold weather set in early in November, and continued until 500,000 cattle had perished from starvation. In every little gulch were cattle staggering from weakness as they vainly tried to nibble the short grass to prolong their tortured existence a few hours longer. But at last they laid down in the snow, and soon the atupor came on which took their value from the cattleman's pockets. Several years the increase was simply immense, and the trail from Texas became one continuous stream of animal life, emptying itself upon the plains of Wyoming, Montana and Dakota.

Now, however, the order of things has changed, and it is the small herds that have the advantage. It is acknowledged by men who ought to know, that in the future the only way to raise cattle successfully will be to feed and shelter them well in winter, and either close herd or pasture them during the warm seasons. The ranges are fast becoming settled by inductions men, and the land which a few years since formed part of van-able ranges now produce a good crop of wheat, oats and corn.

In regard to this, a cattleman well known throughout the West, said to your correspondent a few days since: "The days of the 'round-up' is practically over; from this time we will have to watch our cattle or lose 'em."

Another prominent member of the association said: "Yes, it will not be many years before large herds will be a thing of the past. One or two years will put an end to the round-up, and business will be in the hands of local men."

On being told that your correspondent had questioned one man about the loss last winter, he laughed and voluntarily said: "Well, I don't know that I blame anyone interested in the matter for not wanting to talk about it, but there is no use in trying to keep it secret any longer. Seventy-five per cent. of all the cattle is somewhere near it, though eighty would be nearer. One firm made a drive of 20,000 in the fall, and in the spring found a scarce 1,500; another 5,000 numbered but 500 after the round-up. The greatest loss was in cows that had been, or were sucking calves. The calf round-up was very small, because the cows were nearly all dead. No, it wouldn't do any good to provide them with a little shelter. If a creature once gets into an old shack during a storm it will stay there until the elements are at peace or it starves to death. Anyway, cattle are strange animals. Where a horse will paw away two feet of snow, and when chilly, take a little run by way of exercise, a cow will get discouraged and stay in the place without food or water until she dies.—*Sun Dance (W. REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the two-year-old race, unless otherwise specified. Five to enter and three to start in all the above races. But the Board reserves the right in all the races in the above programme to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee ten per cent. of purse to accompany nomination. Purse of four moneys divided at the rate of fifty per cent. to the first horse, twenty-five per cent. to second, fifteen per cent. to third, and ten per cent. to fourth.

National Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 65 to the first and 35 to the second.

In case any named race for a certain day does not fill, the Board reserves the right to change the date of any other event on the programme if deemed necessary, due notice being given to the parties interested at any time previous to August 15th.

If in the opinion of the judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be continued or declared off, at the option of the judges.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named at 8 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

The rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association will govern running races.

Racing colors to be named in entries. In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which will be furnished by the directors.

Entries to all of the above races to close with the Secretary on Wednesday, August 1, 1887. Declarations August 20th.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS.

National Trotting Association rules to govern all trotting races. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all running. Five to enter and four to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than four to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, ten per cent, on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting, pacing and running premiums to be divided at the rate of fifty per cent, for the first horse, twenty-five per cent, to the second, fifteen per cent, to the third, and ten per cent, to the fourth.

All horses entered for trotting, pacing or running races, for which entrance has been paid and who go in the race designated, and fail to win any part of the purse, will have their entrance money returned to them after decision by the Judges.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary. For a walk-over a horse is only entitled to its entrance fee and one-half of the entrance retained by the Society from the other entries for said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race, entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field then to first and fourth moneys.

Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in by 8 o'clock P. M., or they shall be required to start or forfeit the entrance money.

All purses or premiums paid as soon as a decision is rendered.

Entries to the races, except No. 8, will close with the Secretary, August 10, 1888.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. The Association is a member of the National Trotting Association. The Board of Directors will have charge of the grounds during the week of races, and will see that the Rules are strictly enforced.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Extra races will be given each day; conditions to be announced the day previous, when entries will close.

Entries in all the above races, unless otherwise specified, close with the Secretary on July 15, 1888.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five--five to enter and three to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse.

Entrance fee 10 per cent, on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 60 per cent, to first horse, 30 per cent, to second, and 10 per cent, to third.
National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66 2/3 to the first, and 33 1/3 to the second.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running races, except when conditions named are otherwise.

Racing colors to be named in entries.
In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors.

The Board reserves the right to change the above order of races by giving contestants notice of the same by 6 o'clock P. M. of the day preceding the race. District races open to El Dorado County.

No horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in Amador, Calaveras, or El Dorado Counties six months prior to the day of the race.

Stables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Races commence each day at 1 P. M., sharp.

The lone track is one of the best and fastest on the Coast.

Conditions of Three and Four-Year-Old Stakes.

American Trotting Association rules to govern. Five or more to enter, three to start, stakes to be divided—seven-tenths to first horse, two-tenths to second, one-tenth to third. Added money, 50 per cent to first, 25 to second, 15 to third, 10 to fourth. If only three start, fourth money reverts to the Society, if two only start, third and fourth money reverts to the Society, if walkover, no added money is given, the horse making the same only entitled to the stakes actually paid in. Failure to make subsequent payments forfeits money paid in.

CONDITIONS.

Ten per cent of purse (running, trotting and pacing) to accompany nominations. American Trotting Association Rules to govern racing and trotting; Pacific Coast Blood Horse Rules to govern running events. Terms of races and division of money as above. Stakes in accordance with advertisement when nominations were made. No added money for a walk-over; horse making same only receives the entrance actually paid in. A horse distancing the field receives first and third money only; in any other event, first money only.

In all races five are to fill and three to start, but a lesser number of entries will hold, by proportionate amount of purse being deducted. Colors will be named for all running nominations. Drivers will be requested to wear distinct colored caps in all harness events. The Board reserves the right to change the order or saddle and harness, or postpone races when, in their judgment it may seem advisable. Entries to close with the Secretary July 15, 1888, at midnight. Hay and bedding free to patrons. Everything renovated. New barns and stock accommodations. One admission to every department. Send for premium list. Further particulars address.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is entitled to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All horses properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races.

If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

All races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board may reserve the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

The Stockton track is one of the fastest in the world.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. Stables hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

Offer the following rich running events for 1889 and 1890, entries to close August 1st, 1888, for colts now classed as yearlings, 1888 (one exception, No. 3, for colts now classed as two-year-olds for this time only to permit of a valuable three-year-old stake for 1889.)

Entrance fee, ten per cent of purse to accompany nominations.

In all trotting and pacing races, three moneys, viz.: 60, 30 and 10 per cent, except Trotting Stake Races, Nos. 8 and 9, in which money to be divided, and races trotted according to published conditions.

All races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

American or National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

In all races, entries not declared off by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 5 P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any district race that has not been owned in the district six months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Association and rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association, and expulsion from this Association.

If it is the opinion of the judges, any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the fair, it may be continued or declared off, at the option of the judges.

In all races noted above, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start.

The Petaluma track is one of the fastest and safest in the world.

Trotting and running colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. Stables hay and straw free to competitors. Entries close August 1, 1888, with Secretary.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90-class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70-class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

AMERICAN TROTTERS in FRANCE.

Misty Morning, Pat Dempsey, Kozyr, Capucine—The Agony is Over.

PARIS, June 19.—A don'tful, cloudy sky, a chilly nor-wester, and the absence of the sun marked the third meeting of trotters at Paris-Vincennes, yesterday. Still, falling weather kindly remaining away, a large number of sight-seers gathered at the first trotting hippodrome of "La Belle France." Sight-seers, yes, many; horsemen, few; book-makers and their victims an innumerable quantity. Of course, the old guard was there, the faithful few that nothing short of a funeral can keep away. And this reminds me that it was the day appointed for the funeral of poor Emperor Frederick III. of Germany, a martyr and a hero, whose untoward taking away every Frenchman, I may say, deplores. Yes, he was appreciated on this side of the Rhine as a man of liberal intentions, with a philosophical and literary turn of mind, a desire to do right, an unmitigated contempt for military distinction, mindful of the horrors of war and desirous of peace on almost any terms. To-day William II. reigns, and Europe stands uncertain, waiting to see what this young man, moulded by Bismark, may bring forth, and whether or no the Emperor of to-day will endorse the sentiments of the Kronprinz of yesterday.

But I am all abroad with my subject. I meant to talk horse and I fall into politics. Let us resume our account of the Summer Meeting yesterday.

Six races, of which two were international, filled the programme, and the first was:

Prix de Nugent, 2,500f., for stallions and mares, four, five and six years old, born and raised in France; to harness, two or four wheels optional; 1,300f. and entries to first, 800f. to second, 400f. to third; fourth gets back his entry; entry 50f., forfeit 20f., weight of vehicle and driver optional; distance 4,500 meters, (two miles six and a half furlongs).

Out of eleven entries six horses came to the post, starting with Kalouga, a handsome bay mare, in the lead. Kalouga is another pseudo-French mare, being born here of Russian parents. She is a good animal, but did not shine particularly yesterday, as her driver evidently pulled her, for reasons better known to himself and probably to her owner. He dropped third immediately, so as to make sure not to win, leaving the race to be disputed by Varvar, Kalouga's half-brother on the sire's side, and the French mare Diva. These two struggled honestly for the lead, and though Varvar kept it for a mile he was finally passed by Diva, then passed her again, and finally had to give it up on account of want of wind. This horse is good for two miles and fast, but anything over that distance interferes with his respiratory organs, he having undergone twice a throat operation on account of thickness of wind, which, alas! has not proved totally efficient. Neither broke during the whole length of the race of almost three miles. Here is the result:

Diva, ch m 6, by Phaeton—Pretty Boy, 7:36, 1-5 rate of 2:42 per mile).....1
Varvar, gr s 6, by Peretz—Metcha, 7:39.....2
Kalouga, b m 5 by Peretz—Kassatka, 7:40 4-5.....3
Gentleman b c 4, by Tigris—Conquerant, 7:51.....4

And now comes the International, to saddle. For the first time the Haras de Marisshall, from Frankfort (on the Main, not Kentucky), appears on the Hippodrome de Vincennes, ready to fight French and Russian horsea with American importations. And right good ones they are, two. They come with Bob Johnson for the saddle race, and Pat Dempsey for the harness race. But, alas! and alack a day, fates were not propitious, and though both horse and driver did their best, it was not to be this time, and brave old Kozyr once more remained the undisputed champion of the meeting, trotting his three miles and one furlong at the rate of 2:35 1/2 per mile, and could have done it, says Malcolm, six seconds faster, had it been necessary. Oh! it was a handsome race, and there was good riding you may rest assured. Ten horses entered, six started, three French, two Russian, one American, but it was evident from the start that the real play was between Bob Johnson and Kozyr. As for the Russian, Superbe, he was only entered to allow him to start later in the season in the races at Havre. Beaside, he was lame. Epinal, the third horse is fast, but uncertain. He is endowed with a fair share of "cussedness," and in order to punish him for not winning, I presume, his owner started him in the next race, which was for two miles so that he got five miles and one furlong almost uninterruptedly. Smart and sensible, don't you think so? Sure, they had not the time to dry him, nor did they care or try. As for poor old Pourquoi-Pas, coming fourth, wearily dragging his twenty-two years along, let us praise him. The heroic old fellow is so stiff from age and track work that he requires two solid hours' walk to limber him up before they start him for any race.

But the bell rings, with a last shout the bookmakers rush to the front, offering new odds as the different struggles in the race unroll before the public, the horses leave the post-dock, enter the track and hasten to the starting point, which on French tracks, varies according to the length of the race. And, behold! the old warrior, Pourquoi-Pas, takes the lead with the greatest assurance possible. Bob, Kozyr and Epinal follow in succession. At the end of the first quarter Epinal leaves his cussedness and goes to the front, Bob and Kozyr followed him, and the old man is left behind. And so they keep on and pass the grand stand, Bob and Kozyr evidently husbanding their speed for the crucial test. Then they both pass Epinal, and for the second time approaching the grand stand, Bob Johnson, with a superb swinging action, passes Kozyr amidst the frantic yelling of a French crowd; but, alas! his triumph is but short. He is up and breaks. Poor Bob has hit himself and it seems to cut all the speed and ambition out of him. Kozyr regains the lead, and after a beautiful turn of trot on the backstretch he turns on the home-stretch and is taken in hand by Malcolm, who brings him home leisurely, a winner, with the following summary as the result of the race.

Prix de l'Ete (international), to saddle, 3,000f for stallions, mares and geldings; all ages and all countries, four years old and over, 1,800f. and entries to first; 800f. to second, 400f. to third; fourth gets back his entry; entry 100f., forfeit 25f.; weight, four years, 68 kilos; five years, 73 kilos; six years and over, 75 kilos; distance, 5,000 meters (three miles and a furlong.)

This was a race indeed, but the following was quite tame compared to it, as it was a selling race, interesting particularly the owners. Seven horses started out of eight entries, and here is the due account of the conditions of the races, which itself deserves no particular mention:

Prix Dumesnil, to saddle, 2,000f.; for stallions and mares born and raised in France, three, four and five years old; all horses to be claimed for 5,000f., 1,200f. and entries to first; 500 to second, 300f. to third; fourth will first double his entry; entry 50f., forfeit 20f.; weight: three years, 62 kilos; four years, 68 kilos; five years, 72 kilos; three-year-olds will start at 3,050 meters, four-year-olds at 3,150 meters, five-year-olds at 3,200 meters (2 miles); horses to be claimed for 2,500f. will start as follows: three-year-olds, 2,975 meters; four-year-olds, 3,075 meters; five year olds, 3,125 meters; distance, 3,200 meters (2 miles).

The winner was claimed for 2,610f.

As I was leisurely strolling along before the grand stand at the beginning of this race, accompanied by the vociferations of the bookmakers, seeking to drown the quiet and orderly Paris mutuels, one yell louder than the rest caused me to turn around. It reminded me of New York and Thompson Street, and, in fact, it was uttered by a full fledged colored bookmaker, elbowing his way among his white confreres, who were nothing loathe to welcome him in their ranks. "Two to one Happe, two to one," cried he lustily, and as I stared at him in amazement, I thought of what a row he would have raised in an American crowd. But here they don't mind such small differences. What's in a name? says Shakespeare. What's in the color? they say over here. And he filled quietly his book. I was thinking of looking at the horses, slowly wending their way on the track, when I was buttonholed by a would-be connoisseur, who tried to prove to me that all "checka and martingales" were a snare and a delusion, and that he had a boy 14 years old, learning to be a jockey, and who could manage any kind of a horse anyhow without the use of such contrivances. Well, I think that if he took a good look at Pat Dempsey in the harness race might have seen that both checking and martingaling were quite as useful as ornamental, and he might have hesitated before confiding the hopes of his declining years to Pat without check or martingale. And so, you see, between the colored bookmaker on one side and the anti martingale maniac on the other, I lost sight of the race, which was no great loss after all.

But in the next race a great surprise was in store for all—an unpleasant surprise indeed for those who indulge freely their betting propensities. And if I am proud of one thing, it is that they came to grief through the misbehaving of my favorite filly Haydee, the Russo-pseudo-French. She was faster than ever yesterday, but full of the devil, and her rider did not have nerve enough to conquer her. So after about half a mile of splendid trotting, distancing all her competitors, she took it into her head to break and run for about 200 yards, and poor Boudet could not stop her, though he tried hard. Ah! if Malcolm now had had the squeeze of her between his mighty knees, the tables might have been turned and the gamblers on the favorite might have been made happy. But it was not to be, and so she was disqualified and disgracefully returned to the barn, amidst the shrieks of a thousand losers. Well, good luck to her, she gave the betting fraternity a good lesson. The rest of the race was tame and concluded as follows:

Prix de la Societe, to saddle; 5,000f. for colts and fillies born in France in 1885 and raised there; 3,000f. and entries to first, 1,000f. to second; 700f. to third, 300f. to fourth, fifth gets back his entry; entry 100f., h f; weight, 62 kilos; distance, 3,000 meters (one mile and seven furlongs).

And now we have reached the sixth event of the day and Malcolm is in the saddle once more. Ah! what a difference in his riding compared to that of the monkeys surrounding him and hauling on their horses like grim death to a deceased colored gentleman. But he only gets second money, for the little horse he rides, Vilna by name, has been in his hands hardly a week and he lacks staying power, which Malcolm's training will give him in due time. Speed he has, and of no mean order. But his opponent Grande Dame, is a good mare though a slovenly goer—one of the kind that trots with the body as much as with the legs, so that at a distance you may fancy she is constantly on the break, which, indeed, she is not, but gaining ground surely but in a disreputable way, whilst Vilna, a handsome chestnut, five years old, with light mane and tail, trots squarely and evenly, head and tail up, and his rider may sit on him with hardly a move of his body. It would surely cure Johnny Murphy for good of all his troubles just to see him once. And so they start, Vilna in the lead, Mandragore next, Grande Dame third. Down the hill Grande Dame tries to pass, but is unsuccessful. On they go to the turn, where, with another of her gyrating efforts, Grande Dame succeeds in passing Vilna, who breaks but soon recovers. It was the story of Bob and Kozyr repeated, but this time Malcolm had the wrong end of the stick. And so they came on to the wire without another change, as follows:

Prix de Croix, 3,000 francs, for stallions and mares four and five years old, born and raised in France; 2,000f. to first, 700f. to second; 300f. to third, fourth gets back entry, entry 75f., forfeit 25f.; weights: 4 years, 68 kilos; 5 years, 75 kilos; 4,000 (two miles and a half).

And now for the concluding tableau. The Great International Race to harness—France, America, Russia and Germany pitted against each other, the latter with an American trotter. Bloodless battles, thank God, in which no mother may mourn the loss of her precious first-born, and where no greater harm may happen but the loss of a few dollars to the betting inclined. The Great Kozyr is out of the fray, resting on his freshly-won laurels. Here comes the bright American mare Misty Morning, with good old Charley Dickerman behind her, and entered by Mr. A. Terry. Over there, quietly walking, unchecked and poorly hooked up, looms up the French queen Capucine, a compactly built bay mare. No road too long for her, and no B. G. nonsense about her, as Dickens used to say. Do you see that black, handsome, up-headed gelding, of check and martingale fame, that troubled the Frenchman's vision? That is Pat Dempsey, the American, who has taken naturalization papers in Germany. That handsome grey is the Russian Thabor III., who has not a ghost of a chance, and that poor skeleton of the same color is all that is left of poor Resway of tracheotomy fame, who is fast going to the dogs. Alas! his owner was shut up in a mad-house five weeks ago. So you see that is not a happy family. That great black hawk is London, a misformed Russian monster. As for Milton, Misty Morning's stable companion, he is absent, though a much better horse to-day than he was a year ago. No sign of Mollie Wilkes anywhere. So here they are in presence, three Russians, two Americans and one Frenchman ready for battle. The employe at the gates lets them all out on the track, and

General Topics.

Friday evening, July 13th. To-morrow it is my intention to give Antevolo a "light scrape," the first since the race he took part in and which Harry Wilkea won. When thinking of the past I am startled at times with the changes in my practice now with that pursued a quarter of a century ago, and I am oftentimes subjected to rigid examinations to explain the difference. Frequently I meet men who have read, and it may be added, studied "Horse Portraiture," and to reconcile the systems of then and now is no easy task. They cannot be reconciled, and the only explanation I have to offer is that the experience of so many years has completely upset previous ideas, firmly believed in at the time. As a rule old men are apt to cling to the practices which were followed when they were young, and their conservatism at times leads them into a blind adherence to old paths. Looking back I can see many errors which would be avoided now. Not because of a want of success, as a fair proportion of that was experienced, but I am strong in the faith that later methods would have insured better results. In copying the part which follows from Horse Portraiture it is proper to state that it is no fancy sketch, but is a rehearsal of what actually occurred. The horse under the pseudonym of Never Mind was to represent Nahocklish, and his first sweat was given as described. Before I got him he had trotted in many races in which he was always beaten, and his fastest record was 2:54. He won for me a great many races, only losing one, and trotted the Davenport track in 2:28. He beat the best western horses of his day, and I sold him in St. Louis the fall of 1863 for $4,000, a large price for a gelding at that time. He showed very fast trials on my private track, but being an exceedingly nervous horse, journeying did not agree with him. He was very high in flesh when put in training, fat as a stall-fed steer, and hence such a sweat as the one described.

"Preceptor.—I wanted to watch Never Mind while he was walking, to see that he emptied himself as he ought, and to note the appearance of the evacuations, before any change of color took place from exposure to the air. The excrements are just right—a bright yellow color, without any hard exterior coating, and of right consistency. The mash has performed its functions so far admirably. While the appearance of the feces is as I desire to see them at present, it would not do for them to be of this character if the horse was expected to go in a race. But we must now prepare him further, and have no time at present for the consideration of anything diverse from the business in hand. Have him brought into the stable, lightly wiped over his whole body, and the hair smoothed, when we will clothe him. There, that will do. Now take hold of this long, soft blanket, bring the corners together, so that it will be the full length and half the width, throw it over his back and bring the end under his belly; be very careful to have it straight and free from wrinkles. It now laps a little more than a foot; but I perceive there has been a matter neglected that is of moment. There are no straps, and we have to fasten it with skewers, which I dislike very much. There ought to have been four strings sewed on to the side of the blanket, a little below where it covers the backbone, and the same number on the end that we brought between the fore and hind legs. Then it can be fastened securely, without running any risk of wounding the skin, as there always is from the skewers.

We will now take this lighter and smaller blanket, and after doubling it in the same way, fold it as many times around the neck, enveloping it with several thicknesses from the shoulders to the ears. The next blanket will be similar to the first, only we do not double it, but cover the horse all over, tying it round the breast and under the tail, fastening it every few inches as low as the gaskin. A hood will be the next thing, having no ear pieces, and large enough to cover the shoulders, being tied behind the fore legs. A heavy kersey suit of clothes carefully adjusted, with the breast-plate loose enough not to interfere with the free motion of the legs; the hood with ear pieces and a flank girth buckled in its appropriate place, and the costume is complete, leaving no part uncovered, excepting the legs from the knees and hocks down, and the eyes and muzzle. The harness has to be enlarged to meet the necessities of the clothing, and rolls are put on above all the fetlocks to prevent bruising of the joints. The horse is now ready to go into the shafts, but before we go the track we will prepare a drink for him, by taking a handful of linseed, or two of oatmeal, and making a thin gruel, which we temper with boiling water, so that it will be a little above blood heat. You can now walk him once round, and jog him slowly twice, when you can stop him.

That is very good. Wait till he gets a mouthful or two of the drink. The perspiration is starting, and this hot gruel will facilitate the flow. The next two rounds drive him a little faster, when you can bring him to the barn. We are in great luck. The hair is now fully charged with moisture, and you will soon see as "free a delivery" as you could wish for. Turn him around in the stable, so that his head will be at the heel post; close the door and bring plenty of blankets and we will throw three or four extra ones on him, retaining every particle of heat. See how he begins to labor in breathing, and put your finger on the artery on the inner side of the jaw bone; the pulse is rapid, and the artery so full that it slips, on the least pressure, from under the finger. Give him another allowance of the gruel. The perspiration is beginning to start down the legs. Look at that big drop; it runs an inch or two; stops; takes a diagonal course; here is another one following it, and now three or four little rivulets are running down the arms, and joining on stream below the knee. Very large globules have oozed through the blanket we first wrapped him in, and the weight of it is so much increased that it bags down as far as the fastenings will permit. Do not be alarmed at this profuse flow; I want it to run a few minutes longer; you can see that the horse does not labor in breathing as much as he did—and clap your finger once more on the artery. It has an elastic feel in place of the rigid, tense cord, that eluded you at first, while the beatings are not so rapid.

Get the scrapers and rubbers ready. Take a scraper yourself, give Tom another, and let Con and Cooley be prepared with the largest and softest salt sack rubbers. Unbuckle the hood straps and the fastenings of the breast-plate. Throw the hood back on the loin, and turn back the clothes so as to expose the chest. Throw that neck wrapper on one side. Use your scrapers carefully, only bearing on enough to force the water from the hair. You, boys, rub him lightly between and around the ears. Your clothes will absorb more moisture if you do not bear on. Now unbuckle the flank girth; throw the cloth over his chest and neck, lay the belly wrapper on one side; it is heavier now than all the clothes were when first put on. Scrape his sides, neck, and quarters. How the froth bubbles! We will have different looking and feeling sweat from this in a month or two. Be very careful not to irritate him when you scrape the inside of the thigh and flanks; throw the clothes back; his neck will now scrape again. Go all over him once more, but before you begin throw off these extra blankets. Now you can throw them all off. Tom you can take a rubber, and rub his loin briskly.

You, my scholar, get some dry clothes, a pair of those large, fine English blankets, and a hood of the same material. Smooth his hair by running the rubbing-cloth the right way of it, and do not ruffle it as you put the dry clothes on. This time tie the blankets outside of the tail, put your lightest cover over the blanket, and Con, you can walk him in the ring till you are called in. The rest of you take the outside clothing, and hang them in the air to dry. The neck and belly wrapper place in a tub of water to soak. Get some dry, clean rubbers, the foot tub, hot water, and bring me a small-sized pail, so that I can prepare his drink for the day, which will be eight quarts of tepid water, with a table-spoonful of the best cream of tartar in it. He must not be allowed to drink any more than this till to-morrow morning—given by pouring two quarts of it at a time into another bucket, so that he will not be tantalized by seeing more than we want him to drink, which will also satisfy his thirst better. The object in restricting him in the water is that the absorbents will then take hold of the fat, which they would not do if we gave him an unlimited supply of fluid. The tartaric acid not only assists to allay the thirst, but its refrigerating properties are beneficial in guarding against feverish symptoms.

He has now walked a quarter of an hour, so you can call Con to bring him in. He is drying capitally. Take a handful of hay, dip it in the acidulated water, and let him pick it out of your hand, while the boys rub out these damp places. Now throw a linen sheet on him in place of the blanket, put the cover over that, and walk him slowly for twenty minutes. I never saw a horse do better than he has. Look at his eye, it is as bright as those of an eastern Odalisque, and does not need the application of henna to heighten its radiance. Now wash the soles and crust of his feet with cold water, place him in the foot tubs, and after applying castile soap, thoroughly wash with warm water his legs from the knees and hocks down. When that is done, dip a set of bandages in hot water, and swathe his legs from the knee to the coronet. Fix up his bedding, give him two quarts of the drink, as directed, two quarts of the prepared oats and hominy, and two or three pounds of hay, which it will be well enough to dampen. When this is eaten, put on the muzzle, and leave him undisturbed till the next feed. You have now seen the manner in which I give the first sweat to a horse that is robust—lusty, as the English say. If there is a point that is not clear, I am ready to answer any questions.

Pupil.—I think I can see from your former conversations the object of each part of the proceeding. When the horse was laboring so hard, however, as the extra blankets were put on, I should have been uneasy if you had not been present, and, if left to myself, would have been trying some plan to relieve him, especially when I discovered the pulse so high, and the artery tense.

Preceptor.—The reasons for throwing on the additional clothing were, that those he wore during the exercise did not sufficiently retain the heat, and the rapid loss of the watery and oily portions of the blood would be followed by the absorbing vessels acting sooner on the fat, than they would otherwise have done if the clothing had not been augmented. By keeping up the flow by their use, we approximated to the benefits derived from the heated air bath, and reduced him more than we possibly could have done with prolonged exercise, which would have endangered his legs. I can only guess at the pounds avoirdupois he has lost; but when you consider the increased weight of the inner wrappings, and the amount of water that flowed from the scraper, it must amount to a considerable depreciation of his former weight. The proceeds, and the different horses will also require a change of treatment. There will be very little change in the case of Never Mind in the plan pursued to-day, until we get rid of a good portion of the inside fat he is encumbered with."

At that time I believed in a good coating of flesh when the horse was put in training, and as that climate prevented anything like regular exercise in winter time, my favorite method of wintering was to have the animal occupy a large box with an adjoining yard in which it could run a portion of the five days. But in order to show more of my old notions, another quotation from Horse Portraiture is given:

"My idea of wintering a trotter is to turn him in a large, roomy box, first having prepared him by taking off the clothes he has been wearing, putting lighter ones on, removing them so that he may get a good thick coating of hair that will protect him better than the artificial application of blankets; his shoes pulled off of course. Adjoining this box let there be a yard well littered with straw, and every day, that is not too stormy, give him the run of the yard for several hours. Have the best of timothy cut when the seed is just forming, or rather when the bloom is entirely off; well cured, but not exposed to the sun and air till half of its nutritious qualities have been wasted. Have a large manger, in which the horse can turn his hay over, selecting the part of it that suits him best; but if good and properly cured all will be eaten. This manger should take up the whole end of the box, high enough that in rolling there will be no danger of getting in it; built perpendicularly, so that if inclined to paw while eating, the knee will not hit it as would be the case were it sloping from him. On one end of this manger set a porcelain lined feed trough, or in lieu of that a common cast iron kettle that will hold two or three pails full. Give him, at regular intervals, three feeds a day of good oats, every other day substituting a few ears of sound old corn—the best varieties are the best—the amount will depend on the size or fat forming qualities; but from six to eight quarts of oats daily, or its equivalent in other feed, will generally be found sufficient. The quantity of hay to be unlimited, so that the stomach will be filled, restoring the muscular power in that organ, which may have been impaired in the preparation for a week and a race the preceding summer. Once or twice a week give a bran mash, and place a box containing salt within reach. Through the winter change his feed by giving cut feed, carrots, wheat, rye, barley, meal, etc., and as the spring comes on, a little oil meal, flax, or snuffower seeds, will assist in shedding the old coat, and producing a soft, shiny new one to take its place. He should be watered three times a day. The litter in his box shaken up, and all the soiled portions thrown out once a day. No grooming will be needed; if plenty of clean straw is kept in his yard and box he will not require it, and for this much of the year; at least, he will be exempt from the torture—to a thin-skinned horse—of currycomb and brush. In the temperature of this box I know of no better rule to observe than that, after proper precautions have been taken for thorough ventilation, it may be made so close as to exclude the outer air. If this is done by building a hollow brick wall or a wooden one, the aim will be reached. I have seen stables built of logs that were as good, and horses wintered in them as well as when thousands of dollars had been lavished to rear a structure that has all the appliances of modern times to make its inmates comfortable. I do not mean, by this remark, to be understood that I find fault with the taste displayed by our wealthy men building fine barns and stables. They are not only a great ornament to a fine villa or city residence, but they are so comfortable for horse, and so handy for those who have them in charge, that to one who had been accustomed to the heat half a century ago, the change would be marvelous. For a country place or farm there is nothing that adds more of a home look than good outbuildings, and I would have the horse barn not far from the house. In fact, I would have it so near that let the weather be as rough as it might, there would be no dread of going from one to the other. It should be a prominent feature in the picture, made up of the dwelling, lawn, orchard and paddocks, where the matrons of the stud and their offspring are sunning themselves. If not naturally protected, I would shelter it with belts of trees, evergreen and deciduous. To sum up, I would have it look as if its inmates were just as well taken care of as those in the more pretentious dwelling, and where horses, like the Falcon, would have their eye for the beautiful gratified whenever they look out of the box window. For a training stable, there would have to be a change of site and arrangements that would differ, but the training quarters we will also discuss some other time."

Back home the treatment might still answer, though I have discarded bran mashes, and would replace that in a country where green feed cannot be obtained in winter with sweet apples, cabbage leaves, only a few of them, however, and occasionally a mess of cooked food. Sweating is the topic which now engrosses attention, and, with a horse as fat as Never Mind, even such a depletion might not be far from a right course, provided there was only a limited period to get him ready to trot in races. Very nearly the same course was pursued with Clara G., and as she trotted the fastest race for the three-minute class in Buffalo in 1871, and which stood as the "top notch" for many years thereafter, in these two cases it may be claimed to have been fairly successful. As is stated in the extract, it is somewhat analogous to the hot air baths, inasmuch as the flow of perspiration is obtained with as little rapid work as possible. That a change was necessary as the animal became in condition to go faster, and bring about the same result with less clothing is manifest. I find it extremely difficult, however, to explain the methods pursued at the time Horse Portraiture was written in so short a space as was marked for the present consideration of sweating, and in order that the reasons why such a sweat was given, another quotation from the chapter on sweating will be given. This will be a clearer exposition than could be made by a synopsis, and at the same time present the views which were held so long ago. Under like conditions little change would be made at present in the treatment, though there is a wide difference in other respects which will be noted hereafter.

"The action of the heart is so much identified with the lungs that both have to be taken into consideration. Quickened the motion of the one, and you accelerate the other, but not in the same proportion. For instance, when a horse is breathing tranquilly, the respirations are from four to eight in a minute, and the pulsations thirty-six to forty. As you increase the motion of the lungs by fast work, the respirations will be multiplied, till the ratio will be as one to two, possibly two to three. Suppose that, in driving Never Mind, you had kept up the rate of speed you took in the brush, until he became distressed. The respirations would probably have been forty or forty-five times in a minute, with the pulsations at seventy-five to eighty. The inspirations at times would be a good deal longer than the expirations, frequently sighing and "blowing out" suddenly. This would arise from the amount of adipose matter interfering with the heart and lungs, restricting the first, and enfeebling the others; and it would be a long time before he would recover, and the circulation and breathing restored to their natural condition. We will also suppose that he became thus distressed in going half or three-quarters of a mile. We get rid of the anperfluities, and drive him till he exhibits great fatigue, having gone perhaps two or three miles. The respirations have increased to two-thirds of the throbs of the heart. Still the expirations and inspirations are nearly equal, and there is very little if any sighing. He blows out freely and forcibly, recovering the natural breathing in much less time than before. In the first case he would have been "dead beat;" in the second, by taking a pull, and easing him for a short time, he would "come again," and make another struggle. This would show that rapid respiration and arterial action can be kept up if the organs are in a proper state. The main muscle acting on the lungs, and assisting in respiration, is the diaphragm. In forcible expiration the abdominal muscles act with great power. It will be useless to take much time to show that if an excessive deposit of fat exists, their aid will be much diminished. Fat within the chest is laid in layers beneath the serous coating, and about the base of the heart. It materially affects the breathing by encroaching on the pulmonary chamber, and interfering with the expansion of the lungs, so that the minute air cells cannot be filled to the extent of their capacity as they can when freed from this obstruction. If the heart is healthy, there is room within the pericardium for all of its motions, contraction and expansion not being greatly restricted by the outside coating of fat. But this coating does effect the equalization, or rhythm of the pulsations, when the action is hurried, so it becomes necessary to remove the obstruction here as elsewhere.

The change in the blood from the time it leaves the heart by the arteries till it is returned by the veins, after having been aerated in the lungs, is a wonderful provision of nature for it to obtain properties from the atmosphere essential to the sustenance of life. The passage of the blood to the extremities of the vessels that convey it, is accompanied, in sweating, by another phenomenon, viz., the forcing of the moisture through the pores of the skin, which we call sweat. In the evacuations from the bowels and kidneys there is never a particle of fat, and the emaciation following the purging or excessive staling is not due to fat being carried from the body directly, but to causes resulting therefrom. In exudation, however, the oily part of the blood is got rid of, as well as the watery fluid that accompanies it. You will perceive, when a horse takes his first sweats, the moisture is of a thick, unctuous nature, forming a lather like soap when it meets with friction from the clothes or harness. As the horse's body becomes freed from impurities, the sweat becomes thinner and clearer, finally having the appearance of clean water, as it trickles down his legs. The skin, then, appears to be the most direct way of getting rid of the fat, and not only the most direct, but the most natural.

The consequence of the fall of man was, that his bread should be obtained by labor—"the sweat of the brow" was to be the lot of all the descendants of Adam; and let horse or man be required to exert himself sufficiently, the hindrance to that exertion are got rid of by those natural outlets, the pores of the skin.

The fat, in the first place, having been deposited by the blood, the loss of the oily portion in sweating is replaced by the absorbents working on the surplus in store, removing it from where the original deposit was made; and as the sweatings are continued, exhausting all that we desire to get rid of. There are probably other changes that take place in the blood, one being a greater degree of fluidity, perhaps occasioned by an increase of heat.

It would appear that the abstraction of the watery particles would have a contrary effect, yet I am satisfied that this is counteracted by an opposing force, which I cannot explain, rendering the arteries and veins less liable to engorgement than when the circulating fluid had properties which made it more difficult to propel through them. From the relief afforded by copious and repeated sweatings, we might infer, that the abstraction of the fatty globules in the blood was the means of lessening the labor of the heart, which is of the greatest importance when the blood is sent bounding along more than twice as fast as when the animal is at rest. The theory that the pulsation keeps time to the step, is, I believe, correct when the action is much hurried. Hence, when a horse is making a fraction more than two bounds in a second, the work of the heart is greatly increased, and the labor of that vital force-pump would be much lessened by the blood being easier to urge through the tubing of the veins, as fast as the accelerated pace required that it should be.

It will readily be seen that nearly all the inside fat will have to be got away before the respiring organs are capable of performing their functions in a manner that will endure fast work. The heart is also facilitated in its operations by the removal, and the diaphragm and abdominal muscles can act with far greater force, the whole internal economy is in a manner changed, the muscles of the stomach are strengthened, and digestion is better and more rapid. The gastric juices are more intimately blended with the contents of the stomach, and the waste for the bowels to carry off is less acid and easier expelled. We will also find that the same process will get rid of external fat, and while the load is lightened for the horse to carry, and the muscular system is brought to a higher state of vigor, it also assists in the expansion of the chest. The intercostal muscles or the muscles between the ribs have a good deal to do with respiration, and the reduction of the neck removes the unnecessary load of fat which surrounds the windpipe, giving more room for it to convey the air to the bronchial tubes, and through them to the lungs. I have just said that the same process gets rid of fat, wherever it is deposited, either among the internal viscera, or where it surrounds the muscles. This is so, yet we can modify it in practice, so that the effects will be greater in absorbing the interior than the exterior deposit.

This is the first thing to be done. Till we remove from the lungs and heart the adipose deposit that hinders their working, we cannot give exercise enough to be of much benefit to the muscled locomotion. The first sweat, then, will have to be given independent of speed, which these organs are yet unable to endure. In England, it is well known that if a horse used for hunting becomes much tired, he will never after be as good as he was. No matter how long the interval of rest, his impaired powers can never be recuperated. In all probability the injury is to the lungs; in the excitement of the chase, the symptoms of being exhausted are overlooked, and animals are forced to struggle along till their structure is injured. We are all aware how much more acute the sufferings are from the exhaustion of the lungs, than the tiring of the muscles. Thua nature warns us of the greater danger attending the overworking of them. The sweating of Never Mind to-morrow will be a practical exemplification of the mode I adopt to relieve the respiratory organs, so there will be no need of dilating on the plan to be followed to accomplish this end. We have in a cursory manner glanced at the effects of sweating on the internal organs; we will afterwards discuss its merits in relieving a horse when in distress from rapid work.

The questions attending sweating for the outward formation are not so complicated. The muscled are masses of elastic fibres, terminated by the tendons on which they act by contraction and relaxation. Thus while one set exert their force in one direction by contraction, the opposite are lengthened as not to interfere with the power applied. Some run parallel with the tendons, others cross these in an oblique direction, and still others at nearly right angles to the first. The fat is deposited where they overlap each other, filling up the interstices and giving prominence to the muscles by pushing the outside one out. In a very fat horse there is a further deposit of adipose matter between the skin and the body, sometimes covering the muscles of the ribs to quite a depth. This is entirely useless, while that in the interstices has a duty to perform of great importance, viz., lubricating the fibres, so that the friction at the points of attrition is much lessened. The muscles are completely filled with a network of blood-vessels, their ramifications being so extensive that the eye is unable to detect their presence. The muscles become harder and more tendinous as they are made to perform active duty, till what was a pulpy, fleshy mass, becomes fined down to a strong, elastic substance, very different and much more suitable to the necessities of rapid progression. This change takes place as the result of exercise, and does not follow the removal of the fat, when that removal is dependent on other agencies than muscular exertion. While the Roman or hot-air bath would be a very proper and powerful auxiliary in removing interior and exterior fatty matter in the first stages of preparation, its services could never further this change of the muscular system. Exercise is the only means of effecting it, and the amount of work best adapted to effect this end is varied in almost every animal that has to undergo the conditioning process. The first sweats, however, are nearly identical in all horses having the same amount of extraneous matter to remove, so that we will be less likely to err in this stage than when we make a racing pace one of the concomitants of sweating. The removal of the fat in the cavities formed by the lapping or crossing of the muscles is a question of time, and much injury would result from attempting to get rid of it sooner than is prudent. It must never be completely eradicated, as there must not only be a sufficiency left for lubrication, but a surplus that will meet any extra call that exertion, protracted longer than we looked for, will entail. As the fat is wasted, there ought to be a proportional increase of muscle, which will invariably be the case if the minutiae of training have been carefully attended to.

Sweating under clothes has also a local effect. This is an advantage which no other system of depletion can boast of, and the benefits of which can hardly be over-estimated. If it were otherwise, we would be compelled to bring one part of the horse's body much lower than we would like it, in order that some other part might be in a situation to stand the effects of fast work. To exemplify this, we will instance the effects of sweating on the neck, chest and loin. The difference in the necks of horses in a natural state is very marked. In one we will find the long, delicate neck, perhaps a little drooping in front of the withers, so small at the junction of the head that you could nearly encircle it with your hands. The next is larger at the shoulders, fuller in the throat, but equally as well cut out in the throat, and better at the joining of the head. The third is larger everywhere, and short, thicker even at the throat-latch than the first was at the shoulder, with a crest so thick and flabby that it hangs over on one side. The jaws are also covered with meat, and, what is much worse, the space between the jaws is also filled with flesh and enlarged glands.

While size may be a measure of power in other parts of the body, an overgrown neck is a sure mark of inability to sustain a fast pace, not alone from interfering with the free passage of air in the breathing-tubes, and the free passage of blood through the jugular veins and carotid arteries, but the extra weight to be carried is in the very worst place for the ease of the horse. It would be a safe estimate that the last described neck would weigh fifty pounds more than the second, and more than double as much as the first. If these horses were identical in every other particular, there would be a vast preponderance in favor of the two with lighter necks on that score alone. But when we come to consider the effects on the breathing apparatus, and the stricture on the return of the blood from the brain, we will be convinced that the large-necked animal is totally unfit to go any distance fast, without artificial aid to diminish the useless volume of matter in the neck. Now, if we were forced to waste all parts of him alike, it would be evident that we would weaken some portions so much that the balance would be equally as much disturbed, and the part that would fail the most would be the loin. A deep chest, awelling barrel, and broad loin are generally looked upon as a betokening strength of constitution.

A severe strain of the loin is followed by partial paralysis of the hind quarters; the legs are drawn feebly along, and the animal moves by dragging himself with his fore feet. The whole propelling power of a horse being in his hind quarters, it is evident that anything that will weaken that force will materially retard the velocity with which he is capable of moving. The back-bone is braced with strong fillets parallel with it and joined to the bony projections, and the large muscles that cover the bony frame-work are heaped up in this point. If we diminish their force by repeated sweatings, we lose much without any corresponding gain; so, to reduce the overloaded neck we have recourse to the local application of clothing, and thus effect the object desired. There is nothing like the danger of over-sweating the neck there is even in the chest, which will also bear a great deal of reduction. We may reduce the muscles that cover the shoulder-blade too much, but the intercostal and abdominal muscles will bear a diminution of their tissue, if that is necessary, to get rid of the fat in their immediate neighborhood.

The government of Italy will give $11,000 in prizes for trotting races this season, and for the encouragement of breeding racing horses. Laws have also been passed by the legislature of this Kingdom regulating horse breeding. They designate that after the 1st of January, 1889, private individuals will not be allowed to keep stallions for service unless they have been duly approved by the Minister of Agriculture, a restriction calculated to prevent the use of unsound and unsuitable sires. Also that from the 1st of July, 1888, and during a period of eight years from this date, not less than 800 stallions shall be purchased for the Government stallion centers for which a sum of $95,000 is allotted.

Racing at Eureka.

The summer meeting of the Eureka Jockey Club held 4th of July week attracted a large delegation of horses, horsemen and people of sporting inclinations to that thriving and handsome city of saw mills on Humboldt Bay. The northern and middle portions of the state were well represented, even so far south as Fresno, from which point Messrs. Blasingame and Cabrera came with Hermes, Leap Year and Confidence. All were delighted with the rare sport the meeting afforded, and sailed for home with very pleasant recollections of the hospitality of the people. The racing was of the finest description. The Club not only achieved success but richly deserved it. The Association is composed of fifty members, mainly of the best material of that section, and as present officers must take a front place among the Jockey Clubs of the Coast. The Directory of the club is as follows: President, Dan Murphy; vice-President, T. F. Ricks; Secretary Harry Cohn; Treasurer, C. G. Taylor; Directors, Dan Murphy, Dr. R. Gro. S., Harry Cohn, T. F. Ricks, S. F. Pine, J. A. Sinclair, Wyman Murphy. All these gentlemen are enterprising, energetic, enthusiastic and imbued with the true racing spirit. After two years of effort, under the disadvantage of a poorly constructed half mile track, that difficulty has been overcome and through the enterprise of Mr. W. S. Clark, the owner of the property, a fine mile track has been built.

When Mr. Clark's plans are well worked out it will be one of the best in the state. It is located on a salt marsh, almost on the shores of the bay, within a mile of the center of the city and is easily reached by good drives or a pleasant walk. As it is entirely new it was slow, but safe and good. Before another meeting Mr. Clark proposes to overlay the track with loam, build a capacious hotel, and additional stands and supply all the accessories of a race course of the first class. The Club proposes to open some fixed stakes this fall to be run next year, with liberal added money to each, and the meeting just closed, fine as it was, is only a hint as to the future.

The club was fortunate in the fact that Capt. H. H. Hobbs of this city, was in attendance at the meeting and his services were secured as starter. The Captain was loth to take the flag, but gave way under persuasion and did first-class work all through.

The pool-selling was let to Mr. M. F. Gallagher of Eureka, who secured the services of Al Leach of this city as auctioneer. Mr. Leach added largely to his already established reputation as a pool-seller by the prompt and systematic manner in which he conducted the business. He passed more money through the box than had ever been handled at a race meeting in Eureka, and gave complete satisfaction to all concerned.

THE RACES.

Time, 1:47.
Pools: Carmen, $30; Susie S. $8; Leap Year, $6; Field, $6.

As there was money at the quarter and half the short horses were anxious to get away, but the field all got off well except Idalene Cotton who was sulky and would not come up. Sleepy Dick jumped off in the lead. Confidence made a rush at him, and for a few strides had his head in front but could not hold the ground and Dick reached the quarter first in :25, Confidence second, Johnny Gray third. Down the back stretch Johnny Gray made his run, taking up the ground gradually and beating Dick to the half by the shortest kind of heads in :52. From there the leaders fell back, Kildare reaching the three-quarters first by a length, and Susie S. winning the mile rather easily by two lengths.

Same day—Trotting. Purse $250; 3:00 class. Horses owned in Humboldt County.

Time, 2:15.

Pools: Appleby's stable, $20; Trahern's stable, $12; Welcome, $11; Hermes, $8; Avondale, $6; Oro, $4; Elwood, $3. With a fair start the field went well bunched past the stand, Douglas, Gardner and Carmen keeping well in front and watching each other. It was everybody's race for three-quarters of a mile, but in the stretch the fight narrowed to Douglas and Gardner. Douglass winning by a neck through the skillful riding of Hennessey.

Second Race—Sweepstakes for all ages; $25 entrance, half forfeit; $250 added; $75 to second, third to save stake. Half mile heats.

Owen Bros' g g Johnny Gray, aged, by Shiloh, dam Margery, 110 lbs.....	Howson	1	3	1
T. G. Jones' br g Jack Pot, 2, by Joe Hooker, dam Lueena, 77 lbs.....	Hitchcock	3	1	2
G. W. Trahern's ch m Blue Bonnet, 4, by Joe Hooker, dam Kate Carson, 113 lbs.....	D. Dennison	2	2
Time, 5:14, 5:04, 5:1.

Pools: Johnny Gray, $20; Jack Pot, $13; Blue Bonnet, $6. In the first heat Jack Pot was slow in getting away, and was so far behind at the three-quarter that his rider did not move for the heat. Blue Bonnet and Gray fought hard for the mastery, the old veteran winning by a head only. In the second Jack Pot got off with them, and his head was in front all the way. He won by a neck in as good time for the distance as was made during the meeting. Blue Bonnet retired and for the finish it was conceded that Gray would beat the two year-old in a third heat. He did but had to run in 51 to do it.

Third Race—Sweepstakes; for all ages; $10 entrance; $200 added; second horse to receive the stakes. Three-quarters of a mile. Five entries.

Time, 1:18.

Pools: Susie S., $25; Idalene Cotton, $17; Kildare, $16; field, $11.

The start was excellent, but Cotton opened a stretch of daylight behind her before she had gone an eighth, and the race was virtually over. At the finish Kildare closed up, but Cotton was never in danger, winning a comparatively easy race.

July 5th, First Race.—Purse $150; $25 to second; for all ages. Six hundred yards.

Pools: Sleepy Dick, $10; Stoneman, $9; Confidence, $9; field, $5.

At the fall of the flag Confidence was off like a shot, and was never headed. He beat Dick a good length and Stoneman two lengths, landing a good pot of money for his backers.

Time, 3:22, 3:17.

This was virtually a walk-over for Johnny Moore. All the entries had been scratched except these two, and Mr. Young trotted to save his stakes.

Third Race—Sweepstake; for all ages; $5 entrance; $125 added; second to receive the stake. Five furlongs.

Pools: Blue Bonnet, $20; Avondale, $15; Kildare, $5; Elwood, $4.

This race was a trifle vexatious. Capt. Hobbs was off duty for a time, and the gentleman who acted in his place was unfortunate. He dropped the flag on a straggling line of horses, the favorite being several lengths past the post. Blue Bonnet won but the judge declared the race void, and ordered it to be run over again. Mr. Dennison was somewhat annoyed at the ruling, but all's well that ends well. Capt. Hobbs went over to the post and gave them a fine send-off.

Blue Bonnet winning as handily the second time as she did the first.

They ran in a bunch to the half, where the crashed strawberry began to show in front. They all drove at her, but Carmen was in train, and held them safe to the wire by half a length. Betting was active on this race, and while the backers of Carmen had the top price in the mare they did very well.

Time, 1:46.

Pools: Laura Gardner, $20; Welcome, $8; Cotton, $6; field, $5.

With a good start Welcome showed the way with the field well behind her. On the back quarter Gardner came out and setting the pace strong, lengthened them out into a line; at the head of the stretch Haidee moved up, and after a warm finish Gardner was first at the winning post by a length in 1:46, the fastest mile that had ever been run over the track.

The last event of the day was a three-year-old trotting purse. Three youngsters, Johnny Quill, Daisy Hayward and Silver Shield started, all the get of Poscora Hayward. The colts were bat a short time off of grass and in no fix to show their quality, but the race was unique in its way, and created great amusement through the efforts of the drivers to juggle the heats and ring the betting. The business was so unskillfully done that the smallest boy on the track could see it, and it raised a general laugh. Johnny Quill soon saw the red flag. The drivers of the other two were removed and others substituted and the race finally won by Daisy Hayward, she being in best condition. Silver Shield was manifestly the best filly, but she could not stand the bruising of four heats. The crowd having had some fun and lost no money over the affair, went home in good humor, but the judges and officers of the club were naturally very indignant, and the jugglers will be dealt with according to their deserts.

Third Race—Purse $200. Trotting for three-year-olds.

This closed the meeting, and the spectators departed for their homes in a glow of satisfaction. To the directors of the club the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN commissioner tenders his thanks for the many courtesies extended to him, and specially to President Murphy and Secretary Cohn, does he take off his hat and make his most profound bow.

If Murphy, the jockey, is not ordered East by his employer before the meeting here is brought to a close he will need to charter a special car to carry off innumerable prizes hung up by the different tradespeople for the jockey securing the greatest number of winning mounts. In the shop windows the prizes are exhibited, and they attract general attention. Whips, saddles, birdies and aprons are among the trophies. That Murphy will prove to be the lucky jockey there is little doubt, as he is now far ahead of any of his competitors in the race for prizes.—Sporting World, St. Louis.

A full account of the "Standard" tournament at San Diego, on July 13th and 14th, by Mr. F. D. Waite, reached us too late for publication. We desire and are grateful for full and accurate reports of all events interesting to sportsmen, but hope that correspondents will send them as soon after the affairs as possible—preferably by the first mail.

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I spent a week in that greatest of southern towns, Fresno, not long since. The thermometer clambered up to 110 deg. with amazing regularity but I still live, thanks to ice water and the kindly offices of my friends. Fresno as a business town is considered to be a success. The residents are extremely entertaining and nothing is beyond them. They have an unwavering faith in the future growth and development of their town and county. To be sure, they charge more for blocks and lots than lots and blocks in San Francisco can be bought for; yet the engaging manner they have of showing up the marvelous cheapness of their lands, is calculated to still the stranger's heart and cause him to willingly part with his golden shekels. In the language of Ike Peirson, "The Lord please have mercy on the last man!" I can truthfully say that I met a host of pleasant men during my sojourn, and their amenities to a stranger I remember with great pleasure.

Upon the "glorious Fourth" I attended, along with 2500 other people, some races at the Park. The association has just completed an elegant Club House, which is a credit to and the town. The grand stand and other improvements are of very good character. It was a trifle dusty going out the afternoon of the races. I say a trifle—I heard a man say that when he left town he weighed, with his hair uncombed, 152 pounds, when he reached the track he said he weighed 161 pounds—a net gain of nine pounds in going three miles. It would therefore appear that there would be practically no limit to a man's weight, providing he rode long enough.

Shortly after the arrival of myself and the other 2500, a bicycle race of one mile was inaugurated. This was a close and exciting affair, as considerable local money was placed on the event. The race was won by a young gentleman named Weaver, in 3:48, if I remember correctly. The gentleman's roadster race was a square and well conducted contest. It was won by a horse named Foxhall, owned by Mr. Wickersham of Fresno, best time 2:47.

The next event was a combination hippodrome between the grey horse Johnnie Hayward, a trotter, and the side wheelers Lela S. and Mikado. This race, in the modern street parlance, was a daisy! Hayward in good shape, can do a mile in about 2:34; Lela S. when right can pace close to 2:20; Mikado has shown better than 2:30. These three horses were practically from one stable. The chief factotum and driver of this stable is a gentleman whose birth place was evidently that green and emerald isle which lies immediately north of England. Owing to a slight imperfection of his larynx—contracted, presumably, while making the slowest horse win—he masquerades under the expressive and charming nom-de-guerre of "Whispering Johnnie." This talented gentleman officiated behind Hayward, the trotter. It had been laid out for Hayward to win, and the initiated got their money in that way. The first heat the little mare Lela S. won in 2:41. She made a disastrous mistake as she rounded the upper turn in the first heat, which left her 9 or 10 open lengths behind. Hayward was then in the lead and moving at his best rate. The mare settled however, closed up the 9 or 10 lengths and won by 3 or 4 lengths—all inside a quarter! This exhibition was made to make the outsiders solid. It would be well to state parenthetically, that it had dawned upon the alleged mind of "Whispering Johnnie" that the Judges—who were honorable and conscientious men—might change drivers on Mikado, and thus frustrate his plans. He accordingly, had a blacksmith take off Mikado's shoes, which weighed a pound, and replace them with plates that weighed four and a half ounces. This bit of pleasantry of course fixed Mikado, so that he could not pace a little bit. After Lela S. won the first heat, the talent started for the sack, and Hayward went away and shut out Lela S. and Mikado in something like 2:34 or 2:35. A couple of gentlemen went into the stand and labored with the judges to such effect that they declared the pools off. This made grass a trifle short for Johnnie, but it still showed that the judges properly appreciated his enterprise, while deprecating his method of carrying it out. Success, however, to Johnnie; long may he wave, and be waved! The Fresno public are getting a little sick of this thing. It's been going on for three years, and they are beginning to shout the name of the Messiah. They take their medicine in good style, and with that despairing calm that precedes death; they gaze fixedly at job after job; the unsavory features of which smell to high heaven, with a grim determination worthy of a better cause.

HEALDSBURG, CAL., July 11, 1888.

H. W. PECK.

they are off at the pace that best suits each one, to meet at the starting point.

The signal is given—they are off. Resway leads, Capucine second, Misty Morning next, Pat Dempsey fourth. They soon drop Resway, and keep in the same order during the first mile, Resway falling still further back, London nowhere. Then brave Pat Dempsey makes an effort for the lead and is successful; but soon Misty Morning takes it away from him. Capucine still remaining third, until the last turn on the homestretch, when, with a gallant effort and with apparent ease, the Frenchman passes Pat Dempsey, and he is beaten; then she goes resolutely for Misty Morning and passes her before Charley can say boo! They are about a hundred yards from the wire. With a masterly effort Charley lifts Misty Morning into a rapid break, rests her, gains time, and tapping her gently with his whip, he overtakes Capucine inch by inch, until, coming to the wire head and head, the judges believe it to be a dead heat. Others say Misty had a head the best of it; anyhow, ten yards more and Capucine was surely beaten. But all is well that ends well, and the great race is at an end, and the bulletin board is hung out, dividing the glory and the shekels. Here is the summary:

Prix de Juin International: to harness; 3,000 f., for all stallions, mares and geldings of all countries, four years old and over, to a two or four-wheel vehicle; 2,000f. and entries to first; 700f. to second; 300f. to third; fourth gets back his entry; entry, 100f.; forfeit, 25f.; weight of vehicle and driver optional; distance, 5,000 meters (three miles and one furlong).

Capucine, French, 8:10.1-5 (rate of 2:37½ per mile).....0
 Misty Morning, American, 8:10.1-5 (rate of 2:37½ per mile).....0
 Pat Dempsey, American, 8:31.....3
 Thabor III., Russian, 8:59.....4
 Unplaced: Resway, London. Drawn; Milton, Kozyr, Vallei de Germany.

This ended the meeting; the guard sounded the bugle to let all know the performance was over; all the cabbers rushed for their fares and I went quietly home to meditate on the fortunes of racing, while the trotters went for their oats. The 8th and 9th of July will be the next dates for Paris-Vincennes. Until then adieu.—FRANCO-AMERICAN in The American Gentleman's Newspaper.

Denver Races—Overland Park Club.

The advertisement of the above club appears in this issue, and the meeting is certainly well worthy the attention of California horsemen. There is far more to consider than the mere winning of the money which is now hung up. With the right kind of support from horse owners the Denver Club will do their part, and meetings fall and spring will be given which will be on a par with the big things further East. It is by far the easiest place to reach, outside of our own slope, and the journey can be made with comparative ease. The following are a few of the points presented by the association, and which are well taken:

FIRST—The dates are so arranged as not to conflict with any of the Great Fall Racing or Trotting events. Racing stables can leave Kentucky at the close of the Latonia meeting, and reach Denver in ample time to compete in the races at Overland Park. Trotting stables engaged at St. Louis, Mo., or Lexington, Ky., the latest in date of the Fall Trotting Meetings, can do likewise.

SECOND—There is, or should be no doubt that Colorado is a most favorable climate for wintering running and trotting horses, and Overland Park, with a large number of first-class stables, and in the immediate vicinity of the lively and enterprising city of Denver, affords ample and desirable winter quarters for horses and their attendants.

THIRD—Denver is on the great highway from the East to the Pacific Coast. Owners and trainers on the way with their stables to California, either returning home or to winter quarters, can take in the Overland Park Meeting, with little, if any, additional expense.

FOURTH—For the stables who remain in Colorado, for those on their way to the Pacific, and for those who may wish to return home after the meeting, in short for all who may attend, the best possible arrangements as to freight and fares will be made with all railroads running into Denver.

FIFTH—The Overland Park Club Association will hold a Spring Meeting early in 1889, arranging the dates so as to give the stables wintering in Colorado, or on the Pacific Coast, a chance to take part, prior to their departure for eastern meetings.

Fair Notes.

We have received for distribution, copies of the premium list of the Tenth Fair of the Sonoma County Agricultural Park Association, to be held at Santa Rosa, August 13-18.

The Southern California Breeders' Association has decided that one-half entrance will be forfeit in the running races of its meeting, October 23 to 27.

The Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Association have added to their attractive programme a purse of $700 for a 2:23 class. This contest will take place August 21st, the first day of their meeting. This race will be open to all horses eligible.

The Napa and Solano District Fair Association has made some changes in the terms of the running races of its meeting, to be held at Napa, October 2 to 6. In each case entrance will be $25; $10 forfeit. The second horse will receive $50. Mr. Fred W. Loeber is the new president.

The Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Association have added to their programme a special trotting purse of $400 for the 2:40 class. Entries close August 1st in this race, as is the free for all trotting and free for all pacing races. All the other races are closed, with a goodly lot of entries.

The Nevada State Agricultural Society has issued a list of their excellent and well distributed premiums. They offer two premiums of $100 and $50 to the county making the best exhibit, which is calculated to stimulate the various counties to emulation.

One consignment of our northern horses has already started for the Los Angeles Fair. The Palo Alto car left Oakland, July 19 at 8 p. m., with twelve horses, including Manzanita, 2:16. H. W. Seales, of Mayfield, will ship his horses in a few days.

Shippers to the Los Angeles Fair will not be annoyed by unloading their stock at the city stock yards, and leading the long distance across the city, for the Association has built a good chute at the Agricultural Park, so that horses may be unloaded within a few yards of the stalls they are to occupy.

The Fresno Fair Association have just issued their advertisements of a meeting which they will hold at Fresno, September 25 to 3. They have arranged an excellent programme, and has expended this year $15,000 in erecting a new club house and pavilion. Besides this, they have put the grounds into excellent order, and have fitted up plenty of good box-stalls for the expected trotters.

Mr. P. Dornaleot of Los Angeles has matched his blk g Del by Falsetto, out of Mattie Service, to run one mile against Senator E. R. Den's b s Consuelo by Billy Lee, out of Lena R., at the Agricultural Park Track in this city for $1,000 a side. The race is to be run on the 2d of August next, and the whole of the stakes are up in the hands of Mr. H. Covarrubias of Los Angeles.

The San Luis Obispo Agricultural Association have made some important changes in their already attractive programme. The running mile dash on the first day has been changed to a 2:40 trotting class. The trotting and pacing purse on the fifth day has been increased to $150, and that for the free for all purse on the same day has been increased to $1,000. All harness purses will be divided into four moneys, 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent.

SALES OF TROTTING STOCK—G. Valensin, of Valensin Stock Farm, has sold to F. E. Waters, of Genoa Junction, Wis., the brown colt Faust, foaled March 25, 1888, by Sidney, dam Fanstine by Crown Point, 2:24, sire of Valensin, three-year-old record 2:23; second dam Dell Foster by A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow, pacer 2:14; third dam by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., (California) rec. 2:27; fourth dam thoroughbred. Price $750. Also,

To Andy McDowell the bay filly Sidna, one year old, by Sidney, dam Lady Hannah by Arthurton; second dam by Langford. She showed a trial of a quarter in 40½ seconds the third time she was ever driven a quarter. Price $1,000.

TRAP.

Alameda County Club.

The scores of the July meeting, held on Saturday last at Bird's Point, were much better than at the previous meeting. The birds were not especially fast but were strong and took a lot of killing. Mr. A. F. Adams again put a clean score to his credit, and if he does as well in August he will win the special prize for the year, a very costly silver water pitcher. Mr. Schroeder also got a clean dozen although a new man at the sport. Dr. Knowles at thirty yards, using a 10 lb. 16 bore, scored all his birds but the last two. Mr. Osborne had a similar experience, Messrs. Lake, Kellogg, Beck and Brown also got into the double figures.

Mr. Coffin who was absent from the June meeting shot up his score getting nine.

At 12 birds, Hurlingham. For club trophies.

Lincoln Gun Club.

The club shot at Alameda Point on Sunday last, the hottest day of this year, and one quite unfit for good work. In the first class Mr. Campbell won with 12 breaks, C. H. Cate second. Messrs. Scovern, Mellish and Parke getting but 10 each. A score of ten by Karney won the second class medal, F. Cate and Brown tying for second.

At 15 single Blue Rock targets. For club trophies.

The Blue Rock Club will use Birds' shooting ground during the rest of the season, the proprietor having agreed to erect a suitable shooting stand.

To avoid the necessity of answering queries about the matter by letter, it may be said that the report of the death of Doctor S. E. Knowles was a hoax perpetrated upon the Chronicle newspaper by some unknown. A more stupid attempt at joking cannot be conceived, and the joker, if found, will have his reckoning with Doctor Knowles who is in perfect health and strength.

At Seattle.

A very interesting trap tournament was that at Seattle, W. T., on July 4th and 5th, under management of the Seattle Rod and Gun Club and the Queen City Club, also of Seattle. Mr. William Robertson kindly sends the scores, and with them the statement that a most pleasant meeting was had. Teams came from Portland and Tacoma, and all arrangements were so perfected that a great deal of shooting was done in a short time. The scores at Blue Rock targets averaged very high, considering the difficulty with which that target is hit, but among all the experts present not one reached a clean score, the best being 19 for Kellogg and Davis, and 18 for Winston, Bell, Robertson and Evans.

At 21 Blue Rock targets, 18 yards. Team match. $12 entrance. First won by Seattle R. and G. Club, second by Tacoma Rifle, R. and G. Club, third by Queen City Club team No. 1.

ROD.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Mr. E. T. Allen of this city has been in the East for some weeks, traveling about among manufacturers and dealers in sportsman's goods with a view to enlarging his already exceedingly satisfactory business connections. The trip has not been solely a business one, his wife having accompanied him. One incident was a cod fishing excursion from Cohasset, Mass., in which Col. Benjamin S. Lovell of Boston, Mr. Allen, Mr. A. B. Grover and Mr. Bates took part. A yacht was chartered and a famous fishing ground known as Minot's Ledge visited. Col. Lovell caught about all the fish, the San Franciscan being occupied otherwise, principally in heaving bait, and begging his companions to heave him overboard. Mr. Allen should practice riding on the Sausalito ferry before venturing upon the deep sea in company of such an old sea dog as Colonel Lovell.

AMERICAN FISHES: A popular treatise upon the Game and Food Fishes of North America, with Especial Reference to Habits and Methods of Capture. By G. Brown Goode. With Numerous Illustrations. Pp. XVI., 496. Standard Book Company. The J. Dewing Company, San Francisco, Agents.

The labors of Professor Goode in connection with those of his grand co-laborer and chief, the late Professor Baird, have resulted in the accumulation of a vast amount of useful knowledge relating to fishes, most of which has been phrased in terms of scientific exactness and unintelligibility to the average reader. The knowledge would always remain practically inaccessible but for such works as that under review. The author is peculiarly fitted for such a task as that so perfectly accomplished in the beautiful volume just printed. The scope of the book is wide, yet, the field is covered in a manner both profitable and entertaining.

Modestly disclaiming much, there is yet so careful a compilation of data collected through many years as to make the work an all sufficient compendium to readers who desire to be well informed, but who do not care to go in for special studies in the line of fishes and fish culture. Professor Goode is an angler, and throughout his work interjects shrewd little suggestions and quaint bits of experience and theory that add much to the charm which anglers must feel as they follow him through descriptions of the habits, methods of capture, habits and bodily peculiarities of all edible and game fishes to be found on the continent. Except in a few instances where necessity impels, as in the esocid and salmonid, strictly scientific differentiation is omitted, without, however, admitting any statement not supported by the latest research. The scientific name of each fish is given, together with all of the popular local names, and types of important species in each genus are so accurately illustrated as to enable any possessor of the volume to quickly give any strange fish its proper place.

A colored frontispiece of rare beauty represents a good trout on a redebit fly in a pool, the like of which is a dream of every angler; another illustration shows clearly the action of the salmon in ascending a cascade, a matter about which many opinions have been held. As though to gild refined gold the author has gathered choice and appropriate poetic excerpts with singular taste. An addition to the solid information offered, which will be appreciated and to disarm even the captious critic, after following his fishes up the point of capture, he offers a selection of recipes for dressing them which out-Walton even the Patron of Fins. The work is of handy size, has the illustrations inserted in the text, and is beyond compare the book for all who desire to know the fishes or fishing of the country. Pacific Coast readers, especially, will be interested in what is said of the salmon, salmon trout, and other game fish of the West Coast. We can, after reading closely and most thoroughly enjoying every line of Professor Goode's masterpiece, do our readers no greater favor than to urge them to secure the book, which can be supplied by the J. Dewing Company, of San Francisco.

Mr. John M. Adams writes from Webber Lake that his best catch, as yet, has been thirty-one for a day, all taken on the governor, red wing, coachman, March brown and dun spider. He adds that Mr. Ramon Wilson and wife are fishing every day and having fair sport. Many calm afternoons have interfered with success, but in compensation, such fish as have been taken have been uncommonly fat and game. Judge Bicknell sent a catch of fish to friends from Webber last week, that averaged more than 1½ pounds.

From Bowman's Dam the statement comes that the trout are rising freely. Mr. Thos. J. O'Keefe who recently visited that beautiful place, had bad luck, no flies being on the water. Mr. George Fletcher, of Grass Valley, has, however, recently made heavy catches.

At Cisco the fishing is superb, the river being just right and the trout keen. Cisco is the only place in California where Eastern brook trout can be taken, and that fact, together with the comfort of the place and the grandeur of the scenery, make it a favorite resort for those who love to cast a fly, of whom the number grows fast space.

Strawberry Valley, on the South Fork of the American River, is affording good sport to a large company of anglers. The fish average rather small as yet, but by August 1st will be at their best.

The trout at San Andreas and Pilsroitos have about recovered from the parasitic trouble which made them undesirable for a year or so, and good baskets of good fish are being taken.

Messrs. Fred S. Woody, Secretary of the Olympic Club, and Mr. Ed. Bosque, of the Anglo-Nevada Assurance Corporation, are at Johnsville, Sierra County, the latter convalescing after a severe illness. They are killing deer and trout in any desired numbers.

There is talk among local anglers about forming a fishing party to Alaskan waters, where trout and salmon are said to be in myriads and very game. Last year a noted fisherman of San Francisco visited Alaska, and his talks have fired many who have, heretofore, been content with lesser fish. The trip can be made in a few weeks and at quite moderate expense, and within a very few years this will be the excursion for all who go in earnestly for fishing.

Mr. John O. Cadman fished a few days ago in the Little Sacramento near Sisson's, and had fine sport, filling a heavy basket with half pounders and larger ones. The fish took the fly well.

There will soon be good black bass fishing at Cisco, where two mountain lakes have been stocked from Crystal Springs fish. In the icy water of the Sierras the bass should afford the best of sport, as well as be most toothsome morsels.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Prefixes Claimed.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Applications have been filed for the sole use of the prefixes herein named by the following kennels.

Meadowthorpe Kennel Club, Lexington, Ky., claims the prefix Meadowthorpe.

Hempstead Farm Kennel, Hempstead, L. I., claims the prefixes Hempstead and Meadowbrook.

Mr. August Belmont Jr., Hempstead, L. I., claims the prefix Blemton.

Mr. T. C. Faxon, Boston, Mass., claims the prefix Kilmar-nock.

Objections, if any, may be forwarded to me at any time within two weeks.

A. P. VREDENBURGH, Secretary A. K. C.
NEW YORK, July 7, 1888.

Names Claimed.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I claim the names of Bismarck and Braunsfelds for two dogs and Genevieve, Genesta, Alva and Lady Pinch for four bitches, whelped April 4th, out of Galatea, by Tom Pinch. I have sold Bismarck to H. A. Bassford, of Vacaville, and Genevieve to H. C. Golcher, of San Francisco.

DUTCH FLAT, July 11, 1888.

Rules Governing Dog Shows, as Adopted by the National Dog Club of America.

I. The word dog, where used in these rules, includes both sexes.

II. Every dog entered at any show held under these rules must be the bona-fide property of the person making such entry, on the day of closing the entries. The entry must clearly identify the dog to be exhibited by name, and, if known, its date of birth, name of its sire and dam, and the name of its breeder. Should any of these particulars be unknown to the exhibitor, it must be so stated on the entry blank and inserted in the catalogue.

III. If the name of a dog, which has won a prize, has been changed, the name under which it won the last prize must also be given on the entry blank and inserted in the catalogue, together with a list of all prizes won by the dog.

IV. If the dog has been entered without being clearly identified, as directed in Rule 2 and 3, it shall be disqualified and forfeit any prize which may have been awarded to it.

V. The breeder of a dog is the person owning or leasing the bitch at the time of her being bred.

VI. A puppy is eligible for competition in either the puppy or open class, or both, unless prohibited by the special rules of any show.

VII. The authorities of any show may reserve to themselves the right of declining any entries they may see fit, or of removing any dog on account of disease, vice or other cause.

VIII. A recognized veterinary surgeon must be appointed at each show held under these rules. Each dog received at a show must be passed upon by him before being benched.

IX. A castrated dog or spayed bitch shall be disqualified, and forfeit any prize which may have been awarded it.

X. Total blindness, deafness and lameness shall absolutely disqualify. If the judge or veterinary surgeon is satisfied that the deafness or lameness is temporary, the dog shall be allowed to compete.

XI. A dog suffering from msnge or any contagious disease shall be disqualified and forfeit any prize which may have been awarded to it, and shall be removed at once from the show building. The regularly appointed veterinary surgeon shall alone decide as to msnge or contagious disease, and his decision must be given in writing.

XII. A judge may disqualify a dog which, in his opinion, has been improperly tampered with, subject to the decision of the veterinary surgeon, which must be given in writing. Should the judge's disqualification not be sustained, the class must be immediately rejudged.

XIII. Full discretionary power is given to the judge of each class to withhold any or all prizes for want of merit. The judge's decision will be final in all cases affecting the merits of the dogs, and appeals can only be entertained where misrepresentation or breach of the rules is discovered.

XIV. Should an appointed judge be unable to fulfill his engagement, the committee shall have the right to fill the vacancy in such manner as they see fit. All the separate classes of any one breed of dogs must, however, be adjudicated upon by the same judge or judges acting in conjunction. An exhibitor may, however, at his option, withdraw from competition under such substituted judge, his entries of any one breed, provided he withdraws all of such breed.

XV. In any class where there is a limit of weight, the person in charge of a dog entered in such a class may claim of the show committee the right, at any time before the judging, to have his dog weighed, and the weight of the dog shall be registered and hold good at the time of judging.

XVI. A dog to compete in a champion class must have won five first prizes—exclusive of puppy classes, and classes not confined to one breed—at shows approved by the National Dog Club, a list of which, together with these rules, must be published in the premium list and catalogue of each show. A first champion prize won at an approved show shall be counted as a first prize win.

XVII. In estimating the number of prizes a dog has won, with reference to whether it should compete in a champion class or not, the number of prizes won shall be calculated up to 12 P. M. of the day proceeding the closing of the entries of the show.

XVIII. In entering a dog in a champion class, it is necessary to specify on the entry blank a sufficient number of first-prize winnings to entitle it to compete in such a class, and this record must be given in the catalogue.

XIX. Every dog entered in a regular class is eligible to compete for special prizes, and no such dog shall be withdrawn from competition unless it has been stated on the entry blank "not to compete for special prizes." To compete for a special prize a dog must have been entered in its regular class, but a dog may be entered "to compete for specials only."

XX. No dog eligible for special prizes can be withdrawn from competition unless it has been stated on the entry blank "Not to compete for special prizes."

XXI. No special prizes can be accepted or offered by a show committee after the show is opened.

XXII. The age of a dog shall be calculated up to and inclusive of the day preceding the show. A dog whelped April 30 shall not be eligible on May 1 of the following year to compete in a class for dogs under 12 months of age.

XXIII. An objection to a dog may be made by any person, but must be in writing and be lodged with the secretary of the show within ten days of the last day of the show. The objection must (except in the case of an objection made in the name of the National Dog Club or by the committee of the show) be accompanied by a deposit of five dollars, and if the objection is decided to be frivolous the deposit shall be forfeited to the committee of the show. From a decision of the committee of any show held under these rules, appeal may at once be made to such members of the executive committee of the National Dog Club as may be present, and if the decision is sustained by them, the five dollar deposit is thereby forfeited to the show committee. From any such decision or decisions, appeal may be taken to the full executive committee of the National Dog Club, but such appeal must be forwarded to the secretary within seven days of the first decision being rendered, together with a deposit of ten dollars. If the decision appealed from is sustained the ten dollar deposit shall be forfeited to the National Dog Club, but if the decision is reversed, then all deposits must be returned to the appellant.

XXIV. Any person who has been guilty of misconduct of any kind in connection with dogs, dog shows or field trials, may be suspended by the committee of any show. Notice of such suspension, together with all testimony in the case, must be forwarded within twenty-four hours to the secretary of the National Dog Club. The secretary shall thereupon notify the president or, in his absence, the vice-president, who may, upon investigation of the case, suspend the penalty until the next meeting of the executive committee. At such meeting the penalty must either be removed or the person suspended be disqualified for such a period as the executive committee may decide.

The disqualification of an owner shall apply to all dogs connected with the perpetration of a fraudulent act, but the executive committee of the National Dog Club may use such discretion in the enforcement of this penalty as shall protect innocent persons.

XXV. No person under suspension or sentence of disqualification can exhibit or take a prize or act as agent for any person at any show held under these rules.

XXVI. Entries made in the name of a kennel, must be accompanied by the name of the actual proprietor or proprietors, but not necessarily for publication. The partners in a kennel will be deemed equally culpable in the case of fraud perpetrated in the kennel name.

XXVII. The premium list of each show must contain the names of the officials under whose management the show is being given, each of whom, except paid employees, shall be held personally responsible for the payment of all prizes within sixty days from the last day of the show. The secretary of the National Dog Club shall, upon evidence being produced that any such prize or prizes remain unpaid, issue notice of suspension of each and every official, and otherwise provided for in rule twenty-two.

XXVIII. The person presenting the identification ticket shall be recognized as the agent of the owner in the latter's absence, and his receipt for prize money shall be binding on the owner, unless notice to the contrary is endorsed on the identification ticket.

XXIX. All prizes offered by the club or committee in charge of a show must be paid in accordance with the description given of them in the premium list. Prizes described as of silver or gold must be of metal of recognized purity.

XXX. The show committee may adopt such regulations as they see fit, provided they do not conflict with the foregoing rules.

APPROVED SHOWS.

Elsewhere will be found the show rules of the National Dog Club, which are well worth study as embodying the views of a large number of fanciers of admitted repute. The constitution of the Club does not differ materially from the usual form of such instruments. Annual dues are $5 and life membership $20. Another provision is that the management shall be entrusted to an executive committee of fifteen members, who shall be elected by a vote of all the members in good standing, for a term of three years, except that of the first committee, in order that five members of this committee shall be elected annually, five shall be chosen by lot to retire at the end of the first year, and five at the end of the second year, but to continue in office until their successors are elected and take office. The retiring members of the committee are eligible for re-election.

The election shall take place at the annual meeting of the club, thirty days prior to which the secretary shall forward to each member a printed slip containing the names of the executive committee and of all members in good standing, together with a stamped addressed envelope indorsed "Election." Each member will check off the names of five members he desires to vote for to fill the vacancies about to occur on the executive committee, and also the names of four members as vice-presidents, and sign his name on the slip. All such sealed envelopes shall be cast as ballots at the annual meeting and counted by the tellers as votes. Members present at the meeting shall deposit their ballots personally.

It has been intimated that the National Club has been organized primarily to oppress and weaken the American Kennel Club. As advised, we do not think such to be the fact. Its members are not of the sort who would do such a thing. If it should appear that personal animosities guide the institution there can be but one outcome for it—decay and dissolution.

Eureka Races.

We were much pleased to learn the success of the races at Eureka. The first man "interviewed" who had returned from there at the time was Mr. Elisha Downer.
He was full of the trip, and expressed his approbation in unmeasured terms. A good judge Mr. Downer certainly is and so we expected endorsements, and this expectation was fully realized. Our correspondent may be thought enthusiastic in his praises of the people, course, country and all of the surroundings, as well as esoteric connections. That a spring meeting turned out so well was due to the racing portion of the programme, the trotting division holding back on account of retaining eligibility in the main circuit. This feature will ultimately be changed. It will not be long until an animal which is fit to cope successfully in the slow classes will be good company in all races, perhaps the very fastest, and records likely to be obtained so early in the season no great hindrance. The associations have it in their power to partially remedy the evil, and by apportioning the classes so as to give a good deal the most money to fast grades do away with the temptation to hold back for the slower. Then, too, records are not such a dread as they were, and as trotting gets more and more in the hands of breeders, fast marks will be sought in lieu of being avoided.

We congratulate the active men of the Eureka Club over their successful meeting. That success was merited and is an augury of a still brighter future.

The Fairs—Oakland, Sacramento, Reno, Stockton, San Luis Obispo.

With the exception of the Golden Gate, which has only been partially noticed, the list of advertised fairs which are to be held previous to the State Fair, have been briefly outlined. From August 6th to October 23d, there are no less than eighteen fairs advertised, sixteen in California, two in Nevada. Eight of these precede the State Fair, which covers two weeks, so that there is necessarily some crowding and clashing of dates, though there is less trouble from this cause in the later dates.
The week previous to the State Fair there are three held, and as was shown in the paper of last week, this does not imply a failure of entries in either. Stockton, San Luis Obispo, and the Nevada State Fair are held the week after the close of the Sacramento Exhibition.
These places are so far apart that there is only a slight interference and that mainly in the cases of Reno and Stockton. The entries close at different times, Reno delaying until August 20th, which is also the date of closing at Carson City. Marysville closes on the 10th of August, and with these exceptions the closing date is August first. It was, in our opinion, a wise move on the part of the managers of the Nevada Fairs to postpone the closing until after the Los Angeles and Santa Rosa fairs told their tale. Some few horses will be thrown out of the classes to which they were eligible on the first of the month, but those which have not disturbed their eligibility will have a greater degree of confidence, and be more likely to go into distant engagements.

Taking them in rotation, picking up the thread where it was loosened last week, and the conclusion of the Golden Gate will be first in order. The programme is by by long odds the best ever gotten up by the association.
Alternating the racing and trotting, by giving a a day to each is much the better the better plan when there are events enough to justify that kind of grouping.
On the opening day the stallion purse of $1,500, which was commented upon last week with a purse of $1,000 for the 2:25 class on the same day is a good commencement.

Four running events are on the card for the second day, everyone of them likely to secure a large number of nominations. When it involves so little trouble as turning over a few leaves there is no necessity for repeating what is embodied in the advertisements, and unless there are special causes for comment our readers are referred to them for that part of the story. The second harness day has a purse of $600, for three-year-old pacers, and to those who have a limited knowledge of the young stock of California, it will appear to be a queer provision. It certainly struck us at first in that light, but when informed that there were a whole drove of youngsters which gave great promise of being number ones and something more in that way of rapid locomotion the wonder was dispelled. There appears to be quite an animated dispute in relation to the young pacers which will be settled by this arrangement. The third trotting day has also a unique feature, that being a purse of $1,000 for horses which have not beaten three minutes with a further condition that they must be four years old or over. Again it would seem illogical to bar those who labor under the handicap of juvenility, to such an extent as that expressed in the conditions, and that they should be denied a chance of triumphing over their elders, though it is only a tribute to the excellence of California colts. There are three-year-olds which are eligible to that class which would absurdly give those which have earned the right to trot in much faster classes a great deal of trouble, and if permitted to take part would shorten the entry list. The same conditions are embodied in the 2:40, so that the only chance for three years and under is in the classes below. And this becoming apparent from a more careful scrutiny of the programme there is a gap which it is difficult to account for. That the peculiar pride of California, her young trotters should be ignored is in all probability an oversight such that as we cannot account for it on any other hypothesis.

Now that the Oakland Trotting Park has been secured for the Golden Gate Exhibition, there is likely to be a grand display of stock of all kinds. "Handy to get to," still handier when the stock is moved from there. The 16th street and Market street stations are not far off, the 16th being on the main line so that all shipments from above and from the lower country can be landed there. There is nothing in the way as the route from station is through a part of Oakland which does not present impediments, with smooth streets for the stock to travel upon. When the fair is over a train of stock cars is made up within a furlong of the entrance gate so that horses and cattle can be led in a few minutes from their stalls into them. That the coming fair will be successful is as nearly assured as anything of that nature can be foretold. The track is now in fine order and with a guarantee that it will be still improved.

SACRAMENTO.

We have written so much in regard to the California State fair in the years of our residence here, that it is difficult to avoid repetition of what has already been public. Part of that we have no desire to avoid telling over and over again that being a reiteration of praises all of which were worthily bestowed. Previous to 1874, we were passably well informed about the fairs and exhibitions of the East, very many of them we attended, all of them studied. In many respects the California exposition is so far in advance of those of the East, that the task of comparison is quite troublesome. Those who are acquainted with the resources of the Pacific Coast, can realize that when properly handled no other portion of the United States can vie with it. That the handling has been in the main judicious the past has demonstrated, and that there will be advance in place of retrogression is beyond a doubt. As now constituted the board of managers is of the highest class, and every officer connected with it is emphatically the "right man in the right place." The greatest obstacle to surmount in writing a sketch of this character is the vast amount of matter to consider and say anything without taking the whole paper to present the subject in a proper light.
Fortunately to do more than "call it" when its turn comes is in a measure unnecessary. A synopsis of the "speed department" shows thirty-two races, seventeen running, fifteen trotting and pacing. Two grand meetings crowded into nine days. And while the devotees of turf and track are granted the opportunity of witnessing their favorite sport, there are other allurements which fill up the hours, so that it takes a good deal of resolution to secure enough of the flying moments for "refreshment and repose." Grand parades, exhibitions of the finest stock in the world in the morning, besides both courses thronged with gallopers, trotters and pacers, and in the evening the pavilion with its wealth of attractions.

The speed programme will give a clue to what may be reasonably anticipated under that head, were the whole of the premium list copied there could only be a faint idea of what the exhibition will realize to those who attend.

RENO.

Grand as the California State Fair is sure to be, even those who spend the whole of the two weeks in Sacramento will find that a week passed in the heart of the sage brush country will be enjoyed to the utmost. We speak from actual knowledge, and have no hesitancy in promising that those who visit Reno will not be content with that one week, but will take in Carson the following, so as to see more of the country and the people of that hospitable region. When we recall the visit made several years ago, we feel that all the economies we can offer fall short of the reality, and to put it in a few words if any reasonable man will make the trip and not endorse our position he can draw upon us at sight for the best dinner and accompaniments that can be got in San Francisco, with the proviso, however, that if we are to participate in the good things which can be got at ———, it must be after the National Stake is decided. Not the stake which has the White Horse and a lot of etceteras hung on the wire, and in which there is sure to be a heap of foul driving and worse practices than ever known on a race track; but where we hope to see eight gallant steeds all in prime fettle, all in good luck, and everyone of them gaining honor by exceeding the expectations of his most sanguine supporters. To better the chances of getting a good place in that is well worth so great a sacrifice as "missing the fairs," and though when writing of what it is reasonable to anticipate there are many paus felt over the verdict of non-participation, then comes the hope that the self-denial may be rewarded.

The sun broke from the eastern horizon as the car was "slowing up" to the depot at Reno. We had been standing on the platform of the sleeping car for several miles, having left the bunk at daybreak, and though the air was somewhat chilly it was as fresh as an opening rose-bud. There was rime on the track as we sauntered along the line, a patch of alfalfa, on the borders of which a streamlet was dancing over the stones. Green the luzerne with sparkling dots on the sunny side of the leaf, the shaded still glittering with the frost spangles. The breakfast which awaited at the depot hotel was enough to tempt a dyspeptic, to one who had inhaled the crisp morning air, walked a mile or two, part of the time listening to the tune tinkled by the clear water, who has a normal appetite equal to an old-time four-miler, it was a joy to be long remembered. Venison stakes done to a turn, with homemade currant jelly to accompany, speckled trout which had the gout of those caught in the mountain streams of Pennsylvania and cooked before there was time to lose the freshness of water fed from the springs, game of various kinds, coffee which had aroma and inspiration in a plentiful degree, the whole a fitting epilogue to the ramble in an atmosphere which was also an inspiration to breathe. But if we were to portray all the enjoyments which fell to our lot during the sojourn at Reno, and which were intensified thereafter in the continuation of the trip to Carson and Virginia City there would be little space for more practical matter, that is affairs more germane to the subject.

As will be learned from the programme, racing is the main feature of the speed department. This we regard as being also a wise move, as the trotters could not be expected to break away from the California circuit with Stockton at the same date. Still there are open to all trotters the 2:27 class, 2:40 and 2:22 classes with a free-for-all pacing. Of these there should be plenty to make good fields at Reno and Stockton, with an enough left to do the open race at San Luis Obispo. As previously stated, there are so many race-horses in training on the Coast, that it may be considered a boon to owners and trainers that there is the opportunity to make selections, and that does not interfere with the places where the meetings are to be. Without actual consultations, prior to the time of the closing of entries, the route which certain horses will take can be guessed with a good deal of accuracy, and thus by a division of forces insure good sport in each locality.

STOCKTON.

To sound the praises which we know to be the just due of the managers of fairs, might appear like the story of the cuckoo — iteration. Every place we have had the good fortune to visit since our residence in the "Golden West" has been marked with the same cordial greeting, the same hospitality, the geniality, and so far as we have been able to discover, the same desire to do the "straight thing." As in every other branch of human affairs there will be some to find fault. In racing and trotting there are such opportunities for disagreements that it is somewhat surprising that there should be as little grumbling as there is. Plenty of it at that, but usually when there is time for calm retrospection a more sensible view is taken. The dual president, Mr. Shippee, we have long considered as one of the very best managers we have met in our experience, and that covers quite a period, and extends from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In looking so closely as he does after the business of the associations of which he is the executive, it may appear that he hears a little too rigidly on individual interests. But if due consideration be awarded it will be found that in protecting the interests of the societies he is also advancing those of owners. He works with a will. He has done more to enlarge the amount given to trotters than many people are aware of. In order to give the amounts which have characterized the San Joaquin fair, some of the conditions incorporated may appear onerous. They are, however, stated plainly, so that parties to the contract know just what they are, and the agreement need not be signed if it does not meet with the approval of the "party of the other part." It is merely a question whether large purses shall prevail with the stipulations annexed, or smaller sums with easier terms.

In contra distinction to the Nevada State Fair the harness horses predominate. There are nineteen events, five of which are running, all of which are open. The open trotting to the "Pacific Coast," (and this should be changed to "free-for-all") are $1,000, three-minute class, $1,200, 2:30 class; $1,000, 2:35 class; $1,200, free-for-all; $1,200, 2:22 class; $1,000, 2:27 class, and several stakes which closed some time ago. These are certainly liberal purses, and then there are a $500 for pacers of the 2:27 class, and $700 for the free-for-all pacers. Fifteen thousand dollars is quite a sum to be given in the "speed department" of our fair, and merits the return of plenty of entries. In addition to the purses and stakes which are to be divided at the coming fair, there will also close the fixed events for 1889 and 1890, and of which full particulars will be found in the advertisement.

SAN LUIS OBISPO.

Notwithstanding that the purses at the San Luis Obispo Fair are mainly confined to horses owned in the district and named counties, there is a free for all trotting to which $500 is given. There are fifteen races in all, with a fair division among racers, trotters and pacers. Several of them are sure to be interesting contests, the stallion race and free-for-all the most noteworthy. Stallions are given a great chance this year in California, and we cannot recall a season when there was such a grand opportunity to gain distinction. Ownership of stallions in Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties gives eligibility, and there are some very promising horses owned in these counties. There is no class which will awaken a like excitement when there are a number of pretty nearly the same caliber. Locality has a great deal to do with favoritism, and those who own some of the stock are likely to be particularly anxious for the success of the sire. The different strains of blood have warm advocates, and there are also what may be termed passing fancies to add to the desire of witnessing the contest. While this fair is restricted to the counties named, with the exception of the free-for-all and one of the running races, it does not follow that there will be any lack of competitors, as there are some extensive breeding farms, and a general interest taken in the improvement of horses. Sargeant brothers, Hon. Jesse D. Carr, the Santa Maria Rancho, Hon. George Hearst and many others are engaged in breeding. We have heard that country extolled in the highest terms as being peculiarly well adapted for rearing fine horses, and there is nothing like fairs to increase the number of breeders and also educate the people to a better knowledge of types and races.

Carson City, San Jose, Fresno, Napa and San Diego will complete the list, and we must reiterate that there is no portion of the world where like attractions are offered, or where so much money is given when the population is taken into consideration.

Our Racehorses in the East.

The event which has caused more talk and more regrets than anything which has occurred since California racehorses have been East, is the reported breaking down of the Emperor of Norfolk. So far, the Santa Anita Stable had been fortunate, winning a number of big races and raising a decided sensation with the colt which had clearly demonstrated his title to being the best three-year-old of the year. He had all the requisites of a first-class racehorse. Size, form, great speed, ability to carry weight and the power to compass any distance which he was called upon to accomplish. Had the misfortune been delayed until after the proposed meeting with The Bard and Terra Cotta the blow would not have been so severe. After making due allowance for favoritism, there were good grounds for the belief that he was equal to the task of winning the victory for California, and that would be the crowning glory of the campaign. When the full and correct intelligence is received it may prove that the case is not so bad as first reported, though there is little hope of being able to race again this year.

With the victory of Geraldine in the match against Rosarium all of the California stables have made a mark. Some of the horses which partially failed to meet expectations, though there is time enough for redemption before the homeward journey is entered upon. There is little question that the owner of Geraldine (Mr. R. P. Ashe) recouped all of his losses and expenditures on his speedy filly, and his many friends will be pleased to learn of his success. Another gratification would be for Grover Cleveaud to win, and as he has run a good second that hope is not unreasonable.

Aurelia won a grand race for Mr. Haggin last Monday, and it may be that there is likely to be a turn of luck in favor of Rancho Del Paso. Sorrento landed McCarty on his feet, and had he restricted his "string" to that good colt and one, perhaps two others, it would have been a wise move. The ups and downs are nearly certain in racing, the downs a little the most likely to preponderate. Stables seem for a time to be invincible and then the tide turns, or there may be such a bad run of luck that the turn in the lane seems farther off than ever, but as a rule game and endurance will win at last. It is too early yet for a summing up of our horses in the East, and we have not lost any of that confidence which prompted rosy predictions of the result of the trip.

Quotations from Horse Portraiture.

We had no intention at the outset of "General Topics" of copying nearly so much as forced itself in. The purpose was to sketch briefly the difference between past and present practices in training trotters, but discovered that one quotation would give a very erroneous impression of the old method. Even what is given does not explain as fully as we would desire the modus operandi of a quarter of a century ago. The methods pursued with very fast horses would not be greatly out of place at present, provided due care was taken to follow the instructions, though dangerous in the extreme when caution was not observed.

But there are other points of departure which we deem still more important, some of them which might be considered trivial, and at some future time the contrast will be presented. There have been numerous inquiries lately received in regard to the book, and as it is "out of print," when "space" is not so great an object, other parts will be quoted.

Time was lacking to present the first sweat of Antevolo in the first form, though a few lines is all that is necessary, and simple enough when compared with the other illustration. He too, is fat, not so heavily laden as was the case of Nevermind. The hood something like that described was worn, and that alone; jogged four miles the reverse way with a short move, turned and driven two miles at a stiff gait winding up with a moderate brush. Taken out of harness, one blanket put on, walked from stand to three-quarter pole and back;

a few swallows of plain water before and after, clothes thrown back, scraped nicely, clothes readjusted, walked to seven furlong mark and back, hood and blanket taken off, scraped again, hair straightened. Cooling-out blanket taking the place of heavy blanket and hood, moisture on head and neck not covered with blanket, partially absorbed with rubbing clothes, walked a short time on track, but showing a disposition to play when horses went by at a rapid pace, he was led home, brushed, watered, put in his stall and fed.

While the flow of perspiration was as profuse as we wished there was not enough of it to do much in the way of depletion. The reduction will depend on the future treatment, and future treatment will depend on future necessities.

Palo Alto Stock Farm.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I enjoy the glorious privilege of reading your much valued paper, each week at the above named place, and infer from your teaching that like myself, you are in favor of a thoroughbred cross on the trotter, in this particular we read much, that to the amateur would seem discouraging. With your consent please, I wish to ask a few questions. I have come to the conclusion that I can breed a trotter from a thoroughbred dam, and have secured one with all the essential qualifications, big size, form, action, disposition, etc., what I want to know is, to what family of trotters I shall breed her to insure success. I am putting this question direct to those who write and talk so much on this subject, I accept no clap-trap answer by asking another question, state what you know about it. It seems to me a ridiculous proposition, that because the sire or dam are simply thoroughbred, whether they possess the necessary qualifications or not to produce trotters, ought to cross well with all, or any of our trotting families, when the best trotting families collectively, don't produce two performers that go below 2:20. I allude to those in particular who have no consins, uncles or aunts of the thoroughbred blood, such as we read of being ruined by an admixture of the hot fluid, we ask again which one of the various families do you think best or prefer to use, and why?

PALO ALTO, July 16th.

W. BAXTER, V. S.

Answer to W. BAXTER, V. S.

The answer to the above cannot be given without a long dissertation on all pertaining to the union of two animals which are expected to produce fast trotters. We have more faith in form, performance, procreative ability, etc., when proved than in remote blood lines. Horses of Hambletonian descent "head the list," there are plenty of "Hambletonians" which have been entirely worthless in the stud.

"Simply thoroughbred" or simply trotting-bred may not prove worth a straw as progenitors of trotters. Blue Bull which had little of either, Pilot Jr. with his disputed ancestry, and Mambrino Chief are instances where success has followed. With such a mare as our correspondent describes, we should have full confidence in obtaining a fast trotter from a sire of any of the prominent families which had shown his ability to get fast trotters. With any other it is more or less experimental, at least the risks are greater.

Farmington, Cal.

Please give me through your paper the breeding of the stallion Algerine, driven by Tom McLellan in San Francisco some years ago; also his public record.

Answer—Algerine, record 2:45, b h, foaled 186—, by Capt. Fisher, dam Maria Mink; bred by J. S. Colegrove, of California.

San Diego, Cal.

Please give pedigree of Maid of the Mist?

Answer—Maid of the Mist, ch m by Norfolk, foaled 1873, dam Eva Coombs by Billy Cheatham; second dam Ruby by Winnehsco; third dam Ellen Jordan by imp. Jordan; fourth dam Ellen Tree by Henry; fifth dam Betsy Ransom by Priam.

Subscriber, Colusa, Cal.

Four horses enter in a district purse race, two of them come to the score and two fail. The directors allow another horse to enter and go in the race. Do the two failing to come to score lose their entry or not?

Answer.—They do not lose their entry. The first race was off, and this race, with a new horse in, was a new race.

Reader, San Bernardino Co.

Please give pedigree of (1) Judge McKinstry. 2. Lady Vernon. 3. Hamilton Chief. 4. Williamson's Belmont.

Answer—Judge McKinstry, h h, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease by Planet; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glenoee; third dam Argente by Bertrand, etc.

2. Lady Vernon's pedigree is unknown. She was a gray mare, foaled about 1845, made her record in New York State in 1853; record 2:29½.

3. Hamilton Chief, bred by Leonard Salmon, of Toronto, C. W., h h, by Royal George, son of Black Warrior, dam by American Eclipse; second dam by Geo. Cooper's Messenger.

4. Williamson's Belmont, also called California Belmont, h h, foaled 1847, by American Boy (son of Sea Gull, by imp. Expedition), dam imp. Prunella by Comus; second dam by Partisan. This Belmont is the sire of Venture, record 2:27½, and of the dams of Belle Echo, 2:20; Flora Sheppard, 2:30; Monarch, 2:28½; Nellie Patchen, 2:27½, and Prince, pacer, 2:23½.

Death of James Harvie.

On Wednesday afternoon last at the German hospital, in this city, James Harvie, sporting editor of the Examiner, died of inflammatory rheumatism, the immediate cause of death being invasion of the heart by the disease. A college bred man, with pronounced liking for sport in all its forms, Mr. Harvie showed singular aptness in filling his responsible position, and carried through his work a firmness in behalf of purity, and a cutting contempt for fraud that made his approval worth much. He was a genial, generous and manly man, whose friends, except among those whom his sense of honor compelled him to criticize, were as many as his acquaintances.

A match has been made, to be run this afternoon at Monmouth Park, between Fred Gshhardt's Rosarium and Porter Ashe's Geraldine for $1,000 a side. The distance is a half mile, and the association will add a piece of plate. Geraldine is well known on our tracks. She is by Grinstead, dam Cousin Peggy and is very fast when in good trim, but has been ailing all this season. Rosarium is a four-year-old gelding by the famous Rosicrucian, dam Blue Bell.

Farmers' Horses.

In the early spring of 1882, a dark chestnut gelding, standing 16 hands high, was placed in the hands of Horace W. Brown by A. H. Tower of Lyons, Ky., for training. Mr. Tower purchased the gelding from Stewart C. Purdy, of Geneva, N. Y., for $300, after he had trotted a mile in 2:39. Previous to this trial the horse had helped plough forty acres of corn land on the farm of Mr. Purdy. His speed came to him rapidly in Brown's hands, winning a few races over half-mile tracks, and attracting the attention of Burt Sheldon, of Rochester, who opened negotiations for his purchase. Mr. Tower was not willing to sell at a low figure, and guaranteed the horse to show a fast mile for the selling price of $6,000. In fulfilment of the agreement the horse trotted a trial in 2:22½ over the Rochester track, and Mr. Sheldon became his owner. A few days after the horse started in the 2:33 class at Buffalo, in the Grand Circuit, and won off the reel, beating five others and taking the record of 2:22½. Capt. Lewis then became the phenomenal horse of 1882, and was popularly known as "the plough-horse." His subsequent starts in the Grand Circuit were crowned with victory, ending the campaign with a record of 2:20½. His after experience did not come up to the expectations, owing to an ailing leg, which disabled him out short the career of what promised to be a great horse. Investigation of Capt. Lewis' pedigree disclosed his sire to be Spink, a son of Andy Johnson, by old Henry Clay, dam by Phenomenon, a mare with no known trotting strains.

The next horse of the plow order to spring into prominence was a small bay gelding that won his maiden race at Monticello, Ill., August, 1887. He afterwards started in the 2:35 class at the great St. Louis Fair, gallantly defeating a field of seven, five of which were distanced in the first heat, and making a record of 2:21½. Billy G. started in several races after, but scored no more victories. Like Captain Lewis, his breeding in the trotting lines is not strong.

Farmer Boy is the latest sensation. This is a chestnut gelding by Thomas Jefferson, out of Addie Carpenter by Flying Cloud Jr., and trotting bred. Farmer Boy also performed the humble, but worthy, office of a farm horse before his talent was discovered. Last season he won several races over half-mile tracks in Connecticut, closing with a mark of 2:33½. In the fall he was purchased by W. C. Daly, of running horse fame, who has a weakness for a trotter. "Uncle Bill" is a careful man and likes to have his property always under his eye. Consequently, when the Spring begira was made from Hartford, farmer Boy went along and took his 1888 honing over the new track at Parkville Farm. From time to time "Track and Road" reported progress, the last item conveying the information that he had shown a full mile in 2:18½. There was always doubters, no matter how trustworthy a source a report comes from, and to silence these unbelievers "Uncle Bill" consented to give them a taste of his horse's quality during the recent meeting at Charter Oak Park. This took place on the final day of the meeting. Dressed in the traditional "green above the red," Uncle Bill handled the ribbons, with the clattering feet of a runner alongside to set the pace. The pipe opener was done in 2:22½, and the real effort in 2:18½, with a driver many pounds overweight. The first quarter was trotted in 37 seconds; the half in 1:11½; the three-quarters in 1:45, and the last quarter in 33½ seconds, a 2:13 clip. Farmer Boy has yet to go through the severest test of a trotter, a contest in company with horses of high ability. In such a struggle flash speed will not count. If he can stand the ordeal he has a chance of being the star trotter of 1888, providing he does not pass into private hands at a high figure.

Of the three performers mentioned above, Farmer Boy is the best bred. His sire was a great trotting horse, and his dam was a mare of more than ordinary ability. The blood elements are not what may be called fashionable, but they are stout and true, characteristics which do not invariably distinguish the popular strains.

In the light of the experiences of these three horses the adage, "honor and fame from no condition rise," is aptly illustrated, but breeders who stick to the tried lines are sure of success in the long run.—Spirit of the Times.

Daniel B., a six-year-old sorrel horse, at the Montana Association Meeting, on July 5, broke the record for three-eighths of a mile dash, making the distance in 34½ seconds.

Steeplechasing Abolished at Jerome Park.

If the running-turf is popular in and about New York City, it is as much due to the superb management of the tracks and the faultless catering of the Clubs to the public demands, as to the love of the thoroughbred race-horse. The American Jockey Club has bowed gracefully to public opinion in announcing that the last steeplechase has been run at Jerome Park. As far as this sport was concerned in the last days of the late spring meeting, it was very much of the "butchered-to-make-a-holiday" variety. On one Saturday, a jockey named Cross was killed in a steeplechase, and on the following Monday another horse went down and the rider's life was long despaired of. This caused a shudder to chill all the racing people of the metropolis, and they are a great host. So the old and stately Club has exiled the jumpers, and on Jerome plugs will no longer crack their shins on tripping obstacles. The trouble with steeplechasing on the racing tracks hereabout is that the obstacles are so low and flimsy, in the races the horses are not allowed to take them with care, the riders rushing at the hurdles in a pell-mell scramble, calculated to make the on-lookers' blood run cold. Steeplechasing, as here conducted, is a dangerous imitation of the English "chase." There the high and stable obstacles force the riders to "take the jump" with care, not rushing but rising their horses, and accidents are rare. At its best the steeplechase has few attractions for a genuine horseman. It is a cruel, trying, torturing test, and as conducted on neighboring tracks, an utter abomination. The popular American Jockey Club has done well to drop it, and we would like to hear of its abolition on every race track in America.—Wallace's Monthly.

Cure of Roaring.

In a recent number of the London Times was the following important report on the successful treatment of the disease known as roaring. The article is as follows: We are enabled to make this morning one of the most important announcements that has ever been made in connection with veterinary surgery—this being no other than that a horse has been successfully cured of roaring. This has been successfully accomplished by Dr. George Fleming, C. B., the principal veterinarian to the forces. In order to give a complete history of the case, it will be necessary to quote the following sentences in the report on army horses in 1887, which was issued as a Blue Book last week. In this Dr. Fleming says: "For the morbid condition which causes roaring, sixty-one horses were cast (4.27 per cent.), more than twenty per cent. less than in 1886. Attempts are now being made to abolish this cause of inefficiency by an operation on the larynx which I have introduced, and which I have reason to hope will be successful. If so, it will prove a boon of much value, not only to our mounted corps, but to breeders and owners of horses generally." Even while this was being issued the operation resulted in a complete success. A troop horse at Woolwich was to be cast as useless. He was an excellent horse in all respects, save one; he made such a noise, and was so distressed after going at a fast pace for a few yards, that nothing could be done with him. A fortnight ago he was operated on, and on Monday last, the wound on the larynx having healed, leaving scarcely any trace, he was severely tested. Although he was put for a long time at both trot and gallop, there was no noise, and the respiration was quite free and easy. The horse was reported fit for duty, and is now with the troop. This is the greatest achievement and the most important one in its results we have ever had in veterinary surgery, and Dr. Fleming is to be warmly congratulated on the completeness of his success. He is now engaged in writing a monograph on the conditions which cause roaring, together with a description of his operation. This is a work that will be looked forward to with very lively interest.

The Coney Island Jockey Club announces that during the autumn meeting $1,000 or more will be hung up for each race, whether handicap or a sweepstakes. The club also announces for the autumn meeting the Great Long Island Stakes, a handicap for three-year-olds and upward, of $100 each; $25 forfeit for horses entered by July 15th, or $250 each, $100 forfeit if entered by a date during the meeting to be announced later, with $5,000 added; the second to receive $1,000 of the added money and 20 per cent. of the stakes; the third $500 of the added money and 10 per cent. of the stakes. Two miles and a quarter.

FALL MEETING OF THE

OVERLAND PARK CLUB,

DENVER, COLO., October 20th to 27th, 1888.

The OVERLAND PARK CLUB announces that its Fall Meeting for 1888 will be held on the dates above mentioned, and that Purses and Added Money will be offered amounting to over $10,000. The programme will include Running, Trotting and Pacing Races, but the meeting will not be what is commonly known as a mixed meeting. The Running Races will be on different days from those devoted to Trotting and Pacing, and on a separate mile track expressly and exclusively made for Running Horses and Races, equally as good, conspicuous and desirable as the Trotting Track.

ENTRIES FOR THE FOLLOWING STAKES AND PURSES WILL CLOSE ON WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1888.

RACING STAKES.

1. The Silver Stakes.—Sweepstakes for Two-year-olds (foals of 1886); $10 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $15 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. 2. The Mirage Handicap.—Handicap sweepstakes for two-year-olds (foals of 1886); $10 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $15 additional from those who accept the weights; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third, which $100 to be announced at 1 P. M. the first day of the meeting. Acceptances to be made through the entry box at the usual time of closing the day before the race. The winner of the Silver Stakes to carry five pounds in addition to weight assigned. Seven furlongs.
3. The Colorado St. Leger.—Sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1885); $10 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any stake or purse of the value of $1,500 or more, in 1888, to carry five pounds extra. Horses that have started and not won in 1888 allowed five pounds; maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile and a quarter.
4. The South Park Stakes.—Sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1885); $10 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any race in 1888 of the value of $100 to the third. Winner of any race in 1888 of the value of $750 or more to carry three pounds extra; if of two such races, five pounds extra; if of three or more seven pounds extra. Maidens allowed five pounds. One mile and a furlong.
5. The Denver Cup.—Sweepstakes for all ages; $10 entrance to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any stake race in 1888 of the value of $1,000 or more to carry five pounds extra, of two or more such races, seven pounds extra; maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile and a half.
6. The Rocky Mountain Handicap.—Handicap sweepstakes for all ages; $10 entrance to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any stake race in 1888 of the value of $1,000 or more to carry five pounds extra, of two or more such races, seven pounds extra; maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile and a half.

The running races will take place on Saturday, October 20th, Wednesday, October 24th, and Friday, October 26th. Two stakes and three purse races each day, with an extra day on Monday, October 23rd, should it be deemed desirable. The total amount of running stakes and purses offered on the three regular days will not be less than $5,000. All Running Races governed by the American Racing Rules in force at the date of the meeting (except in regard to trainers and jockey's license.)

TROTTING STAKES.

1. Stake for colts and fillies two years old or under. Mile heats, best two in three; $25 entrance with $300 added by the Club.
 2. Stake for colts and fillies three years or under. Mile heats, best three in five; $25 entrance, with $300 added by the Club.
- The above stakes are to be trotted in harness and to the rules of the American Trotting Association. Entrance due and payable as follows: $5 to accompany the nomination on Wednesday, August 15, 1888; $10 on Saturday, September 15, and the remaining $10 at 8 P. M., on the evening previous to the day set for the race. The stakes, forfeits and added money to be put together and divided: 60 per cent to first horse; 31 per cent to second; 10 per cent to third. In case of any entry distancing the field, or any part thereof, it shall be entitled to all the stakes and forfeits and 60 per cent. of the added money, and no more. A walk-over shall entitle the entry to all the stakes and forfeits, and 30 per cent. of the added money. Nominees shall only be liable for the first payment, but failure to make either of the subsequent payments when due shall be considered a forfeiture, and debar the entry from competing in the race.

GUARANTEED TROTTING PURSES.

1. Purse, $750 for the 2:20 Class.
 1. Purse, $600 for the 2:25 Class.
 1. Purse, $500 for the 2:30 Class.
- Mile heats, best three in five, in harness, and to the rules of the American Trotting Association; entrance

- 10 per cent. of purse; 2½ per cent. payable at date of closing, Wednesday August 15, 1888, when each subscriber shall give his name and postoffice address; 2½ per cent. on Saturday, September 15th, and 2½ per cent. on Monday, October 1st, when horses are to be named; the remaining 2½ per cent. at 8 P. M., the day before the race. No subscription will be received unless the first payment of 2½ per cent. accompanies the same. Subscribers are only liable for the amount of first payment, but failure to make either of the other payments when due shall be considered a withdrawal and forfeiture of the subscription, which shall be surrendered to the Club with right of substitution. Subscribers have the right to transfer their subscriptions. Horses eligible, according to their records on August 15, 1888. Five subscriptions necessary to fill. Money divided: 50 per cent to first horse; 25 per cent to second; 15 per cent to third; 10 per cent to fourth.
- In addition to the above, the following purses will be offered for trotting and pacing, entries to close October 1, 1888, conditions to be published in the Programme and List of Stake Entries about September 1st.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to Stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the 1st day of August, 1888.

Entries for the District Purse must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by the consent of the Judges.

All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race. Entries to all trotting races will close August 20th, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association rules to govern running races, except as above.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in the entries.

Each day's races will commence promptly at one o'clock p. m.

All entries must be directed to C. H. Stoddard, Secretary, Reno, Nevada.

The Ormsby County District Fair, at Carson City, begins September 21st and ends September 29th. Six days racing; gives $7,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address J. D. Torreyson, Secretary, Carson City.

The Humboldt County District Fair begins October 2d, and ends October 5th. Four days racing; gives $3,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address Alex. Wise, Secretary, Winnemucca, Nevada.

The State Agricultural Society has built a new track, located half a mile from the town of Reno, the soil being of such a character as to make it one of the best on the Pacific Coast.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the two-year-old, unless otherwise specified, five to enter, and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 50 per cent. to first horse, 25 per cent. to second, 15 per cent. to third, and 10 per cent. to fourth.

The National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66% to the first, and 33% to the second.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that in the above stakes declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all race entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running races, except when conditions are named otherwise.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Entries in all, except otherwise stated, to close with the Secretary, Wednesday, August 1, 1888.

CONDITIONS.

In all trotting and pacing races, purses divided as follows: 50 per cent. to first horse, 25 per cent. to second, 15 per cent. to third, and 10 per cent. to fourth. All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, except as otherwise specified.

National Association rules to govern trotting and pacing, and rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

The Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society will co-operate in the management of the Fair.

For a walk-over in any race, a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under Rule 3.

All colts properly entered in district stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such race.

If it is the opinion of the judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the judges.

In all trotting and pacing races, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare a race off when there are less than three to start.

Trotting and pacing colors to be named with all entries.

When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money only, divided 66% and 33%.

TO Sportsmen & Pleasure-Seekers.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC CO.

RESPECTFULLY CALLS ATTENTION TO THE SUPERIOR FACILITIES AFFORDED BY THE "NORTHERN DIVISION" of its line for reaching with speed and comfort the best places in the State for Sea Bathing, Shooting and Fishing.

TRAINS LEAVE SAN FRANCISCO DAILY FOR

MONTEREY,

THE MOST CHARMING Summer and Winter Resort of the Pacific Coast.

with its beautiful Groves and delightful Drives. Trout in abundance can be obtained from the several streams in the vicinity of Monterey, and the best of shooting may be had in season.

THE BAY OF MONTEREY

Is noted for the extent and variety of fish which abound in its waters, notably Salmon, Rock Cod, Bass, Acuda, Pompano, Spanish Mackerel, and Flounder. The above-mentioned attractions, in connection with the low rates of fare, rapid transit, and the superior accommodations furnished at the "HOTEL DEL MONTE," have made Monterey a paradise for sportsmen.

THE BATHING FACILITIES

AT THE "HOTEL DEL MONTE,"

ARE UNSURPASSED, having a MAGNIFICENT BEACH of pure white sand for surf bathing. The BATH-HOUSE contains

SPACIOUS SWIMMING TANKS

(150x50 feet) for warm salt water plunge and swimming baths, with ELEGANT ROOMS connecting for individual baths, with douche and shower facilities.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE to those well-known Watering Places,

APTOS, SOQUEL AND SANTA CRUZ

IS VIA THE NORTHERN DIVISION,

SOUTHERN PACIFIC ROUTE.

(Broad Gauge)

The Northern Division runs through the counties of San Mateo, Santa Clara, San Benito, Santa Cruz and Monterey, each of which abounds in game in great variety. Notably Quail, Pigeon, Snipe, Duck, Geese, Deer and Bear.

Lakes PILARCITOS and SAN ANDREAS are reached by this line. Stages connect with trains daily at San Mateo for those well-known Retreats, FURIA SIMA, SAN GREGORIO and PESCADERO. We would particularly call attention to the unlimited extent of range at and about SAN BRUNO and McMAHON'S for RIFLE PRACTICE.

These resorts are but a short distance from San Francisco and offer special inducements to the lovers of this manly sport.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Sportsmen and others presenting Passage Tickets will be entitled to FREE TRANSPORTATION OF THEIR DOGS when carried in Baggage Cars and put in charge of Train Baggage-men. Train Baggage-men are instructed to issue CHECKS for all dogs received in Baggage Cars.

'88 FAIRLAWN '88

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR 1888.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CATALOGUE NOW READY,

And will be mailed to all applicants who send Five Cents in Stamps to Prepay Postage.

THE FAIRLAWN CATALOGUE FOR 1888 contains descriptions and pedigrees of 11 the Stallions and Brood-mares in use at Fairlawn. THE 1888 CATALOGUE also contains descriptions and prices of

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY HEAD OF YOUNG TROTTERS,

Consisting of Stallions and Fillies from yearlings to five years old, all of my own breeding and nearly all STANDARD BRED, and duly registered.

A specialty is made at Fairlawn of raising

STALLIONS AND FILLIES FOR BREEDING PURPOSES.

Those who wish to engage in breeding High-bred Trotters, or those already engaged who wish to add to their breeding stud, can be supplied at Fairlawn with first-class young Stallions and Fillies of the very best trotting families, uniting in their veins strains of blood that have produced Speed with the Greatest Uniformity.

Gentlemen who desire fine, highly bred, promising, and well-broken Young Trotters for their own driving, can be supplied at Fairlawn. Any young stallion sold for a roadster will be gelded, if the purchaser desires, at my own risk and expense.

THE ONE-PRICE PLAN is strictly adhered to at Fairlawn, and the price of every animal for sale is printed in the catalogue. Purchasers from a distance can buy on orders at exactly the same price as if present in person. All stock sold on orders can be returned if they do not come fully up to the descriptions given.

Time will be given responsible parties, on satisfactory paper, bearing interest from date.

THE STALLIONS IN USE AT FAIRLAWN ARE

Happy Medium (400).

Sire of more 2:30 performers than any living stallion, having 39 to his credit with records of 2:30 or better, among them Maxey Cobb, 2:13, the fastest stallion that ever lived.

WILL BE USED AS A PRIVATE STALLION.

Aberdeen (27), Sire of 14 with records better than 2:30, among them Hattie Woodward, 2:15; Jim Jewell, 2:19; Modoc, 2:19, etc. Limited to 30 mares at $100 the season, or $150 to insure a mare in foal.

Alto (2548).

By Almont, dam Violet (sister to Dauntless and Peacemaker), by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, etc. Limited to 30 mares at $50 the season, or $80 by insurance.

Applications for use of Stallions will be entered in the order they are received, but after a Stallion's limit is reached no more mares will be received. For catalogues and further information, address

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70-class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

The 13th of May, 1871, was a beautiful day even for the "merry month." There was a sunshine and a southwestern breeze driving back the cold current which had become refrigerated by passing over the surface of Lake Michigan, scarcely yet relieved of the ice that had coated it for so many months.

Ten miles to the west of the Court House in Chicago is what is called the Ridge. The elevation is some eighteen feet above the high-water mark, but in that section that is quite an altitude—sufficient to turn the water which fell on the eastern side into the Gulf of St. Lawrence; that on the west ran into the Gulf of Mexico.

The Ridge was crowned with big black and white oaks, and was conspicuous from a long distance on account of the tree-clad summit. On either side was the green prairie, and at the highest point of elevation was a huge barn surrounded by boxes and paddocks. A mile racecourse was one of the main features, though from the absence of stands, save a judges' box formed after the pattern of an Oriental pagoda, and a structure that would seat, perhaps, a hundred spectators, it was evident that it was merely an adjunct to a large stud farm, and not intended for public use. A hundred yards from the big barn and completely embowered among the trees was a handsome cottage, and the whole made a pleasing picture. This was "Atwood Place" and on the day above written, as the lawyers say, the subject of the sketch was foaled.

At 5 P. M. on that day is the record in the journal, and though this is scarcely as soon as Sterne commences one of his histories, it is sufficiently exact.

There are circumstances connected with it which are forcibly brought back to memory by the record in the journal. That memorandum briefly states that at that time "Maggie Mitchell had filly foal by Malcolm; bay, star in forehead, no other white, large and very fine." For some time we had been receiving letters from W. R. Scott Lewis, of White Sulphur, Kentucky, who wanted to trade other horses for Malcolm. That afternoon when the boy brought the mail from Riverside there was a letter containing a still better offer than he had previously made. Two thoroughbred mares by Melbourne, Jr. (which he owned), an Eadorser gelding from Sue Lewis, which he claimed could run a half mile in 48½ seconds, and a colt or two was the bid, according to our recollections. We were cogitating over the matter, feeling that the offer was liberal, when one of the boys came from the stable stating that the first Malcolm foaled at Atwood Place had come.

The mare had two colts by Bonnie Scotland, fine, strapping colts, but to our eye this was an improvement, and that evening a reply was sent back to Kentucky that Malcolm was not for trade or sale.

The filly grew apaco, and when straightened up was about as nearly a model as is often seen. At the same time there was at Atwood Place a chestnut mare belonging to a Scotch friend which had gained a great deal of celebrity on the racecourse of Kentucky and Ohio. This was Phoenix Belle, a sister of Joe Daniels, and the first to give Dolly Carter a prominent place among the dams of racehorses. She had foaled a filly on the 1st of April, and the Scotch council over the nomenclature declined on "April Gowk" as the proper title. It was also a good-looking foal, not so handsome or rangy as the other, but with racing points which the owner and his friends took delight in pointing out and discussing. She was by Tricotrin, a son of Lexington and Kate Clark, and therefore the breeding was all right. It could not be otherwise than that there should be a good deal of argument regarding the youngsters, and these controversies came to the usual end, viz., a friendly match for $200 a side, to be run when they were two years old.

Everything progressed favorably with our heroine. She was as docile as a kitten, took kindly to work and galloped like an old racehorse from the first. Her companion was Three Cheers, of the same age, and Billy Johnson, (who has since degenerated or advanced, whichever way the reader may see fit to term it, into a trainer and driver of trotters,) was her mentor. He had others in the string, and there was to be a race meeting in Chicago in July. We had charge of the track, ten miles from home, and, consequently, saw very little of the preparation. There was a turn in the good luck, however, and a short time before the races were to come off, in leading her past Nourmahal, the filly got a severe kick on the inside of the thigh just above the hock. Of course, she had to be thrown out of work, and we little thought that she would be able to run in a two-year-old stake in which she and Three Cheers were engaged. This was provoking, as the owner of April Gowk had agreed to let the match be decided by the placing in this stake, in which she was also named. A grand final trial Three Cheers ran, and the anticipations were ruby-red that he would win. The filly was only walked and it was more for company for Three Cheers than any expectation of running her, that she was "carried" from Atwood Place to Dexter Park. The Phoenix Belle filly had not been doing well, so that it seemed as neither would come to the post, but on the day of the race it was decided all around that they should start. The running was on the inside track, the outer being gravelled, and rain had made it very heavy. The distance was half a mile, and there were nine starters. Captain Moore's nomination was a big favorite in the pools, and there was a smart filly in byimported Billet, of which the central Illinois folks thought well enough of to back freely. Luck favored them. A worse start was scarcely ever seen. The Billet filly was at least sixty yards in advance of all the others when the flag dropped; Three Cheers about the middle of the rack, Marion the very last one to get off. The race was ended there, though Three Cheers ran second and Marion third. The following is the summary:

July 4th—Running race for the Browns' Stake, for colts and fillies two years old; $100 each, half forfeit; $300 added by Messrs. Wentworth & Woolworth, proprietors of "The Browns"; second horse to save its stake. Dash of half a mile.

There were the usual newspaper comments, one reporter claiming that all three of the placed colts got the best of the start. General R. Rowett had a colt and filly in the race by Uncle Vic, the filly being from the celebrated mare Mammona, who, for so long a time, had the fastest record for a mile. We told the General that it was an easy matter for us to decide which had the best colts, and that a match between the colts, and one between the fillies, was a better test than long arguments. He coincided in this view and two matches for $500 each were made. We were without a jockey. The boy who rode the colt in the stake had never seen a race before and though he had done well under Billy's tuition it was not to be expected that he would be a match for a practiced hand in a race of this kind. Billy Donahue was then riding for Jennings and in ten minutes the match was made his services were secured. The only stipulation that General Rowett made was that Captain Moore should start them which was perfectly satisfactory to us. The track was still heavy, the center being the firmest.

Donahue was instructed to make running from the start as we felt confident that he could beat the other forty yards, and with the warm feelings on both sides, we desired that the gap should be as long as possible. At the opening of the pool sales Three Cheers was largely the favorite, but as the race drew near he declined until the rates were even.

Never was a more even start. Captain Moore sent them off so that it was impossible to tell which had the best of it. In place of coming away as we expected they ran "yoked" all the way until within forty yards of the judge's stand there was a "carom," and Three Cheers crossed the score three parts of a length in the lead. From where we stood it was difficult to tell which was in fault; a complaint was entered, Donahue called into the stand when he admitted riding foul, but claimed that he could not keep the colt from averting, and very properly the judges gave the race to the other colt. We were hot, very hot. We proposed to run the race over again, betting $1,000 against $750, General Rowett's colt to carry Billy Johnson's weight, 130 pounds, and as he was the largest this seemed to be in his favor. All proffers were "respectfully declined," and there was no help for it. The description of the race at Sheephead Bay when Duchess of Norfolk was beaten in much the same way, recalled the other so that every minute detail is brought back so vividly that we can see them as plainly as on the day of the race. We were in a quandary. It was the first time a race had been lost for us in that manner, and is one of the few sore spots that still rankle in our eastern racing. There have been many since. Again there was a "pow-wow." The offer was made to double the stakes and go to Springfield to run, but a flat refusal to go outside the letter of the contract was the response. We could not find fault with this resolve of the General. Marion was limping back and forwards in front of the stand, the race before having aggravated the lameness, and it is a maxim in racing as well as war when you have the advantage keep it. All our friends advised not to run, but this did not tally with our resolves. "For choice of track," we said, as a half dollar was spun in the air, and throwing up our own green boy, the colts were dispatched to the starting point. Again Captain Moore gave them a capital start. They came whirling around the turn, fly down the stretch. "Keep a steady pull on your mare, Henry, and let her stride along," and her ears were pricked as she galloped under the wire an easy winner, bringing back the dollars so far as the match went.

The next spring we brought her to California with ten others. The trip was severe, as the boys did not take them out of the car from the time they left Omaha until they landed in Oakland. As they came by freight train, this was a trying ordeal. When they left Chicago everything was dreary, not a bud swelling on the trees. It was about the middle of April, and California never wore a more glorious dress. There were flowers within a few miles of the snowbanks on the summit, the grain was waving its bearded heads in the valley. There was "grass up to their eyes" at the Oakland Trotting Park, and we were amazed to see them turn away from the luxuriant clover, and eagerly devour what appeared to be weeds. The alfalfa and green wild-oats soon overcame the effects of the long journey, and it was not long until they were gaily cantering around the track.

Hock-Hocking and Marion were the first to put to work, and in good time they were ready for a "breeze" of a mile and repeat. The first mile was 1:54, the next the boys were told to go about the same pace or rather slower, and move through the last stretch. The track was far harder than we imagined; there was a coating of loose dirt; beneath it an adamant pavement of adobe. This was long before the thousands of loads of sand, manure and sediment were applied, and which have so completely overcome the adobe.

Hock-Hocking shattered his feet, springing quarter-cracks from coronet half way to the ground. The filly did not show the ill-effects at the time, but the next gallop she was so lame that it was all she could do to get back to the stall. We were at a loss to locate the lameness for some time, though from the showing afterwards it is probable that she broke off a portion of the wing of the coffin bone, which worked its way out at the junction of hair and hoof. Although divergent from the subject of this sketch, these accidents were the cause of the study how to counteract the effects of concussion arising from the hard roads and tracks of California, and from the rubber-strata between plates to the natural guard has been the sequence.

Once more the endeavor was made to get her to a race. There was to be one of three miles on the Bay District course, and she was moving well and sound for quite a time. As in the former case, she came to a stand-still when she did give way, without an enlarged tendon or swollen limb. Then she was sold to Mr. Winters, and taken to El Arroyo.

If Marion could be ranked as a very handsome filly, it can safely be said that she matured into a grand looking broodmare. In fact, she is more than grand looking, and were she placed in a field with a hundred of the pick of the best of the whole country, she would fill the eye of expert and neophyte. She is immensely powerful. The only mare we ever saw which could compare with her in muscular development was a mare Morgiana belonging to Mr. Goode of St. Louis, which was shown in company with Mary Waller at the fair of 1859. But with all the immensity of muscular fibre there is nothing coarse about her, and the broad loin, big quarters, bulging gaskins, large arms, etc., are accompanied by a high degree of quality, bloodlike in every point. She strongly resembles her sire, the Bonnie Scotland characteristics predominating.

So much has been written in relation to her pedigree lately that it will be proper to revive it as fully as the space will permit. The taint is claimed to come through Potomac, and the mass of nonsense which Edgar promulgated is gone over again. That record should have been kept of "common plow horse," "wagon horse," etc., is too absurd to require attention, and when the same charge was brought against the great racehorse Red Eye, whose dam was by Potomac, it brought out an indignant response from a Virginia breeder in a letter, the original of which we have seen and a copy of which we have, but cannot afford the time to hunt it up at present. That the pedigree of Charmer and Betsey Malone is "ahort" cannot be disputed, that they were racing-bred is beyond any chance for quibbling, and this we hold to be of more consequence than a genealogy extending to the royal mares, or back of them, to that which bore Mahomet is his Dick Turpinish foray.

We have conversed with many old turfmen from the south and southwest, and many of them who had seen Betsey Malone in her races rated her as the greatest racehorse of any era. We have not a record of her races at hand though we distinctly remember that she won twenty odd, and the only one she lost was when she fell down.

As was stated a short time ago, W. T. Minor was the means of drawing attention to the old stories, and giving them greater emphasis by his skill in portrayal. True or not true it has little bearing on the present question, and when the result was a Betsey Malone, a Charmer, or a mare like Marion which never produced a son or daughter which could not race in good company, and two of them of the calibre of Duchess of Norfolk and Emperor of Norfolk, the metal is genuine and the stamp clean cut, and a true token. Charmer ran in all forty-three races and won twenty-eight. She won sixteen races at three miles and heats of three miles, never losing at that distance, and one of the greatest races she ever ran was at New Orleans, April 12, 1851, when she beat Maria Woods, Florin and La Reine. It was for a purse of $500, heats of three miles. Florin won the first heat in 5:33½, Charmer the second and third in 5:35, 5:43½, the fastest up to that time, and made a great sensation in the turf world. In 1850 she won three races at heats of four miles, and four at heats of three miles. She was then six years old, which shows that she trained on, and when seven, in addition to the race already mentioned, three days after she won one of the greatest races on record at heats of four miles. Rigadoon won the first heat in 7:41, Louis D'Or the second in 7:39, Charmer and Louis D'Or ran a dead heat for the third in 7:47½, Charmer won the fourth in 8:05½, and there was no one to start against her in the fifth. In the account of the race it is stated, "He (Louis D'Or) certainly manifested some symptoms of distress, while the mare held her head high enough to look into any two-story window in Canal Street." This was after the third heat had been run. Two such races within the short compass of seventy-two hours would stamp any animal as racing-bred without further testimony. Doubloon was the only horse which ever beat her that she did not "beat back," the opportunity not being presented, but her "full" sister, Jenny Lind, did the job, so that it was all in the family. Col. Tayloe, who wrote a great deal on turf affairs over the pseudonym of "Observer," and who was unquestionably one of the best posted men of his time, thus speaks of Charmer in one of his articles: "There have been other races won at New Orleans in excellent time, by Reel, Doubloon, Rigadoon, Verifier, Charmer, etc. The latter was probably the best race-horse that has run there for many years, if ever surpassed." That Marion bore a strong resemblance to her illustrious granddam is fully proved by the following: After the first injury to her foot she was running in a small paddock adjacent to the Oakland Trotting Park. The late James L. Eoff was walking past the enclosures when he stopped, took a long look at the filly, and said, "There is a mare which is such an exact counterpart of Charmer that at first sight I was startled. Color, size—everything so nearly the same that it seems as if the best race-mare I ever saw race was before me. What is she?" On being told it was a granddaughter he climbed the fence, examined her critically and repeated his remarks, adding that while he considered Norfolk the best race-horse he ever saw, he ranked Charmer as the best mare. He also advised the coupling of the two animals which have been subsequently mated with such grand results.

"Strictly thoroughbred" is losing the significance it had a few years ago. For a time flaws were searched for in order to demolish the claim of thoroughbred blood in fast trotters. People were over sensitive when their horses, or rather their pedigrees were impugned. The same Captain Minor wrote that "$15,000 was a large sum to pay for a blind horse (Lexington) with a flaw in his pedigree," and long before that remark was published, Observer took up the defence of the sire of the horse which was thus stigmatized, and few, indeed, of the old-time celebrities escaped. The definition of well-bred by a Kentucky Sunday School scholar that it meant "two crosses of Lexington" is endorsed by many of our most successful breeders, notwithstanding obsolete assertions, and when rating value to place it on what is to be expected from performances of near kin rather than a genealogical tree extending to a lot of little Arabs from which such horses as the Emperor of Norfolk could never have been derived without the aid of "tainted blood."

Neither the dam or granddam of the greatest colt of his years had an opportunity to gain distinction on the turf. As has been previously shown Marion met with an injury in her two-year-old form, and again when a year older. Maggie Mitchell was so seriously hurt when first put in training that she never faced the starter, so that Charmer and Betsey Malone were practically the closest of the ancestry on the maternal side to consider. What the Potomac mare was which gave birth to the great Tennessee race-mare, or her dam by imported Diomed, we have no means of knowing, and the only bearing it would have would be the gratification of a "laudable curiosity." Neither is it necessary to do more than call attention to Malcolm as he and his family are so well-known that long comments would be superfluous.

The Bonnie Scotland and Lady Lancaster blood more than nicked as the record show, and that the union of Malcolm and Maggie Mitchell was a happy combination is abundantly established by the titled tribe which sprung from Norfolk and Marion, and these reinforced by the progeny of Roxaline. As the dam of Princess and Brait she would hold a good place in the records, and we understand that there are several more of her colts which are of promise. "Uncle Jack" Batchelder has reason to thank Princess for many races won, and Brait is showing himself to be a rattling, good horse. It is only within a short time that we learned the reason why Roxaline never ran. She was one of the hardiest weanlings we ever saw when we sold her to Mr. Burgess, and parted with her reluctantly. The following paragraph is cut from the N. Y. Sportsman:

The dam of Brait never started in a race, being a hopeless cripple, without a sound leg under her. As a three-year-old she was offered for sale by her owner, but as he could not get a bid of $75 on her he decided to keep her. Since then she has produced Easter, by Vickburg, worth $1,000; Princess, by Princeton, worth $3,000; Brait, by Princeton, sold for $2,500; Fred B., by Princeton, worth $2,500; April Fool, by imp. Strachino, a promising two-year-old, as yet untried; Roquette, by imp. Strachino, and now has a foal at foot by Saltpetre. Roxaline is an own sister to Marion, the dam of Emperor of Norfolk.

Belmont (Williamson's).

There is scarcely a week in which are not received enquiries regarding Belmont, the celebrated California horse, and as a general answer we republish a communication received from Mr. Williamson in 1883. Of all the old-time stallions Belmont stood far at the head, and when all kinds of horses are taken into consideration, there has not been one of early or late times that has had such a potent influence. A strain of the blood is valuable no matter what purpose the animal is intended for. Racehorses, trotters, all work, not a place they can be asked to fill without giving a satisfactory return.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I frequently receive containing questions concerning Belmont, and have concluded to answer them by writing you a brief memoir for publication.

Belmont was a very pretty bay without white, fifteen hands two and a half inches high barefooted. He was foaled in the spring of 1847, bred by Garret Williamson at Springdale, Hamilton county, Ohio.

Belmont was by American Boy, first dam imported Prunella by Comus, second dam by Partizan (son of Walton), third dam Pawn (sister to Penelope, dam of Whalebone; Whiskey, Wire, Webb, Woful, Wildfire, Wamba, etc.), by Trumpeter, fourth dam Prunella by Highflyer—Promise, by Snap—Julia, by Blank, etc.

American Boy was by Van Mater's Seagull, first dam (sister to the great race-horse Wilkinson Boxer and dam of Count Piper, Lady Duroc and others) by imported Expedition, second dam by imported Royalist, third dam by imported Magnetic Needle, fourth dam by imported Bajazette, fifth dam Selma by Galloway, Selim; etc.

Seagull was by imported Expedition, first dam by imported Sourkrout, second dam Matchless by imported Slender, third dam Fair America by Lloyd's Traveler, fourth dam Slamerkin by imported Wildair, fifth dam the imported Cub mare by Cub. Expedition was by Pegasus (son of Eclipse), first dam Active by Woodpecker (son of Herod), second dam Laura by Whistle Jacket, third dam Pretty Polly by Sterling. This is one of the best pedigrees in the books, in fact, there are but few horses that are so full of the blood of Herod and Eclipse. Belmont's sire, American Boy, was by Seagull by Expedition, by Pegasus, by Eclipse. Expedition's dam was Active by Woodpecker, son of Herod, and Seagull's dam was by imported Sourkrout by Highflyer, best son of Herod, and his second dam was by imported Slender, son of Herod, third dam Fair America by Lloyd's Traveler, fourth dam was Slamerkin, by imported Wildair by Eclipse. The dam of American Boy was by imported Expedition (son of Pegasus by Eclipse, and Active by Woodpecker, by Herod), his first dam was by Royalist, by Saltram, by Eclipse, and the dam of Royalist was by Herod, and the dam of Saltram was Virago, by Snap; her second dam was by imported Magnetic Needle by Magnet (son of Herod). The dam of Belmont was one of the most fashionably bred mares ever imported. Her sire, Comus, was one of the most popular sires of his day, being by Sorcerer, by Trumpeter, by Conductor, son of Matchem; second dam by Partizan (son of Walton) that got Queen Mary, the dam of Bonnie Scotland; third dam Pawn by Trumpeter (son of Conductor and Brunet, by Squirrel), fourth dam the great Prunella by Highflyer (son of Herod). This is the very essence of the best English and American trotting blood.

Highflyer was the best race horse of his day, was never beaten and never paid a forfeit. King Herod was considered the equal of any horse that ever lived. He is said to have sired more celebrated horses and brood mares than any other stallion of ancient or modern times. In nineteen years he sired 497 winners of $1,007,525. Belmont was never regularly trained; in fact, he was not bridle wise when he was started across the plains in the spring of 1853 at six years old. He was kept two years on Stony Creek in Colusa county and taken to San Jose in 1856 and stayed there until the spring of 1860, when he was moved to the rancho between Oakland and San Pablo, where he died on the 4th of July, 1865. He was one of the handsomest horses that ever lived. His head, neck, eye and ear, were faultless, shoulders magnificent and well covered with muscle; extraordinary fine middle piece, with quarters and back scarcely to be excelled. He was a horse of remarkable action, and had the best natural trotting gait of any horse I ever saw, but in his day it was hard to make people believe that a blood horse could get trotters.

For the chance he had he was a very successful horse in the stud, having got such horses as Owen Dale, Miami and Reveille from Maria Downing, and Bonnie Belle, Langford and Pele from Liz Givens—the only two thoroughbred mares he had an opportunity to get race horses from. But besides these he got Dashaway, Ida May, Musidora, Charlotte Cushman, Ben Lippencott, and other good horses that were out of mares of very doubtful breeding and some of them were good race horses in any kind of a crowd. He had more uniformly fine colts than any other horse I ever saw, except, perhaps, it was his sire, American Boy, who had more fine bay carriage and road horses than any other horse in the country and had horses been trained to trot in those days as they are now, he would have been very celebrated as the sire of trotters. As an illustration of the impress the sire of Belmont made on his colts, he lived to die with old age and was said to have never got a sorrel colt. Whether this is true or not, I don't know, but I do know for the last ten years of his life, a good deal of which time my father owned him, I never knew of a sorrel colt, and had there been one it would doubtless have been reported as a matter of curiosity.

San Jose, March 20th, 1883.

WM. WILLIAMSON.

A California Filly Extolled.

Three year-old winners at Monmouth have shown a grandly-bred filly in the Palo Alto foaled Gorgo. By Isonomy, one of the best racehorses England has ever produced, out of the Hermit mare Flirt, Gorgo has in her veins the most aristocratic blood of England's famous stud families. Imported into California, in December, 1884, Gorgo was foaled on the sunny slopes of Palo Alto in the spring of 1885. At the same time, Gov. Stanford's other English mares imported with Flirt, the dam of Gorgo, foaled to Peregrine, McGregor, Foxhall, Isonomy, Peter and other stallions, the youngsters since christened Cerea, Janet N., Onida, Glimpse, Cornelia, Bruce, Sau Simeon, etc. Of these the latter is in the Hearst stable, while the others at last accounts were still at Palo Alto. In August, 1886, these youngsters were all extensively engaged as yearlings in the classic events at Monmouth, Coney Island, Saratoga and elsewhere, but unfortunately were subsequently declared out of these events in 1887. As far as can be ascertained, none of them were left in any stakes that closed as yearlings, except Gorgo, whose solitary engagements were the Tidal Stakes and Corey Island Derby. In these she ran so prominently as to draw the attention of race-goers to her merits. In the Tidal Stakes, well ridden by Hamilton, Gorgo was a close fourth to Defence, Bella B., and Prince Royal, and in the Corey Island Derby, poorly ridden by Narvice, she ran head and head with Sir Dixon and Prince Royal, beginning the last quarter of that race. Therefore it is not surprising that Gorgo was well backed to beat George Oyster on Thursday last. The slushy track kept many from backing the filly who would have done so in good going, but her people supported her well, Senator Hearst and the other Californians landing a good stake by her victory. The filly ran the mile that day in 1:44 on a track fully two seconds slow from the rain, and is evidently a good one. The pity is that her engagements are so limited. Narvice, her jockey, excited great amusement by his peculiar style of riding, but it seems to be a "get there" style and nothing succeeds like success.

The above was cut from the N. Y. Sportsman and supports Governor Stanford's opinion of Gorgo. Before she ever started he expressed himself very warmly in her favor, informing us that he considered her among the best that had been foaled at Palo Alto. He was so favorably impressed with her aire on his first visit to England that he would have purchased him had he been for sale, and we came to the conclusion after the conversation that a very long price would not have been an estoppel.

Grandly bred on both sides as Gorgo's second dam was by Wild Dayrell, the next by Melbourne, and all the way back to the twenty-first dam there are a succession of noted sires. Senator Hearst we understand has only purchased her racing qualities, so that she will be returned to the Palo Alto paddocks when the alk is thrown aside.

How Green Mountain Maid was Buried at Newark, New Jersey.

She died June 6th, at 9 p. m. She was buried with as much care as if she were a human being. Her grave is on the hill overlooking the entire farm. She was lowered into the grave with ropes and placed in the same position she took when she lay down in her stall for the last time, and was covered with straw and flowers before the earth was put in. I intend to erect a monument to her memory.—CHARLES BACKMAN, in Chicago Horseman.

TURF AND TRACK.

Horses in Australia run without shoes. At times when the ground is very slippery they put on a plate. It is, however, considered that to run a horse without shoes is about seven pounds in the animal's favor.

The receipts of the French Jockey Club on the day that the Grand Prix was run were $71,800. The public patronized the Paris mutuels enormously. There were six races, and the betting amounted to $360,000.

After Richard K. Fox offered the Police Gazette diamond whip to be competed for last July, it was the understanding that the winner of the trophy should hold it during the season of 1888 also; but in order to create rivalry among the knights of the pigskin, he has decided that the Police Gazette diamond whip which McLaughlin won and now holds shall be retained as his personal property, and he will offer another, to be competed for during the season of 1888.—Republic, St. Louis.

A number of horses last week at Monmouth are booked for Saratoga, where the racing began on July 24. Saratoga is the most famous place in the country for mending the health of horses. The air has a peculiarly beneficial effect on the thoroughbreds. A draft of horses went up from the Haggin and Dwyer stables and the stables of Rankin & Campbell, Mr. E. J. Baldwin and Walter Gratz are fully represented.

Aurania, the full sister to Tremont, owned by the Dwyers, is out of form and may not start again this season. Tremont was the crack two-year-old of 1886, not losing a race, and it was thought he would have a walk over for the big three-year-old events of last season. But he went wrong, just as Sensation and other phenomenal colts have, and never faced the starter after the close of his first campaign. His sister is not claimed to be as good as Tremont, but she has shown speed enough to make her worth the long price paid for her as a yearling. Kingston, another of the Dwyers' cracks, has been lame, and Hanover, the mainstay of the stable, is palpably out of form.

Some six or seven years ago, the Count de Mailly-Chalon took part in the Russian campaign against the Khan of Khiva, who had the reputation of having the finest Arabian horses in Central Asia. After taking the city of Khiva, he was able to procure fourteen stallions and mares from the Khan's stud, some of which he brought over to France. These Khivan horses are of a type hitherto altogether unknown in America. As sires, they are said to be incomparable. The Arab is the progenitor of the best English and Norman horses, and even the Percheron has Arab blood in his veins. The Khivan variety, it may be of interest to point out, is accustomed to a climate where the cold is often extremely severe.

The New York Tribune is against the bookmakers, as is shown by the following introduction to its report of the opening day at Jerome Park: "No matter where the friends, admirers and associates of the bookmakers may go, Jerome Park, at the latest and noblest of American race courses, will never lack the patronage of the supporters of honest and honorable sport of the best kind. Although some members of the Turf Alliance (an organization bent on destroying every thing decent and fair in American racing) had bribed certain trainers and owners not to start horses at the races of the American Jockey Club yesterday, because this club had taken a bold stand against thievery and against the dictation of an organization chiefly composed of law-breakers, the racing was attractive, the attendance was large and the afternoon was full of enjoyment."

Much is being said these days about the trotter of the future. Many men believe that when Maud S. rang the bell at 2:03 she reached the limit of possibilities. On this subject Jim Page, of Denver, Col., recently said: "I have not the least doubt but that two minutes will be reached. In fact I have a horse in my possession to-day that can trot a two-minute gait, but he has not got the stamina to keep it up. He is not well enough bred. That's all is the matter. If my horse had no cold blood in him he could finish a mile in two minutes with ease. Ed Annan, the little horse I brought out and developed, could have paced a mile in two minutes if he had been bred well enough to have held up his lick. That is why Maud S. and Jay-Eye-See go faster than anybody's horses. It is because they are better bred. They have got no more speed than lots of other horses, but they have the ability to live longer when at a higher rate of going."

Among the horses in John Turner's string this season, is the bay gelding San Mateo, that is principally noted thus far as being the son of the stallion Santa Claus, that Turner drove during the latter part of his turf career. Santa Claus was the fastest young stallion of his day, doing a mile in 2:18 as a five-year-old, when that was the best mark for an entire horse of that age. He has been in the stud but a few years, and thus far none of his colts has appeared in public, San Mateo excepted. This one started at the New York meeting last week, but was high in flesh, and Turner made no effort to win with him. It is said by those who are in a position to know that San Mateo can beat 2:30 quite a little, and on general principles it is safe to assume that if he was not reasonably good goods Turner would not bother with him.

It may be that there is a mistake in the sex, San Mateo proving to be the mare bred by Martin Bnlger, and named after the town of San Mateo, rather a misnomer, however.

Some time since C. E. Mayne, of Omaha, owner of the pacer Dr. West, came to Chicago and opened negotiations for a match race with Arrow, the California sensation of last season, now in Budd Doble's stable, for from $5,000 to $10,000 a side. Doble was willing to make the match and Mayne went to Terre Haute, where his stable was engaged, to consult his driver. Before leaving he said to a New York reporter that he would surely make the match and was sure of winning. When he got to Terre Haute his trainer and driver, Jamea Newbro, flatly refused to have anything to do with Dr. West in case the match were made. Newbro is superstitious, and because two horses which he previously handled had been killed shortly after having been matched he awares he will never again train or drive a horse pending or in a match race. He thinks Dr. West can beat any other pacer except Johnson, and is willing to drive him against any other for purses, but will have nothing to do with him in connection with matches. Dr. West went into winter quarters last season with a record of 2:25, which he reduced recently at Freeport to 2:20. Arrow's record is 2:14, made last season as a four-year-old, when he had been trained just sixty days.—Abilene Kansas Gazette.

List of Colts

Foaled at the Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.'s pasture during the season:

March 10, blk horse colt by Gladiator, dam Adina, (full sister to Adair 2:17,) by Electioneer. Property of Col. H. I. Thornton.

March 23, bay horse colt by Director, 2:17, dam Sweetness, 2:21½, by Volunteer, dam of Sidney 2:28. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

March 31, chestnut horse colt with white strip in face, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, dam a thoroughbred mare. Property of Dr. Lillencrantz of Oakland.

April 8, light chestnut filly, white star in forehead by California Lambert, dam Trustee Nutwood, she by Nutwood out of a Trustee mare. Property of L. U. Shippee of Stockton.

April 16, bay horse colt, white strip in face by Director, 2:17, dam May Day, 2:20 by Battards Clay. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

April 18, blk filly by Elector, (he by Electioneer) dam Gertrude by Del Sur. Property of D. J. McCarthy.

April 20, blk filly, white star in forehead, near hind ankle white, by Hawthorn, (he by Nutwood) dam Mocking Bird. Property of L. U. Shippee of Stockton.

April 21, bay horse colt, white star in forehead, white snip on nose, by —, dam Sally Trix. Property of H. W. Pierce of San Francisco.

April 22, bay horse colt by Dexter Prince, dam Mack, the dam of Moses S., two-year-old record 2:29½. Property of L. M. Shippee of Stockton.

April 22, bay filly by Monroe Chief, 2:18½, dam by Inca, he by Woodford Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

April 23, blk horse colt, white star in forehead, by Director, 2:17, dam Echora, 2:23½, she by Echo. (Echora is the dam of the three-year old stallion Direct, who is entered in all the three-year-old stakes on this Coast this fall.) Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

April 27, bay horse colt by California Lambert, dam Nettie Nutwood, she by Nutwood dam Trustee. Property of L. U. Shippee of Stockton.

May 3, bay filly by Nephew, he by Hambrino, dam Cassie by Patchen Vernon, dam Roy, a full sister to Allen Roy, 2:17½. Property of D. J. McCarthy.

May 4, chestnut horse colt by Dawn, 2:19½, he by Nutwood, dam Alida by Admiral. Property of E. P. Heald of San Francisco.

May 5, bay filly, white star in forehead, by Three Cheers, dam Queen Emma. Thoroughbred. Property of John Arnett of Pleasanton.

May 13, blk filly by Antevolo, 2:19½, dam Foutana, she by Almont. Property of Mrs. Silas Skinner of Napa.

May 13, chestnut filly, white star in forehead and stripe in face, by Abbottsford, 2:19½, dam a black mare by Nutwood out of Nell Crockett. Property of L. U. Shippee of Stockton.

May 13, blk filly by Monroe Chief, 2:18½, dam Crockett by Whipple's Hambletonian out of Nell Crockett. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

May 20, brown filly by Clovis, he by Sultan, dam Nettie, 2:26, by Elmo. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

May 20, blk horse colt, both hind legs white to above ankles, white star in forehead, by Siamboyl, 2:17, dam Moor Maid by The Moor. Property of D. J. McCarthy.

May 21, bay filly, white star in forehead by Monroe Chief, 2:18½, dam Lady Clair, she by St. Clair, pacer. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

June 5, blk horse colt, white star in forehead, by —, dam Flora by Whipple's Hambletonian. Property of H. W. Pierce of San Francisco.

June 8, bay horse colt, white star in forehead, both hind feet white, by Monroe Chief, 2:18½, dam Belle S., by Whipple's Hambletonian. Property of Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

July 8, blue black filly, white star on forehead, by Monroe Chief, 2:18½, dam Nellie Gilmer. Property Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

One of our Philadelphia contemporaries says concerning the Triatan-Tea Tray race: "It has been very much of a puzzle to know why the English system of judging a race is not adopted here and the present style of mixing up two separate duties done away with. In all countries where racing is followed, with the one exception of America, a race is judged by one man, and he does nothing but place the horses as they pass the post. To settle questions of foul riding, crossing, jostling and 'Captain Armstrong' there are stewards appointed at each meeting. The judge should have his box placed on the grand stand side of the course, mainly for the reason that the horses finish nearer the other side, and he has a better chance of seeing them approaching the finish and noting the colors carried by the leaders. This is a piece of professional work just as much as starting the horses, and the office should be recognized and paid as such. Without casting any reflection whatever on the gentleman who officiated at Sheepshead Bay, it is very well known that gentlemen are only too frequently invited to the judges stand because they have handles to their names. The American turf has got a long way past that infantile stage, and everything should be done to reduce the possibility of error to the minimum."

Fair Notes.

The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association have opened liberal stakes for three and four-year-olds, to close Aug. 1st, to be trotted Oct. 8-13, at Lexington, Ky. They will soon announce purse races, averaging $1,000 each.

The New Mexico Exposition and Driving Park Association will hold its fair at Albuquerque, Sept. 24-29. G. L. Brooks, president; C. B. Hawley, secretary; M. W. Flournoy, treasurer.

The trotting meeting of the Kansas City Fair will be held Sept. 18 to 22 inclusive.

The Amador and Calaveras Agricultural Association have added to their programme a special trotting purse of $400 for the 2:40 class. Entries close August first in this race, as in the free for all trotting and free for all pacing races. All the other races are closed, with a goodly lot of entries.

By mixing of copy last week the above announcement was made concerning the Souma and Marin Association, whose entries will close August 1st. Elsewhere will be found the entry list of our Iowa friends.

Just as we are going to press we receive the Los Angeles entry list. This will appear next week. One hundred and fifty entries are made. Everything seems to promise a grand meeting.

Salt Lake City should have some good racing in September next as they advertise a well distributed programme of some thirty races. Their entries close August 21 and September 11.

The fair grounds at Napa are now nearly ready for the races of next October. The track is 58 feet wide and is excellently made. The buildings are rapidly approaching completion. Every indication points to a successful meeting of the Napa and Solano District Fair Association.

Colors Claimed.

Wm. Boots, of Milpitas, Cal., claims for the Elmwood stable black jacket, white sleeves, red cap.

To Race for $50,000.

The executive committee of the Coney Island Jockey club have announced that the Futurity stakes will be run on Labor Day, Monday, September 3. Out of the original 752 entries, 363 are eligible to start. The probable value of the stakes will be $50,000. The fall meeting will begin September 1.

There were several mares which would not "come in," among them Kitty L., a daughter of Mattie Howard, by Dan Voorhees, a large, fine mare and finely bred, owned by Captain Harris; a mare by General Benton, from the dam of Adair, and others, which could hardly fail to bring good colts. An analysis shows that there are 101 services to the 60 mares running from February 20th to July 21st, five months, and at the highest, April, there was not an average of one per day. The months were as follows: from February 20th, March 14, April 29, May 27, June 19, and to the 21st of July 4 services.

Origin of Racing Colors.

An article in Baily describes the origin of racing colors, which it seems, were used indiscriminately before the year 1762. In October of that year a notice was published setting forth that "for the greater convenience of distinguishing the horses in running, as also for the prevention of disputes, arising from not knowing the colours worn by each rider, the under-written gentlemen have come to the resolution and agreement of having the colours annexed to the following names worn by their respective riders," and then follows a list of the nineteen owners who had so agreed. Previously to this we find an account of a race for a King's Plate, in which, of the seven starters, two were "rid in Yellow," two "rid in White," and the other three all "rid in Red." Of these latter one was a chestnut, one a dark chestnut and one a bay, so that backers might have made out which was which with a little care; but only three different colors in a field of seven is likely to lead to complication, and the resolution of 1762 was so sensible that one is only surprised it was not introduced many years before, particularly as gentlemen were so careful about their liveries.

Colfax (W. Ter.) Races.

The first was a 600 yards running dash for a purse of $50. James Jones entered gr h Greeley, Josiah Lee entered blk g Coaley, John Williams entered sor g Olympia, and Lee McCutcheon b g Tackhammer. The dash was won by Greeley in 35½ seconds.

The second race was free for all, trotting, mile heats, best three in five, for a purse of $100. James Matheson entered ch g George M., G. A. Wright entered b m Hattie May, James L. Jones entered sor m Colfax Maid, Wm. Larkin Bland, but afterward withdrew him.

It took the entire five heats to settle this contest. The first was won by Colfax Maid in 3:26, George M. second, Hattie May third. In the second heat George M. was distanced, Hattie May coming in second. The third and fourth heats were won by Hattie May, and the fifth and race by Colfax Maid. The time made was 3:26, 3:09, 3:16, 3:16, 3:16.

The second day's racing was opened with the three-year-old trot, mile heats, best three in five, for $100. W. W. Waite and Charles B. Newman succeeded Messrs. Harlow and Peacock as judges.

P. D. Bunnell entered b h Ovolo, Thomas Benton entered b s King Bee, W. B. Renshaw entered b h S. D. S., David Marsh entered b h Harry M.

The race was one of considerable interest, six heats being trotted before a decision was arrived at. Ovolo was the favorite from the start, but an unfortunate habit of breaking came near losing him the race. The first to heats were won by Ovolo in 3:05 and 2:58, the other horses ranging as follows in both heats: Harry M. second, S. D. S. third and King Bee fourth. In the third heat Ovolo broke badly and heat was taken by Harry M. in 2:57, the best time made. Ovolo came in second, King Bee third and S. D. S. fourth. The latter was withdrawn after this heat. The fourth heat was a hotly contested one, Ovolo and Harry M. coming under the wire together. The judges declared it a dead heat. In the fifth heat Ovolo broke again and Harry M. passed under the wire a little in advance, King Bee third, time 2:57. The sixth heat and race was won by Ovolo in 2:57, Harry M. second and King Bee third.

The second race of the day was a dash of 300 yards for a purse of $50. Entries—Twenty-four, s b, by George N. Stinson; Alex, bay h, by James Browning; Hoss Meare, bay m, by George Hoss; Greeley, gr g, by J. L. Jones; Olympia, sor m, by John Williams. The race was won by Greeley in 17½ seconds, Olympia second, Hoss Meare third, Alex fourth, Twenty-four fifth.

The third race was running, one-half mile and repeat for a purse of $50. John Williams entered sor m Olympia, J. L. Jones entered gr g Greeley and J. P. McCutcheon entered blk g Coaley.

This was the most exciting race of the day, and bets were freely offered two to one on Olympia, with few takers. The outcome showed the general judgment to be correct, the sorrel mare running both heats with ease in 55 seconds.

This closed the regular races. The next meeting will be held the second week in October.—Palouse Gazette.

McMinnville, Oregon.

From the Pacific Rural Spirit and Willamette Farmer we clip the following report of the races at McMinnville, Yamhill Co., Or.: The track was in good condition, and now ranks as the equal, if not the best of any on the North Pacific. The grand and judges' stand are both new, convenient and commodious.

FIFTH RACE.

The unpretentious manner in which the driver of Johnny Gearin drove, apparently allowing Binger Hermann to win the first heat, as well as the fact that Gearin still sold about three to one led the judges to believe there was crooked work. They allowed the driver of Hermann to go the second heat. They then ordered that Hermann be turned over to Smith. The third heat the driver of Gearin boldly run his horse nearly a quarter and closed up a gap of more than fifty yards and came out two or three lengths ahead. It was evident that the driver was either grossly ignorant of the rules or else he intended to so violate the rules that the judges would distance Gearin. After consultation the judges concluded that the driver intended to get his horse out of the race, and the judges concluded in justice to all that he remain in the race, but gave the heat to Hermann, Gearin's owner evidently anticipated the situation, and asked to change his driver, which he did.

Mile and 500 yards—Bend Or, by Buckden, 115, Saratoga, N. Y. July 25, 1882, 2:10.

One of the finest trotting authorities in the country says that the horse that beats Prince Wilkes this season will have to trot in 1:14 or better. He showed a great deal of speed last fall in his race with Belle Hamlin, in one heat of which he could undoubtedly have finished in better than 2:13 had his driver been disposed to press him. If, as is stated, he is faster than ever this season, he would be a good one to put against Harry Wilkes or Clingstone.

Reader, San Jose, Cal.

Will you please inform me through your paper the breeding of the blk m Baby Mine by Nephew. She was raised by Mr. Dndley. By answering the above you will greatly oblige.

Answer. We have no authentic information. Can any reader inform us?

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Have the kindness to say through the columns of your paper, about date (from sowing April 1st) when it would be judicious to feed stock on corn, also sorghum, and best mode of feeding each. Corn and sorghum three feet high now.

MENLO PARK, July 20th, 1888.

B. TEN BROECK.

Answer—We are scarcely competent to answer the query of Mr. Ten Broeck, but if the intention is to feed it green, corn, daily, should say that it could be profitably used now. Previous to this and last year we planted patches of sweet corn to be given the horses in training, and commenced by thinning out the rows when it was not more than two feet high. As an adjunct to the food of horses which are in training to run or trot it is very valuable, and for stock generally the green blades in this climate after the native grasses become dry, must be equally serviceable. Mr. Ten Broeck in his old time Southern racing experience must have seen corn fodder used to a great extent, and, doubtless, he can recall the time when trainers of that section thought that a horse could not be "ordered" without that kind of "roughness." Great care was taken to cure it properly, the blades pulled from the stalk and put in handfuls between the ears, after drying sufficiently small bundles were made of them, carried to the ends of the rows, and from there carted to the barn, where they were put on scaffolds, after having gone through preliminary sweat. But for feeding common stock, no such extreme pains were taken. The corn was out when the ears were nearly ripe, put in a shock, closely bound at the top with a band of rye straw, when after the "husking" was done it was fed. If sown broadcast or in drills, smaller bundles were made, and cured much in a similar manner to hay, excepting that greater care was necessary in the first stages. When fed green, due caution must be observed by restricting the quantity until the animals have become accustomed to it.

A Plain Hint.

It is always well to look to the locks of the stable while the horse is yet within. The Franklin Driving Park Association have realized this, and have taken admirable precautions in a very pleasant but decided manner. We clip from the Cleveland letter in the N. Y. Spirit of the Times:

The head and front of this association is a man among men, and, in these days of wickedness, to meet and deal with such a man as Hon. J. C. Sibley is like meeting an oasis in the desert. So genial, so hospital, so generous, so markedly unbiased in his opinion where self interest is not involved, fair and honest. It is unnecessary to say that such a man would be popular, and that every man, woman or child that knows him is ready to draw sword in his defence. The influence such a man would have was plainly shown during the meeting, and it has never been the writer's good fortune to attend any meeting so peaceful and harmonious, where owners and drivers alike seemed to try in every way to do the right thing and at the right time. The association put a lock on wickedness and belted it down in a most effective and novel way. They issued the following letter, which was given to every one interested:

"To drivers of horses in races at Franklin. Dear Sir: In handing you this letter calling your attention to the rules, the management do so not in the belief that without such notice you would violate the rules, but by calling your attention thereto in a friendly way, they ask your assistance in making this meeting one where strict impartiality in the application of the rules, together with a rigid enforcement of the same shall distinguish it by justice to each horse and horseman, and tend to popularize the sport with the public."

"While the management propose to enforce all rules, nevertheless your special attention is called to the following rule of the National Trotting Association:

"Rule 15, fraudulent entries; Rule 29, Sec. 10, starting and keeping position; Rule 30, Sec. 1 and 3, horse breaking; Rule 35, collision and breakdown; Rule 46, Sec. 1 and 2, decorum; Rule 47, loud shouting; Rule 48, Sec. 1 and 2, fouls."

"Your attention is thus called explicitly to the rules, and after stating to you that they will be rigidly enforced, any driver incurring the penalties of their infraction has done so with full knowledge of the certainty of punishment, and can only have himself to blame if he becomes the victim."

"Patrol judges will be stationed at each turn of the track and through the 'cut.'"

"Let no driver think because he may possess a national reputation as such, or another driver who may be acquainted with the judges or management, presume upon these facts to protect him from any violation of the rules. On this track all drivers for the time being are strangers, and, it is hoped, at all times gentlemen."

"Accept this letter in the kindly spirit that prompts it."

"Yours, FRANKLIN DRIVING PARK."

A public expression of principles, such as this, when followed by rigid enforcement of the rules, is what nearly all (especially the smaller) associations need, and the following of such rules and principles will result in making an association popular and successful, and in the banishment of piratical trifles and wickedness."

The Brooklyn Jockey Club and the Coney Island Club to Fight.

It is significant that the Brooklyn Jockey Club, in fixing dates for its fall meeting, should claim "about September 17" as the opening day. This may mean September 12, 13, 14 or 15, dates already selected by the Coney Island Jockey Club. It looks as if war between the clubs was inevitable, and both associations cry "Let it come." The racing season must be over by October 15 under the new law, and three clubs have to crowd their way into the gap that lies between September 1 and that date. This might be done pleasantly and in order were it not for a recent discovery that the Sheephead Bay people intend to open their season of 1889 on June 13. This alarms and angers both Gravesend and Jerome Park, and they threaten reprisals.

A story has been published that the Dwyers have opened hostilities, being goaded thereto by the unpleasantness arising from the Tea Tray-Tristan decision at Sheephead Bay, whereby the judges gave a race to Tristan that the public swore belonged to Tea Tray. The plain truth is that the Dwyers, who are thorough sportsmen, have said less about that decision than their friends. Hundreds of officious persons declared to the brothers that they had been cheated out of their rights. Some, entirely unknown to the owners of Tea Tray, took pains to inform them by letter that they had been badly treated and urged them to break a lance with the Coney Islanders.

On this point the Dwyers said to a Tribune reporter yesterday that they had never expressed an opinion as to which horse won the Thistle stakes. They saw the race from the end of the grand stand next to the betting ring, where it is impossible to judge a close finish. When Tristan's number was hoisted and the public bawled for Tea Tray, and the colt's owners, falling in with the popular belief, came to the conclusion that Tea Tray did win. For a while they were very sore. But they got over it, and, as everybody knows, continued to run their horses for stakes in which they were engaged.

The Dwyers are to all intents and purposes owners of the Gravesend course. They do not intend to be crowded in the matter of dates, holding that there should be an equal division between the Coney Island, Brooklyn and American Jockey Clubs, spring and fall.

"We only want fair treatment," said Philip Dwyer, "and so long as we get what's owing to us there shall be no trouble. But if there must be a fight we shall endeavor to hold our own."

The fight may not come off before next spring. Meantime, the Dwyers will sell their interest in the Coney Island Jockey Club, although they will continue to enter their horses in such stakes as suit them.—N. Y. Tribune.

"A Year and a Beating."

The following is cut from the Spirit of the Times, and we are in hopes that the access of Memorandum will give Mr. Sibley more courage regarding the thoroughbred mare which he has put in his trotting stud, than was expressed in his letter we copied some months ago.

The event of the day to the Franklin people was the winning of the four-year-old stake race by Memorandum, by Nephew, the three-year-old stallion belonging to Prospect Hill Farm. He showed himself to be the gamest and most level-headed colt that was trotted on the track. He carried himself like an old-timer, and trotted almost as evenly as old King Phillip, catching quickly on the few breaks that he did make. Tom King, the colored trainer, held the lines over Memorandum, and was as tickled over winning the race as a girl in a new calico dress. It greatly pleased Mr. Sibley, too, and other folks who were on the ground. Why, just think, a three-year-old having to do battle with four-year-olds and coming out at the top of the heap in a five heat race, and then making the best time of the race in the last heat. And that's just what Memorandum did. The little stallion who was presented to Mr. Sibley by Senator Stanford when he made his other purchases in California, is by Nephew, and his dam is Belle Mahone, a thoroughbred.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD STAKE.

There were four starters in this race—Memorandum, Woodman, Brown Hull and Josie Hull—and from the fact that Woodman had sold favorite in the pools and that one of the colts, Memorandum, was a year younger than the others and had never before started in a race, considerable interest was manifested in the event. Memorandum drew the pool while Woodman had to take the outside. Josie Hull broke at the word and Woodman indulged in some running. He broke again before reaching the quarter pole, Brown Hull also doing the same thing, and Memorandum having a nice lead. Quarter, 42 seconds. Brown Hull made another break on the stretch. Half, 1:22. Woodman and Brown Hull both broke again on the back stretch. Memorandum continued to trot like an old-timer, and won the heat amid the deafening cheers of the crowd. Woodman finished second, Brown Hull third and Josie last. Time, 2:43.

Second heat—Woodman broke at the word, Brown Hull also. The former took another run on the back stretch. Memorandum led at the quarter in 42 seconds, but made his first break on the stretch, Woodman passing him. Woodman indulged in another run before passing the quarter. Memorandum gave him quite a brush down the stretch. Woodman only winning by a head. Brown Hull third. Time, 2:43½.

Third heat—Brown Hull and Josie Hull both left their feet at the turn. Woodman slightly leading Memorandum. Woodman broke after passing the quarter and Brown Hull did the same thing on upper turn. Memorandum made a slight skip on the stretch, but did not lose anything by it. Josie and Brown Hull both broke on the back stretch, Memorandum again came within half a head of beating Woodman in. Time, 2:46.

Fourth heat—Memorandum broke slightly on the turn. It was a race from now on between Memorandum and Woodman, with the odds in favor of the former, he taking the pole from Woodman on the stretch by squarely out-trotting him, doing the half in 1:23. The chestnut stallion broke on the back stretch and again in the cut, Memorandum increasing his head and winning the heat in 2:43½.

Fifth heat—As it was growing late the word was given when Memorandum, which was the pole horse, was almost a length behind Woodman. Woodman ran through the cut, and Tom brought Memorandum up even with him. Then to use Tom's own words, "I axed de little fellow if he was gwine to leave dat sorrel colt beat him, and if he did I would rip him clear up de back when I got him off de track. Dat was de first time I had axed him, and he let himself right out." Woodman never headed Memorandum again, and he finished the mile in 2:42½, the fastest heat of the race.

SAME DAY—Stake $165, four-year-olds.

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

The Mayrisch Badge sailing race attracted quite a number of people to the creek last Sunday. There was a nice sailing breeze, and anticipations of good sport were fully realized. The Myatic was unable to enter, owing to a bad leak in her garboard from recent alterations in her centerboard. The entries were Bonita, Gipsy, Flirt, Conchita, Whisper and Dart, the Gipsy holding the badge. A splendid start was effected, the canoes going down the center of the creek in a bunch to take full advantage of the tide off the island. Flirt drew ahead and kept there till near the stake, when Whisper overhauled and passed her, rounding first, the Conchita, Dart and Bonita about thirty yards behind. Shortly after rounding, the Flirt being to leeward of Whisper, went about and stood across the basin, the rest of the fleet standing up for the Alameda side and hugging the shore, when they came about and weathered the point. It was apparent Flirt was out of the race, being away to leeward. It was now a splendid contest between Dart, Bonita and Gipsy all the way up, the Bonita finally crossing the line ahead.

Expired times—1. Bonita, 50½ minutes.

2. Dart, 50 "

3. Gipsy, 50 "

4. Conchita, 50½ "

5. Whisper, 52 "

6. Flirt, 52½ "

The breeze had now freshened considerably, and after some discussion another race was proposed, the Commodore said he would provide the prize, so it was shortly arranged. The breeze looked rather ominous for racing sails, but nobody weakened and changed suits. A splendid start was effected, the Flirt at once taking the lead. The canoe simply flew, and presented a very pretty spectacle. Flirt rounded the stake first about one hundred yards ahead; Bonita second. By this time nearly all had reefed in, and the spray flew quite lively. Flirt kept on improving her advantage, and finally came in winner four minutes ahead of the second boat.

Expired times—Flirt, 39.40

Dart, 43.40

Bonita, 44.25

Gipsy, 45

This is one of the best times on record for the club. Most of the absent members have now returned, and the prospects are good for lively times round the Canoe Club.

TRAP.

Lincoln Tournament.

The open tournament under the auspices of the Lincoln Gun Club at Alameda Point on Sunday last was very successful, both as to number of entries and skill of participants. It began punctually at 9:30, the advertised time, about two hundred spectators being present. The day was well suited to the sport, except for a little wind in the afternoon. The first match at ten single blue rocks had sixteen entries, among them being several of the first rate artificial target shots of the city, but the scores were not brilliant, Mr. Parks doing best with nine followed by Mr. Golcher with seven.

A summary of the scores is appended.

At 10 single blue rock targets, Chamberlin rules; $2.50 entrance. First won by Parks, second by Golcher, third by Mellish, fourth by F. Cate.

Seattle.

The Rod and Gun Club of Seattle held its closing shoot on Saturday last. The attendance was not so large as usual, many of the members being away on camping trips. The day was a good one, but the shooter were very much out of form, and did not equal their usual high scores.

At 16 single Blue Rocks and 5 pairs, Chamberlin rules. For club trophies.

The fourth annual tournament of the Sportsman's Association of the Northwest will be held at Walla Walla under auspices of the Rod and Gun Club on August 13th, 14th and 15th. Thirteen matches are listed, seven at live birds and six at American Clay Birds, with entrances ranging from $3 to $50.

Inanimate bird contests will be shot under National Association Rules.

Live bird contests will be shot under Illinois State Rules. Five traps. Thirty yards range, use of both barrels.

Purses will be divided into 50, 30 and 20 per cent. class shooting.

Five per cent. will be deducted from gross winnings for expenses.

There will be a complete stock of Chamberlin cartridge on hand for sale to shooters.

Two sets of traps will be kept going all the time.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths to their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Visit.

Mr. H. K. Silvie's English setter Phoebe to Mr. F. A. Taft's Gordon setter Don, at Truckee, on July 20th, 1888.

The Aged Stake of the next trials will be a large one, some twenty entries having already been promised, of which many are first raters.

On August 5th at Newark Conring Park an open stake for thirty-two dogs will be run for the benefit of Mr. John Dugan. Mr. Dugan has been for many years a staunch supporter of coursing and his friends should lend a hand to make his benefit a rousing one.

Hon. John S. Wise sends circulars and posters of the dog show to be held at Richmond, Va., on October 9, 10, 11 and 12 next. Twenty-five hundred dollars in prize money is offered, and several especially attractive features are mentioned, notably a large exhibit of Virginia fox-hounds, a type of dogs quite as well established as any, and one which should be given some specific name.

Dr. N. Rowe editor of the American Field left New York for Europe on Saturday last, to be gone until the middle of September unless he becomes homesick sooner. He has labored unremittingly for ten years in building up his splendid journal and has well earned the rich reward now being reaped. Sportsmen abroad will find him a rare combination of all that is best in the typical American gentleman and sportsman.

Mr. Walter, who recently established himself at Galt as a professional dog trainer, called at this office on Tuesday last. He has a string of twelve dogs in hand, all but one being English setters. The exception is an Irish red. Four of the dogs are Derby entries for the next Pacific Coast Field Trials. Mr. Walter also has the California Kennel's Leadstone and Enid. Also Mr. Bennett's Sirius and Mr. Chipman's Saladin. Also Mr. Albert Peri's Pride, and Mr. Henry May's recently imported brace. He reports that the dogs are all in thriving condition, and very likely animals. The next field trials will be very interesting because of the keen competition between the experts Walter and Allendar.

The California Kennel, Bench Show and Field Trial Club announces its first field trial for September, under about the same rules as guide the Pacific Coast Club. The place has not been selected, but a preserve well stocked has been offered the Club and will probably be used. It is unusual to limit attendance at trials to invited guests, and we are at a loss to imagine the reasons which can have operated to influence the California Club to permit but four spectators to be invited by each member. A field trial is the rarest of reunions of sportsmen, is frequented by only the very best of them and should be open to all who can attend, both because of the added pleasure derivable from the larger attendance and because the good worked by trials is nearly measured by the number present.

We are often asked where the most desirable English setters can be procured and in answering such queries have devoted considerable time to study of the blood lines which meet in the dogs offered by the scores of public breeders. The result has been the belief that as good setters of the breed mentioned can be had from the California Kennels as from any source in the world. If purchasers must go outside the state, the Memphis and Advent Kennel should be corresponded with. In Irish setters the Elcho Kennel offers animals equal in breeding and form to any obtainable elsewhere. Pointer fanciers can select from any one of several kennels, according to taste. The pointer interest has advanced with such marvelous strides as to have become the prevailing mode, with a fair prospect that still greater interest will be shown.

About two years ago while shooting near Auburn over the California Kennels' Sweetheart, in company with Mr. Thos. Bennett, Judge Post and Mr. Clay Chipman, a somewhat similar exhibition of unusual bird sense was made by the bitch. The party was walking through a longswale, dotted with clumps of scrubby oak when Sweetheart made game, stopped an instant then raced on a wide circle to a point some seventy-five yards ahead of the hunters. Walking slowly toward her a large bevy arose from the ground along which it had been running and several were killed, which could not have been done except for the wisdom shown by the dog.

Every sportsman of much field experience with dogs can recall almost incredible proofs of reasoning power shown by them and we should be pleased to receive such anecdotes as occur to readers.

In 1886 at High Point in the heat between Bob Gates and Belle of Piedmont both aged dogs and superior in all respects, they ran into a little field over all of which a bevy of birds had been feeding. Belle seemed to take scent and stopped, then drew on, and puzzled over a lot of ground, several young birds rising near her unnoticed by the bitch, until on the further side of the field near a fence she came to a staunch point on the old pair. In the minds of some she was deserving a penalty for not freezing on the ontliving birds, but Major Hammond, wise in the ways of dogs and quails, explained that he had often seen good dogs trail out the old birds of a bevy, passing the fledglings, just as Belle did. We do not remember to have noted anything of the sort while working on the native birds, but are disposed to place reliance on the experience and trained power of observation of Major Hammond and so conclude that Belle instead of penalty, deserved credit for extraordinary nose and sense.

In chatting recently with the leading pointer fancier of the state, he mentioned a peculiarity of one of his dogs, a five-year-old animal that was well broken and had been hunted considerably in every season. The dog was formerly staunch, is steady and shows good nose, but during last season he got into the habit of leaving point when his master came near him, making a detour and again pointing from the other side of the bird or bevy. In the owners mind it was a question whether or not the dog was inclined to blink. As we understand it a blinker is an animal that backs out of a point and leaves it entirely, either because of excessive nervousness or because of a dislike to the rushing flash and following noise of the gun. The dog in question is not shy, nor is he very high strung, and his habit seems due to his observation of the fact that California quails often run after lying to point a few moments. He seems to reason that after remaining staunch until his master is near, he insures getting a shot by moving the way he does.

This old contest between pointers and setters will be renewed in January next with a vigor more marked than ever. At present the setters have a clear supremacy. They are better dogs judged by pace, range, nose, staunchness and style. We do not wish to be understood that all setters are better than all pointers, but they average better. Possibly a reason for the uniforms wins of the long-haired contingent in local events, is that they are prepared more thoroughly. In the earlier California trials, few of the dogs were perfectly fit to run. Indeed we do not recall a single entry at Walltown Timber or White Rock that was so conditioned as to stand heavy work except Mr. Chris. Eekion's Trix, a dog which had been hunted for three months almost daily. The preparation of a field trial dog is a matter much more difficult than to put a race horse in form, for the reason that the task required is so much more involved and calls upon so many faculties. It is not enough that mere speed be shown, nose must also be confirmed and refined. Added to both must be a careful cultivation of what is called "bird-sense," the sense that puts a dog into about the right place for birds all day long. When all of the qualities noted have brought into perfect and certain operation there must be added obedience to commands given when the animal is at the highest point of nervous tension. No one who has seen the utter preoccupation manifested by a keen dog when in the presence of game can have failed to marvel at the intelligence which subjects instinctive longings to the will of man, and makes the promptings of nature contribute to the success and pleasure of the master.

Such of our readers as have sent queries about the breeding of the litter of pointers presented to Mr. William Schreiber by the bitch Sall, recently imported by that gentleman will be pleased to receive the full pedigree which came from Scotland last week. The breeding of Sall was given several weeks ago. The puppies whelped by her soon after arriving are by Don, a son of Sir Richard Garth's Old Drake, out of Lord Lichfield's Jewel. Old Drake by Garth's Rap—Garth's Doll. Jewel by Statter's Major—Lord Lichfield's Peg. A better bred white and lemon pointer than Don does not live. His sire was perhaps the best field dog of the breed that has come into public notice. In 1868 he won first in a puppy stake at Stafford, and first in the All-Aged Stake, as well as first, with Mars, in the Pointer Braces.

At Shrewsbury, in 1869, he took first in the Champion stakes. The next year he took first in the All-Aged for pointer dogs at Southampton, and divided the Pointer Braces. The same year he won the Shrewsbury Champion Stakes for pointers. Such a record is extraordinary, and it is not hard to coincide with a notable authority who recently wrote that Old Drake was "the best pointer ever seen in public." The dam of Don, Jewel, while not so distinguished as Drake, was yet of marked excellence in the field, and of the rarest breeding. Of Don, his owner says: "Don is the best dog I ever saw in the field. Gentlemen who have shot over him say he is as good as—if not better—than his famed sire Old Drake."

The breeder of Mr. Schreiber's Nestor, by Gladstone—Forest Queen II, writes about that young dog that he is the best young pointer ever bred at the kennels of Mr. Pollock, near Glasgow. Study of the pedigrees of the dogs mentioned will convince anyone that in so far as blood goes, there is in the State as good as can be had in the world. The future of the dogs must of course depend upon the discretion of the breakers to whom they are sent.

A Shrewd Gillie.

Telling stories about notable gillies in the fishing districts of Scotland, the English Fishing Gazette relates the following good one, the hero of which was Sandy Mackay, of Loch Baligall, a "rummy old blade," but an adept at fly-tying and fishing. Our Exchange says:

A gentleman then fishing the Loch had Sandy as gillie, and knowing that there were numbers of big trout, although he was not getting any of the very big fellows, he promised Sandy a handsome reward in the shape of a big drink if he would put him in the way of capturing a few. Sandy was equal to the occasion. Next morning as the two plodded their way through the moor, Sandy took out, and drew his shentleman's attention to a couple of huge tawdry flies with jackdaw wing, black hackle, and blue worsted body, which he had dressed by candle the evening before. He assured Mr. C. that these flies would work the oracle. Doubtful Mr. C. looked at them, but said he would give them a good trial. Arrived at the Loch he had rigged up and was just about to mount some of his own flies when Sandy interposed. "Na, na, man, ye maun jist try my flees; they'll take the troots, an' I'm nae to be deen oot o' my dram." Having no alternative Mr. C. slipped on a couple of Sandy's Jackdaw Flies, and fished the north end of the Loch without a rise. Here they left bag and lunch bag, and went round to the rocks on the west side, where, it is well-known the big trout are wont to resort: Sandy seated himself high on the rocks to watch the operations, and Mr. C. down below waded in a little, and casting to a likely spot, third cast he had on a thumper, which jumping clean out of the water showed a good six-pounder. Overjoyed, Mr. C. shouted loudly in his glee, "Hi, hi, Sandy, run for the flask all your might!" Off like a deerhound went Sandy, and breathless after his half-mile run through the heather and up and down hill at high pressure, into the lunch bag he dived for the flask, but, tell it not, flask there was none, and crestfallen, and with a rueful face, backed silently paced Sandy, hot and dry to tell that the well filled flask was not, and at that moment, presumably, was lying in Mr. C.'s room at the hotel three miles away. The fun got fast and furious, and big trout after big trout was landed, but Sandy was in the dumps. It was no enjoyment to him to see the big fellows pulled in one after another: He suspected Mr. C. of having played him a practical joke, and all the more reason had he for this suspicion, as after he got back to the hotel Mr. C., instead of giving him the much boasted of "big drink," only gave him a "mere toothful."

Sandy took it; in one sense, however, it was too much for him to stand. But Sandy was cunning and cute as the best of Hielanmen, and vowed, though he did not tell it, that one day he would have his revenge in some shape or other. He had only to wait till next year, when Mr. C. again turned up at Melvich. Gillied once more by Sandy, whom he had duly requested to dress a few more Jackdaw Flies, he set out for Baligall early one morning in high hope. On went the waders, and in went Mr. C., and only a few casts had he made, when lo! a boil, a slight tug, and right out of the water leaped a splendid trout—a good four-pounder. But what was the matter? The line floated loosely, and reeling it in, Mr. C. saw to his chagrin that the point fly was gone. Inwardly Sandy chuckled at this to himself, and assured Mr. C. that since the previous year he had lost the "hand of the master," in fact that he had lost the trout "by holding on too hard." Sandy loudly blamed Mr. C. as trout after trout was lost in a similar way till whole seven flies were gone, and not one was left. As disgusted as any one could possibly be, Mr. C. tossed the fishing up, hurried back to the hotel, finding all the way, and next morning packed up hurriedly and left Melvich never again to return. Some weeks after Sandy let the cat out of the bag by telling how, hoaxed by Mr. C. the previous year, he had turned the tables on him by dressing the whole seven "Jackdaws" so loosely that the trout, he was sure, would make off with every one of them without any ado. "Ye see," he said, "it was nae that he did nae gae me the whiske he promised, which he wad never hae missed; it was that he hoaxed me; an' as he hoaxed me wi nae gaeing me th' whiske, I hoaxed him wi nae lettin' him hae th' troota. I'm mebbe bit a puir Hielan' fisherman, but I've a' my wits about me when they're needit."

Fred A. Taft is at Webber Lake on his first fishing trip for many years. No sport that cannot be shared by his old Gordon Dorr has much attraction for the owner.

Weather Proverbs Relating to Fish.

When fish bite readily and swim near the surface, rain may be expected.

Fish become inactive just before thunder showers, silent and won't bite.

Blue-fish, pike and other fish jump with head towards the point where a storm is brewing.

Air-bubbles over clam-beds indicate rain.

Porpoises in harbor indicate a coming storm.

Cat-fish jump out of water before rain.

If the skin on the belly of the cat-fish is unusually thick, it indicates a cold winter, if not, a mild winter will follow.

The cod-fish is said to take in ballast before a storm. A number of cod were taken by a sergeant of the Signal Corps twelve hours before a storm, and it was found that each had swallowed a number of small stones, some of the atonea weighing three or four ounces.

Cockles and most shell fish are observed against a tempest to have gravel sticking hard into their shells, as a providence of nature to stay or pois themselves, and to help to weigh them down, if raised from the bottom by surges.

The appearance of crabs and lobsters indicates that spring has come, and that there will be no more freezing weather.

Cuttle-fish swimming on the surface of the water indicates the approach of a storm.

If eels are very lively it is a sign of rain.

In equinoctial storms, fish bite the best before the sun crosses the line.

When fish jump up after flies expect rain.

Frog-fish crawling indicate rain.

Lake-trout, in the northern lakes of the United States, and white fish leave reefs for deep water one month earlier in stormy falls than in mild, calm falls, with little winds. (Chippewa Indians).

Fish bite the best when the moon is in the tail.

Fishermen in anger froth,

When the wind is in the north;

For fish bite the best,

When the wind is in west.

When pike lie on the bed of a stream quietly, expect rain or wind.

Porpoises swim in the direction from which the wind is coming.

Salmon and trout plentiful in river show an abundance of rain in the surrounding country by which the river has risen.

Sea-urchins thrusting themselves in the mud, or striving to cover their bodies with sand, foreshow a storm.

Shad run south when the weather changes cold.

Shark go to sea at the approach of a cold wave.

Skate jump in the direction that the next wind will come from.

Wind in the south catch fish in the mouth.

Trout bite voraciously before rain.

When trout refuse bait or fly,

There ever is a storm nigh.

When the trout or salmon-trout jump late in the fall, the Indiana of W. Territory predict an open winter and an open spring.

Trout jump, and herring school more rapidly before rain.

When porpoises and whales spout about ships at sea, storms may be expected.

The appearance of a great number of fish on the west gulf coast indicates bad weather and easterly winds.

A comparatively new fishing ground has been developed in Stony Creek, some fifty miles from Colusa. Mr. David Thom and Mr. Will Wattles who have fished the stream say that it affords the best of sport, the fish being large, keen and fat. Some have been killed there weighing two pounds. Dark flies either blacks or browns serve best.

Two beautiful trout reached this office on Tuesday last from Weber Lake, with compliments of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon E. Wilson. They were in good order and the larger, a fish of about two pounds, was submitted to the critical judgment of the editor in chief and the manager. The editor's judgment has not reached us. That of the manager is that the fish was unexceptionable.

"Petronella" writes from Webber Lake that on July 19th a heavy thunder storm spoiled the fishing for a little time. The storm was the third of the sort for the season. On July 17th a party from Weber visited Independence Lake and killed forty-nine fish, some of them Landlocked salmon. The Independence fish do not equal those of Weber either in appearance, size or flavor. Desolation reigns at Independence. Five men and a squaw occupy the fast decaying houses which will be crushed by the snows of another winter or two. It is a pity that so fine a resort should be allowed to fall into ruin and disrepute.

Colonel Irwin Ayres, owner of Mambrino Wilkea, and prominently identified with trotting horse interests, related an incident in our hearing the other day that had a marked significance as bearing upon the question how fast trout grow. In 1884 Colonel Ayres was in business at Fort Bidwell, and during that year a friend, Mr. Woodson, put into Lake Anna, a body of water some few miles distant from the fort, a few hundred young rainbow trout. None of the fish were over four inches long and most of them much smaller. Lake Anna is fed by two streamlets, but has no outlet unless it be a subterranean one. The fish were not seen for two years, when several were taken with bait and weighed by Colonel Ayres upon the scales in common use in his store. One weighed full six pounds and several others in excess of five pounds. The great weight so impressed Colonel Ayres that he made notes about the matter. Shortly after the first fish were taken numbers of others were brought to his store none of which weighed under four pounds, and many reached five and more. The fish when placed in the lake were but a few months old, and no trout had ever been found before the plant was made. No large fish could have entered the water from streams or otherwise, and the fact seems indisputable that the ordinary rainbow trout, salmo irideus grew from troutlets into five and six pound fish in two years. Colonel Ayres informs us that food both bottom and surface is exceedingly abundant at the lake, and he surmises that the fact may have some bearing upon the really extraordinary increase in size. Since being planted the trout have increased in numbers until the lake is overstocked, but they do not rise to the fly. They are fat and lusty and take bait freely fishing deep. No corroboration of Colonel Ayres is at all necessary, and the facts noted may be taken sine grano salis.

A quadricycle with wooden wheels and weighing but sixty five pounds has been patented by Mr. Sterling Elliott of Newton, Mass.

The stallion race was open to all stallions owned in Tulare, Merced, Fresno, Mariposa and Kern counties, the attraction being a purse of $500, eight responding to the call, which speaks well for the horses of the region and the spirit of the owners. Apex with a four-year-old record of 2:26, Bay Rose 2:29, Pasha 2:38½, Barbero 2:30, Waterford 2:36½, Congressman, Daybreak and Clovis, although some of the records are a good way apart, there are often great changes in the course of a year, and those who are acquainted with the horses prophesy a hot race all through. There is a match to be decided between Minot and Bedford, and this will elicit a great deal of local interest. The entries do not close until Sept. 15th, and this will ensure more entries than would have been made had the date of closing been August 1st. By that time some of the dreaded ones will be out of the way and a better knowledge also obtained of what is likely to be in. From the favorable reports of those who have visited Fresno, there is no doubt that the treatment awarded those who take part will be of the genuine Californian stamp, and that even inveterate grumblers will have no occasion to find fault.

Since writing of Roxaline and her colts we were looking over Goodwin's Turf Guide, the last one received, and happened to open to a page on which was a race with fourteen starters ran at Monmouth Park, July 12th. Fred B. ran first, Braite second. A still more remarkable race the two brothers ran at Coney Island. It was at the same distance three-quarters and the weights were 128 lbs. on each, Fred B. won in 1:5½ by a head over Ban Colche, a head in front of Meona who was the same distance in front of Braite, so that there was scarcely three feet difference in four horses. This race was run "on the turf" and shows that the other branch of the family can also handle weight.

NAPA.

It is only a short time ago since ground was broken for the new course at Napa, and now we hear that such active progress has been made that by October 2d, the date of opening everything will be in proper shape. Every one with whom we have conversed pronounce the track as good as the best, and that means a great deal in this section. In this connection it may be as well to state that all of the fairs which are advertised in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN have tracks a mile in circuit, and furthermore that there is not a state in the Union which has as many of that length as California. We have talked so much about Napa Valley, made so many efforts to get there that occasionally it seems as though it had been visited in person, and imagination paints it one of the brightest spots on the whole Pacific Coast. That the people who dwell there are worthy of homes in such a paradise as we have often times heard described, we have had ample proof, and that energy is a prominent characteristic is exemplified by the way the fair project has been carried to such a successful termination. Liberal, too, must be the verdict when the programme is scrutinized. The five days occupied from October 2d to 6th inclusive, are well filled with fifteen races, three running twelve trotting, with a reserved fund for special races. Of the twelve trotting four are restricted to the district comprising the counties of Solano, Napa, Sonoma and Marin, the classes being 2:40, 2:30, two and three-year-old. The open races are 2:30 $800, three-year-old purse $600, 2:20 purse $1,000, three minute $600, 2:25 purse $800, four-year-old and under purse $600, free for all purse $1,000. These would be liberal amounts for any association to offer, for one in its first year with the burden of having everything to prepare it is more than liberal. There is little necessity for writing more in relation to the Napa and Solana Fair, as we are quite positive that the owners of horses will respond with the same liberality in making entries, and then a good part of what will be said about the next in order will be appropriate.

SAN DIEGO.

In combining the various fairs in the notices prior to the closing of entries, it does not by any means follow that the whole recital will be limited to a prologue. Not one which has been fully drawn, several which are well worthy of constantly recurring descriptions. The new places especially. The older are so well known and so thoroughly appreciated, that curtailment does not work serious injury, whereas in the late additions it cannot be expected that there will be a proper knowledge without frequent call.

It behooves the owners of horses to support to the best of their ability every fair, those which are commencing demand extra efforts to insure success. This on the southern limit of the State must be met with a support which will make the initial meeting one of the grandest of the Grand Circuit. A sordid calculation of expense and remuneration for this one trip is not the proper spirit which should prevail, and though the Association offers a far more liberal bill than could have been expected, we hope to chronicle such a list of entries as will prove a determination to assist at the opening irrespective of mercenary calculations. Very many of our California owners of horses are so "well off" financially, that profit or loss to an amount consequent on sending a few horses to San Diego has little hearing; those who are not in circumstances to take any great risks can surely afford to make this venture when there is so good a prospect of immediate reward, so good an outlook for the future.

There is plenty of time after the close of the Napa Fair for the horses which have been so busily engaged to recuperate, and should there have been a loss of form to fully recover. This feature of coming so late in the season is very valuable, and which will have a greater bearing hereafter. Had the programme been announced before the date fixed for the National, or had there been previous fairs, that big event would have been placed earlier. Should the weather be such that the contest will be decided on the day set, there would be still time, but the trouble is that those having horses engaged in it cannot depend on October 20th being the good day and good track which the conditions ensure. One week earlier would obviate that difficulty, and hereafter due care will be observed that nothing of that kind shall come in the way of the San Diego events. A synopsis of the purses will give the casual reader an idea of what to expect in the way of sport; those who contemplate making entries can obtain full particulars from the advertisement.

Running, half-mile, for two-year olds, stake, $250 added; mile dash, for all ages, purse $500; half-mile, purse $250; one-quarter miles, purse $600; three-quarters of a mile, three-year-olds, stake, $250 added; heats of half mile, purse $400; three-quarters, purse $350; two miles, purse $700, and thirty miles, six horse each, purse $600.

Trotting, "open to the world," 2:20, purse $1,000; 2:25, purse $900; 3:00, purse $1,000; 2:35, purse $500; free-for-all, purse $2,500, with $500 additional, for 2:15 or better.

Pacing, 3:00 class, purse $500; free-for-all, purse $1,200.

A grand conclusion to the fairs of the Pacific Coast for 1888.

Bad News From Our Race-Horses.

According to telegraphic reports, Grover Cleveland and Triboulet are dead. The former needs confirmation, the other can scarcely be doubted. There are two dispatches regarding Cleveland, one being that he was shot after the injury, the other only informs that he had broken down. In either case it is bad enough. His long run of bad luck had apparently culminated, and with more than a fair prospect of making amends for his many defeats. Thirteen races lost, this unlucky number had a doleful significance, as after his first victory for 1888, and in a position where he was nearly sure to win, again misfortune overtook him.

The loss of Triboulet is a very serious one to Mr. Ashe. The form he showed at the spring meeting here denoted a high class of merit, but the long journey East evidently told against his condition, as his eastern races fell far short of his home performance.

The Blue Ribbon Meeting.

The telegraphic accounts of the trotting meeting at Detroit are so meagre that the only facts they give of interest to our readers are that Arrow won the free for all pacing purse, the fastest time being 2:14½, and Guy the three minute trotting in 2:16½. This is a good beginning for the son of A. W. Richmond and Crichton's First, and is an augury that he will mark a low figure before the season closes. Guy made a wonderful performance when his former erratic course is taken into consideration.

Still Behind.

With few exceptions the California horses are not as fortunate as was anticipated. From the opening at Saratoga when Yum-Yum won a turn of luck was anticipated, though the fulfillment will have to be postponed. Still when the season's record is made up it will be discovered that for the number engaged the showing will be very good. Then again the season is not yet ended.

"Free For All."

Read the communication over the signature of "Free for all" in the paper of this week. It contains sensible advice, especially that which asks proper recognition of the services of the managers of the Sonoma and Marin Association, in making the burden as light as possible for horsemen to carry.

Geraldine.

The World has the following anent the Geraldine—Rosarium match. By the way, it was a graceful act on the part of Mr. W. Ashe to present the cup to Mort Laugtry.

The next race was the match between Mr. Gebhardt's imported pony, Rosarium, and Porter Ashe's California filly, Geraldine. The latter won easily. In fact it was not possible that Mr. Gebhardt ever thought his pony could beat Geraldine; he must have simply wanted to present Mr. Ashe with $1,000 and took the means of a match between their respective horses to do so, for that was certainly what it amounted to. As a memento of so important an occasion the Monmouth Park Association added a very pretty silver loving-cup.

Change of Date.

Killip & Co. announce that the date of selling Mr. Ashburner's celebrated herd of Shorthorn and Durham cattle has been changed to Wednesday, Aug. 15th instead of Thursday the 16th as previously announced. Col. Younger's sale will take place on the 14th as advertised.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Jockey Breaks Contract.

VISALIA, Cal., July 19th, 1888.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I wish to have inserted in the columns of your paper, a warning to all trainers and owners not to employ Reuben Moore (colored boy), he having left me this day without cause. Respectfully, GEORGE A. PARKER, Sheriff of Tulare County.
Per P. O. McKenna, Trainer.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—It has been the custom on this Coast to include the following among the conditions under which trotting purses are offered, viz.: "Five to enter and three to start; but the association reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse." (The Stockton society requires six to fill, etc., adds the proviso as above, and tacks a second reservation on top of that.) Horsemen have always complained of this condition, and with good reason; under it they are held for their entrances of nominally 10 per cent., really 12 per cent. or over, when the race is declared filled with less than five entries; they are obliged to be ready to start, and at the last moment may discover that the "three to start" are not to be had. As long as this "onerous" condition is insisted in, there is no likelihood of horses from any distance being entered through the California circuit.

The Petaluma association has this year omitted this condition, and as it has been done in the interest of horsemen, it is to be hoped that these will appreciate the action, and see to it that the several races are sufficiently well filled to encourage the management this year, as well as in the future, to hang up the full amount of the purses, and to induce other associations to omit the condition complained of.

The Board of Directors of the Petaluma Fair have also passed a resolution that no Paris mutuels shall be sold on heats. Another innovation of that association, so far as this Coast is concerned, is making the three-year-old free-for-all a best two in three race. It might have been as well to bring the four-year-olds under the same rule, and thereby thoroughly test the claims of advocates of races with fewer but better contested heats.

I have heard that all of the associations on this Coast, whether belonging to the National or the American Trotting Association, have agreed to respect the fines and suspensions that each may impose upon drivers, owners, horses, etc., as though all belonged to the same association. Is this so? If not, why would it not be as good a way as any of bringing about a concert of action among the associations on the Coast and eventually lead to the promotion of a Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Association? Again: if not, why cannot the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN draw up an agreement to the effect named, and send one to each association in the California Circuit for its signature, and publish the names of those that agree thereto?

FREE FOR ALL.

We invite all associations to send us their suspension and fine lists; thus through our columns each association can learn the penalties imposed by the others.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Thos. Bowhill, M. R. C. V. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by three dollars, and addressed to Dr. Bowhill, 1523 California St., San Francisco.

Azoturia.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I have just lost a very fine three-quarter Norman mare, nearly three years old, after an illness of only twenty-four hours, and I beg you will try after reading my description of her illness to tell me what her complaint was. The mare seemed to have great difficulty in breathing; took short panting breaths. She was very large and powerful for her age, and being a large eater was over-fat. She was broken, but was not worked regularly, consequently I only fed her hay, and turned her out every day with the other colts for exercise. She seemed to be perfectly well until yesterday morning, when we found her standing in her stall with her head down, and looking rather full in the flanks. I turned her out, and she seemed to feel weak, and drank water with difficulty, though she seemed to have a great desire for it. I thought she was going to have distemper, but as she has never had a sick day in her life, I felt no alarm.

In the afternoon she seemed to be getting very weak, wanted to drink, but swallowed with great difficulty, and her bowels were loose, though she could not pass her manure freely, and had considerable swelling of the bowels. I did everything I could externally for colic or inflammation, and kept her moving while I sent for a veterinary (or the nearest approach to one whom we have here.) The veterinary was puzzled, but got her to pass a little water, as I thought it was bladder trouble. The water was a dark brown and with a high odor. She was breathing short, seemed to have a terrible fever and trouble in swallowing, although there was no swelling or sign of any kind about the throat.

This morning she was so weak she could hardly stand, and although we had done everything we could think of, got steadily worse. About ten o'clock I went out with the intention of going to work on her chest and lions again, when I found her lying dead. I examined the bowels thoroughly after death and found no obstruction of any kind. They were very much distended and full of water and hay. I saw no mucus discharge or inflammation. In the stomach I found about a dozen Bot gnats.

If you can help me I shall be much obliged, and I am obliged to you in any case for reading this long, tiresome account.

E. EVERETT WISE.

HEALDSBURG, Dec. 22d, 1888.

Answer.—We are of opinion that your mare died of Azoturia a diseased condition characterised by tonic or clonic spasms of the large muscles of the posterior part of the body and limbs and by an elimination of a nitrogenous darkly colored urine of a high specific gravity. These conditions vary a good deal in affected animals, but the presence of the dark colored urine is a very diagnostic symptom.

Pacific Coast BLOOD HORSE ASSOCIATION.

FIXED EVENTS 1889--90.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the one and two-year-old heat, unless otherwise specified. Five to enter and three to start in all the above races. But the Board reserves the right in all the races in the above programmes to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee ten per cent. of purse to accompany nomination. Purses of four moneys divided at the rate of fifty per cent. to the first horse, twenty-five per cent. to second, fifteen per cent. to third, and ten per cent. to fourth.

National Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66 2/3 to the first and 33 1/3 to the second.

In case any named race for a certain day does not fill, the Board reserves the right to change the date of any other event on the programme if deemed necessary, due notice being given to the parties interested at any time previous to August 15th.

If in the opinion of the judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be continued or declared off, at the option of the judges.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named at 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over. The rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association will govern running races.

Racing colors to be named in entries. In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entries to all of the above races to close with the Secretary on Wednesday, August 1, 1888.

Entries to close with the Secretary, Wednesday, August 1st, 1888.

CONDITIONS.

In all trotting and pacing races, purses divided as follows: 50 per cent. to first horse, 25 per cent. to second, 15 per cent. to third, and 10 per cent. to fourth. All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, except as otherwise specified.

National Association rules to govern trotting and pacing, and rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

The Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society will cooperate in the management of the Fair.

For a walk-over in any race, a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, unless properly entered in district stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such race.

If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the judges.

In all trotting and pacing races, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare a race off when there are less than three to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries.

When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money only, divided 66 2/3 and 33 1/3.

Races to commence each day at 2 P. M.

Our track has had a thorough coating of loam, and is now the best and fastest track in the State.

Entries close August 1, 1888.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the first day of August, 1888. Entries for the purse must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by consent of the judges.

All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race.

Entries to all trotting races will close August 20, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting races; Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association Rules to govern running races, except as above.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

Racing at Alturas.

Concerning the races at Alturas, Modoc county, Cal., during the 4th, the Independent says:

The racing under the auspices of the Alturas Jockey Club began on Tuesday, the 3d inst., according to programme. The attendance was not very large, and the scarcity of money was quite apparent. Still, however, quite a respectable sized crowd was present, and considerable interest was manifested. The club had the track in good condition and everything else in readiness.

At 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon the crowd had gathered at the race course, and the horses for the first race were called up.

This was a trotting race for 2 and 3 year olds. Only two horses started, viz.: Joe Mark's sorrel gelding, Pedro, and Tom Raymond's bay gelding, Hot Cakes. The race was won by Hot Cakes in two straight heats. Time, 3:29 and 3:19 respectively.

The second race was a running race free for 2 and 3 year olds, $\frac{1}{2}$ of a mile. The entries were Jacob's bay filly, Racket, Henry Mann's black gelding, Jim Blaine and M. L. Norton's sorrel gelding, Now or Never, all three-year-olds. The Bidwell mare was the favorite in pools three to one, and she won the race, Now or Never second and Jim Blaine a bad third.

SECOND DAY.

The first race yesterday was a saddle horse race, free for all untrained saddle horses; distance 600 yards, purse $50. There were nine entries and the got off at the first trial; and after a few jumps they were strung out for a distance of about a hundred yards. Mr. Ostrom's horse, Silvertail, came in an easy winner. The outcome of the others is variously stated. Tom Frowley's horse came in last, just before supper time.

The next race was a trotting race for two-year-olds. Only two colts were entered, viz.: Allenwood's bay filly Daisy, and Clark's bay filly Jessie. Over this race some sort of a wrangle arose, and it was declared off by the club.

BUTTE CITY, July 4.—Trotting, one mile, purse $200.

Sam Scott's ch s Ranchero.....2 1 1 2 0 1
Raymond's b m Carrie Belle.....1 3 3 1 0 2
Raymond's b s Dorcas.....3 2 2 3 0 3

Time, 2:29, 2:26 $\frac{1}{2}$, 2:29, 2:31 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Running, one mile; purse $200.

Entries—Chesapeake, Harry Hughes, Joe Bowers and Brown Jug. Joe Bowers was the favorite and won with hands down in 1:51. Mutuals paid $13.

A quarter mile dash w s next, which ended the programme for the day at the race track.

BUTTE, July 5.—Weather fair and track good.

The first race was a three-year-old trot. Entries—Robins, Ilton and Mantua. Mantua's Ilton took the race in three straight heats. Time, 2:40, 2:43 $\frac{1}{2}$, 2:47. Larabee's b m Mantua, valued at \$2,500, by Fieldmont, dam Forest Gold Dust, staggered while passing under the wire in the third heat and falling against the fence died in a few seconds. The mare lead until a few feet of the winning post, but the strain was too much for her. It is supposed she burst a blood vessel, the first accident of the kind that ever occurred on the Butte course.

The second race, a 600 yard dash, Monte won, Half Moon second, Jeannie third. Time, 2:31.

Third race, special trot, three in five. Entries—Helen, Victor, Gloster, Lucy, Lady Fantasia. Sam Scott's Lady Fantasia won in three straight heats. Time, 2:31 $\frac{1}{2}$, 2:32 $\frac{1}{2}$, 2:33.

Spokane Falls Racing.

In the half mile and repeat, for a purse of $100, the winner was Ladd's Murphy.

Free for all, half mile and repeat, pacing—Hawkin's Egbert won.

Special—Wilson's Marvel won in three straight heats.

At the race track, which was largely attended, the first race was won by Roley Boley. Trotting, mile and repeat, Ladies' Benevolent cup, gentlemen to drive their own horses—won by Wardner's Daisy.

Three-eighths mile dash—won by Weasel.

In the free for all trot, Glassford's Gold Foil was the winner after six heats. In the third heat Leona's driver drove into another horse and upset the sulky, throwing the driver under the horse and smashing both sulks and injuring one horse in the accident. Hawkins, the driver at fault, was fined $100 for causing the accident.

In the half mile and repeat Roley Boley won.

Grey Eagle won in the quarter mile dash.

Triboulet Dead.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.), July 23.—The four-year-old colt Triboulet, by King Ban-Herzogovina, owned by Porter Ashe's Maltese Villa stables, died at Monmouth Park to-day from lockjaw, caused by injuries received from a twisted plate. He last ran in the Midsummer handicap of Tuesday of last week, when he was third to Aurelia and Lady Primrose. Triboulet was brought from California in May, and on the strength of his winning at a mile and three furlongs at the spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association in 2:21, which at the time was the best on record, he was heavily backed for the Suburban. He ran badly, so he has in nearly all his races since, except for the Equality stakes, when he was second to Climax. Last year, as a three-year-old, he won the Park stakes at the San Francisco autumn meeting, running a mile and a quarter, with 100 pounds, in 2:05 $\frac{1}{2}$, and a handicap, at a mile and a furlong, with 113 pounds, in 1:56 $\frac{1}{2}$, and again, at the same distance, with the same weight, in 1:55.—S. F. Chronicle.

An Actor at the Races.

I went down to Monmouth Park race track on the Fourth, in the vicinity of which the great battle was fought, and where to-day, thanks to the victory of our ancestors, the white wings (no relation to the song of that name) of peace hover over the mustang mosquito, and instead of the voice of the deadly rifle we hear the stentorian tones of the buy-out bookmaker as he flirts with the bank cashier and produces citizens for Montreal. A race track is a great place to study character and mathematics. Instead of staying home and bursting fire-crackers and bombs, how much more patriotic and self-sacrificing to come here and burst yourself. If the Interstate Commerce Commission charged excess baggage on personal pronouns in the first person singular, none could afford to visit the track. For two solid hours on the train you hear nothing but one succession of "I's." "I's," "I don't like Term Cotta." "I backed him." "I think it's a dead sure thing" and "I don't like 'em to-day." If some one would only say "we" it would come like a cool breeze in the desert.

Of course you take your wife with you or else you wouldn't enjoy yourself. She keeps walking through the train, passing all the vacant seats in hopes of finding one that matches the color of her dress. She doesn't succeed, and you walk back to find all the others occupied. Then the train alongside of you goes out and she reproaches you for not being on it. Then she finds she's on the sunny side and rivals the sun in making it hot for you. On the track, after you lose she says, "I told you to play him for a place, you'll ruin yourself." Oh, yes, you've got to take your wife to thoroughly enjoy racing, because you not only lose your money but get the devil for losing it.

You wander around the betting-room, and if you appear at all uncertain you are approached by a gentleman with checked pantaloons and a petrified cheek. He informs you that he's got a "Fourth of July copper rivited air-tight sitch on the first race. Why its just like finding money. The horse can't lose, he'll walk in." If you play his "tip" you generally find that its just as easy as picking the gold filling out of Jry Gould's back teeth or counterfeiting money on Inspector Byrnes's front steps. Still, he tells one sacred truth. His horse generally "walks in." But unfortunately for you, the others run, and that beats a walk every time. One of these fellows approached me and said, "Say, young fellow, is there a horse called Rippartay on yer programme?" I had been losing steadily and feeling in a sarcastic mood said, "There is no horse called 'Rippartay,' but there is one called 'Repertoire'." He eyed me from foot to head and said, "Well, say, you don't expect to find Daniel Webster on a race-track, do, yer?"

On the grand stand it's very interesting to watch a syndicate of twenty ladies who have put in 25 cents each to make a $5 bet, and if the horse loses they generally upbraid the messenger boy for not telling them which horse was going to win. These messenger boys are also employed to support the under jaws of the losers on the way back to New York. On the Fourth the two-year-olds were very hard to start. Fifteen minutes passed and the lady next to me went fast asleep. I am sorry to say she snored. Several times I was tempted to tell her not to tear it, and I would buy the whole piece. Ten minutes more passed. The horses were not off and she still sweetly slumbered. Suddenly the judge gave the bell a violent pull, when she started up shrieking, "I won't let you in! The idea of your staying out so long! I'll go home to mother!" How the old times came o'er her.

Then the man who has bought a horse that hasn't a ghost of a show—a 100 to 1 crack—just as they start shrieks. "My horse wins! He wins! Look at the others fall back! Why, he wins in a gallop, hands down!" Then I go back to the grand stand and spoil the knees of a $15 pair of pantaloons praying that he'll lose his tongue on the next race. I am superstitious on the track. I think a hump-backed man is a mascot. I sneaked behind one on the Fourth and touched his hump. He turned quickly and said: "Young man, you're mistaken. This coat is too large for me in the back, so I stuffed it with losing tickets. I'm a Jonah, I am, and don't let a sky-rocket erase it from your memory."

I witnessed a sight that brought the tears to my eyes and made me a better man. A gentleman who had lost all his money bet his wife and six children on a horse in the steeplechase. The horse fell in the first ditch, and the man shrieked: "Heaven help me! there goes my whole family plumb in the mud!" And he left the track a lonely, broken-hearted victim of a sure thing, while the walls of his wife and children were borne to him as they struggled to break out of the bookmaker's cash-box.

Racing is a fascinating sport. I was standing near an undertaker when a man rushed up to him and said: "Come, quick; Mr. Paul Murphy has just died!" The undertaker replied: "Tell the family I'll come as soon as the last race is over and I cash in." It is also conducive to poetry. I heard a young man behind me reciting:

Wake me early, mother dear,
With a pressure of thy lips,
And buy for me the Sporting World
And all the latest tips;
And write the winning horses
On my collar and my cuff,
For I am out now for the stuff, mother;
Yes, I am out now for the stuff.

On the train going home the man back of me remarks that "Harrison is no good on account of the way he acted with the Chinese." At first I think he refers to me in the "Pearl of Pekin," but suddenly realize that he means the other celebrated American of that name in Indiana. Hurrah for the Fourth, and the 5th, too, for that matter. LOUIS HARRISON.

How to Start a Balty Horse.

I will tell you of a way that I have never known to fail of starting a balty horse, no matter how obstinate, and even if his mind be occupied with reflections upon the inordinately heavy load behind him. Draw the lines from the turret rings and carry them out straight in front of him as far as they will reach. Then pull on them, and not infrequently he will at once start toward you; but if he does not then you must walk off at one side and pull his head over that way; then walk back and pull his head over the other way, always operating upon him from the extreme length of the lines. In a few times, seldom more than two or three of such pullings from right to left, you will start him. He will seem to be so curious about what you are doing, that he wishes to go to you and investigate, and then he goes right along forgetting his balty humor. But while you are doing this, do not let anybody click the tongue at him and tell him to "get up," or flick him with a whip, or push the wagon against him, or build a straw fire under him.—N. Y. Sun.

A Big Horse Race.

A special match for $1,000 a side has been made for one mile, between E. R. Den's b s Consuelo and P. C. Dornaleck's b g Dell. The race is to come off at the Agricultural Park on August 2d. The match grew out of the race between these animals at the recent races held at Ventura, when Consuelo proved victorious. Dornaleck, who recently purchased Dell from J. B. Haggin has sent East for a jockey.

An international horse show will be held in Paris next year, and $43,000 will be distributed in prizes. The classes agreed upon are thoroughbreds, Arabs, Anglo-Arabs, half-breeds, cart horses, mules and donkeys.

The Lancaster Plate, seven furlongs, to be run at Manchester ten days after the St. Leger will be worth $49,000 to the winner. It is believed that Friar's Balsam will be trained with a view to starting in this stake.

A "ringer" among the runners is an uncommon thing, but one was discovered among the entries at the recent St. Louis meeting, it being the horse Fayette, that was entered in a race for maidens, finishing second. Subsequent investigation showed that the horse had won races elsewhere under different names, and the nag and his owner, E. A. Nickel, of Hannibal, Mo., were ruled off for life.

The betting on the Austrian Derby at Pesth was tremendously heavy this year, and Count Anton Apponizi, who won with Rajtarajta, had backed his steed with such freedom that he cleared upward of $300,000. The Count had an anxious time of it, as, if Rajtarajta had been beaten, his losses would have been so great that his estates would have been placed under sequestration. Count Anton, who is popular in Hungary, burst into tears when the winning horse number was hoisted and the Countess had a mild fit of hysterics.—Abilene, Kas. Gaz.

The following, sent from St. Louis, if true, is an instance of the wonderful grit shown by thoroughbred horses: "One of the strangest events that ever happened on a track occurred when Lagin, Chicago Stables, was receiving his first lesson as a steeplechaser. As he went over the log he struck it with his foreleg, but did not falter when he lit. The log is so heavy that it requires four men to lift it, yet he knocked it out of its mortising, and it fell almost twelve feet away. He continued to run, however, and took two hanks, a water jump, and then was led back to the stable, when it was discovered that he had split his knee bone. How he managed to run and leap after such an accident as that is puzzling horsemen."—National Live Stock Journal.

The bookmakers reaped harvests at Latonia. William Riely of Chicago, won over $25,000 during the meeting.

There were thirteen bookmakers at the St. Louis track the opening day, of the meeting and fifteen the closing day, and with the exception of Cola Ulman all made plenty of money.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to Stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the 1st day of August, 1888.

Entries for the purses must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by the consent of the Judges.

All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race. Entries to all trotting races will close August 24th, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association rules to govern running races, except as above. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 percent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race. A horse making a walkover shall be entered only to the entrance money paid in, when less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

Horses beat distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in the entries.

Each day's races will commence promptly at one o'clock p. m.

All entries must be directed to C. H. Stoddard, Secretary, Reno, Nevada.

The Ormsby County District Fair, at Carson City, begins September 24th and ends September 29th. Six days' racing; gives $7,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address J. D. Torreyson, Secretary, Carson City.

The Humboldt County District Fair begins October 2d, and ends October 5th. Four days' racing; gives $3,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address Alex. W. Secor, Secretary, Winnemucca, Nevada.

The State Agricultural Society has built a new track, located half a mile from the town of Reno, the soil being of such a character as to make it one of the best on the Pacific Coast.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to the entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is justified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races.

It is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

The Stockton track is one of the fastest in the world.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. Stable, hay and straw free to competitors.

Conditions of Three and Four-Year-Old Stakes.

American Trotting Association rules to govern. Five or more to enter, three to start, stakes to be divided seven-tenths to first horse, two-tenths to second, one tenth to third. Added money, 50 per cent to first, 25 to second, 15 to third, 10 to fourth. If only three start, fourth money reverts to the Society, if two only start, third and fourth money reverts to the Society, if walkover, no added money is given, the horse making the same only entitled to the stakes actually paid in. Failure to make subsequent payments forfeits money paid in.

CONDITIONS.

Ten per cent of purse (running, trotting and pacing) to accompany nominations. American Trotting Association Rules to govern pacing and trotting; Pacific Coast Blood Horse Rules to govern running events. Terms of races and division of money as above. Slakes in accordance with advertisement when nominations were made. No added money for a walk-over; horse making same only receives the entrance actually paid in. A horse distancing the field receives first and third money only; in any other event, first money only.

In all races five are to fill and three to start, but a lesser number of entries will hold, by proportionate amount of purse being deducted. Colors will be named for all running nominations. Drivers will be requested to wear distinct colored caps in all harness events. The Board reserves the right to change the order or sandwich heats and races, or postpone races when, in their judgment it may seem advisable. Entries to close with the Secretary, July 15, 1888, at midnight. Hay and bedding free to patrons. Everything renovated. New barns and stock accommodations. One admission to every department. REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a lesser number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nominations. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 60 per cent to the first horse, 30 per cent to the second and 10 per cent to the third.

American Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money to be divided as follows, 66 2/3 to the first and 33 1/3 to the second.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named at 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over, except as otherwise specified. Running races will be conducted under the rules of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association.

Non-starters in running races will be held for an entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries. In trotting races, drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary on Wednesday, August 1st, 1888.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary.

The district embraces all the territory north of the Bay of San Francisco and west of the Sacramento River. District horses must have been owned in the district six months prior to closing of entries.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS.

National Trotting Association rules to govern all trotting races. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all running. Five to enter and four to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold a lesser number than four to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, ten per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting, pacing and running premiums to be divided at the rate of fifty per cent for the first horse, twenty-five per cent to the second, fifteen per cent to the third, and ten per cent to the fourth.

All horses entered for trotting, pacing or running races, for which entrance has been paid and who go in the race designated, and fail to start in any part of the race, will have their entrance money returned to them after decision by the Judges.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary. For a walk-over a horse is only entitled to its entrance fee and one-half of the entrance retained by the Society from the other entries for said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race, entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field then to first and fourth moneys.

Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in by 8 o'clock P. M., or they shall be required to start or forfeit the entrance money.

All purses or premiums paid as soon as a decision is rendered.

Entries to the races, except No. 8, will close with the Secretary August 10, 1888.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. The Association is a member of the National Trotting Association. The Board of Directors will have charge of the grounds during the week of races, and will see that the Rules are strictly enforced. Address all communications to the Secretary.

Admission to Fair Grounds, 50 cents; Children under 12 years, 25 cents. To the Pavilion, 25 cents; Children under 12 years, 15 cents.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took the 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

The Spirit on Breeding Trotters.

The N. Y. Spirit of the Times is usually non-committal. Seldom taking a pronounced stand on any question, it may be said to be ultra conservative. In the following article, however, it would appear as though it were on the point of acknowledging that heretofore its fancies were in the wrong direction, and that there may be something good in what was thought to be heterodox. To those who have read the articles which have appeared from time to time in this paper, it will be manifest that the most telling points in the editorial quoted are based on like grounds. But there are a few errors. Frank Forrester was not the first writer to recommend the use of thoroughbred blood in the composition of fast trotters, although he was an enthusiastic advocate of the blood-horse. Wm. T. Porter, the editor of the Old Spirit, was firm in the belief of its potency, and there were other writers which antedate Wm. Henry Herbert in presenting their views. The Turf Register had an occasional correspondent who discoursed on that topic, and we distinctly remember that one who took ground against high-breeding in trotters, built his argument on the ground that heavy shoulders, heavy neck and a big head were essentials in order to hold an animal down so that it could not break into a gallop. There are many at the present day who argue with about as little sense, and a still greater number who think that racing form and trotting form are distinct and incompatible.

Too great stress is laid on what Mr. R. A. Alexander did in the way of mating thoroughbred mares with trotting stallions. The idea prevails that his experiments in that direction were on a large scale, whereas the truth is that only a few were bred, and these of a decidedly inferior class. Even as late as 1865 all of the thoroughbred mares owned by Mr. Alexander were fifty-seven, and to serve these he had three thoroughbred stallions, Lexington, Scythian and Ruric. At that time he desired to sell, and sent us a list with prices, thinking that one division, nineteen mares and a stallion, could be sold in Iowa or Illinois. We have that list laid away, the mares running from $300 to $8,000, that last being the valuation on Kitty Clark by imp. Glencoe. A few trotting mares were bred to Lexington, among them the dam of Flora Temple, the produce being Bland Temple, the dam of Nora Temple and Temple. That "the very highest results accomplished at Woodburn now prove to have emanated from the abandoned system" is an admission which would not have been made a short time ago, and which few of the papers that have opposed the system would have candor enough to own.

Granting that Electioneer is of wonderful prepotency, admitting that as a progenitor of a high rate of speed he is unrivaled, due credit must yet be given to the dams. Were it all owing to the sire, and with the assumption, as many claim, that horses of near relationship to thoroughbreds were totally unfitted for the trotting paddocks, he should never fail on mares of "pure trotting ancestry." But when we find that those mares which are thoroughbred, or have thoroughbred dams, have produced a greater proportion of fast trotters than the others, it is a fair inference that such are the best adapted for that sire. It is not the intention, however, to argue points which have been placed before our readers in recent issues. The main purpose is to call attention to the article which, taken as a whole, is worthy of commendation.

Breeding Fast Trotters.

[N. Y. Spirit of the Times.]

The theory of breeding the trotting horse is a never ending theme of interest. Frank Forrester, whose pen was first to undertake to direct practical thought upon this subject, contended that all improvement must come from the thoroughbred horse, and thought any other stallion unfit to use. His views were so extreme that those who undertook to put them in practice soon gave up discouraged. This teacher having been abandoned, two different schools sprung up in his place, which ever since have been at direct variance with each other. One taught the avoidance of thoroughbred blood as much as possible. The other contended for an intermediate course, using trotting blood sufficient to control action with cautiously selected crosses of running blood to give an improved physical organism for the maintenance of speed for a distance.

Much heated argument has been expended over these two theories, and in the meantime many excellent trotters have appeared in favor of both sides of the argument. For a long time it seemed as though the opponents of a thoroughbred admixture had the best of it. They contended that the running current destroyed trotting action and disposition to trot, imparted a fractious temper, and did not improve the stamina and endurance of the stock. Of the mass of trotters about the country but very few that appeared in the 2:30 list had a thoroughbred ancestor within two or even three generations. It was therefore pointed out that thoroughbred blood was not adapted to trotting purposes. To still further favor this view it was claimed that the late Mr. R. A. Alexander, who had extensively tried to breed trotters upon a thoroughbred foundation, as well as of purely trotting stock, had abandoned the former method, being far better satisfied with the latter. Still many others continued to believe in and to practice the use of an admixture of thoroughbred blood, so that some twenty years ago several ambitious establishments were using it.

The attempts were almost invariably made by breeding the thoroughbred mare to the trotting sire. In this way it was easier to engraft a fashionable trotting strain upon a large number of youngsters, since far less outlay was required in buying a stallion of the desired family than in gathering together a large number of its broodmares. But as the interest of the running turf rapidly expanded, the best thoroughbred mares became too valuable as producers of running stock to be longer retained in trotting studs, and for this reason very few good thoroughbred mares have been covered by trotting sires for many years past. Furthermore, the advocates of the thoroughbred cross gradually weakened in their enthusiasm, owing, in a great measure, to a want of success in maintaining the required trotting action. It is more than likely that the theory would have been abandoned all round but for the after effects of some of the earlier work done in this direction, and for the late success in the Palo Alto Stud in producing fast and reliable trotters directly from thoroughbred mares.

The greater part of the demonstration in favor of a thoroughbred mixture with trotting blood emanates from Woodburn Farm and Palo Alto. It is plain that nowhere else was the theory tried under like favorable conditions, for as we recall other establishments that attempted it, we notice that in the first place that no stallion equal to those of Mr. Alexander and Governor Stanford in power to control the action of their progeny was brought into use elsewhere, and this seems to be the key to all success in this direction. Again, the mares used at Palo Alto were not alone chosen because thoroughbred, but, in addition, for their conformation and temperament. The earlier Mr. Alexander made, perhaps, an equally good selection of mares when Woodburn was organized, and in Pilot Jr. had an unusually good trotting stallion for the purpose of crossing upon them. His efforts, too, were not without results that were excellent for their day, but while the get of Pilot Jr. had speed, and some of his progeny from thoroughbred mares were among his best trotters, yet as a family, from whatever description of dams, they were of highly nervous organization and often of fretful disposition, that made luggers of most of them and rendered them unreliable in races. Mr. Alexander was about the first systematic experimenter with the thoroughbred mixture, and, until the attempt at Palo Alto, he was the most productive of favorable results. But it so happened that, with one discouragement and another, this theory of breeding had gone into disfavor at Woodburn before it was undertaken at Palo Alto. Successful moves in breeding are not always recognized as fast as made. The very highest results accomplished at Woodburn now prove to have emanated from the abandoned system.

That the other establishments referred to were unsuccessful in attempting to breed trotters from thoroughbred mares is perhaps not surprising when it may generally be said that they were in the same predicament in their attempts with trotting bred mares. Whether because their stallions are of little value, or for whatever cause, they failed alike with trotting and thoroughbred dams. Scattering instances of success in producing trotters of a high order partaking liberally of thoroughbred blood are of late not infrequent, but no establishment, until Palo Alto's success has brought out a line of stock successfully bred upon that theory. This being so it would appear that in the cases of Woodburn and Palo Alto the experiment was tried under different and more favorable conditions than in any other establishment. That difference probably consisted in the action-controlling power of the stallions used. There seems to be no evidence that the famous stallions of the past twenty years, whose names now stand foremost in the list of successful sires—such horses for instance, as George Wilkes, Volunteer, Blue Bull, Dictator, Harold, Happy Medium, Almont, Daniel Lambert, etc.—covered any thoroughbred mares to speak of. If occasionally one was bred to them it was usually a mare considered of too little value to be bred to a running sire. Therefore, the question has never been satisfactorily tried with first-class material on both sides until Senator Stanford put it to the test at Palo Alto.

Electioneer has thirty-one performers in the 2:30 list, ranging in speed from that point as low as 2:16. They are from mares of much variety of breeding. His most successful hit has been upon daughters of the pacing stallion St. Clair, and it was from one of these that he got his fastest performer, viz.: Manzanits, record 2:16 as a four-year-old. He also got from daughters of St. Clair, Bonita, 2:18½, Wildflower, 2:21 at two years old, and Fred Crocker, 2:25½ at two years old. Nothing whatever is known of the blood of St. Clair, nor of the dams of his daughters, from which these trotters sprung. St. Clair is described by the best judges as having been an exceedingly bloodlike horse, but the impossibility of discovering his origin, and the obscurity in which his daughters that produced these fast performers were bred, renders it impossible to estimate their proximity to thoroughbred sources. Seven of the get of Electioneer are out of mares that are in the thoroughbred Stud Book. These range in speed from 2:20 to 2:29½, the average being 2:24½. There are two others with records of 2:16½ and 2:19½ from a mare nearly thoroughbred, whose dam is in the Stud-book. By dividing the get of Electioneer that appear in the 2:30 list into three classes, based upon character of breeding, we find nine that have a thoroughbred parent or grandparent, with average records of 2:24½, leaving eight with average records of 2:21.1-5, which for want of pedigrees cannot be classed on either side. The fastest of the get of Electioneer is in the latter category, the second in order of speed has the near thoroughbred cross and the third is purely of trotting ancestors for two generations.

This analysis does not prove that breeding from strictly thoroughbred mares has at the average increased the capacity of the Electioneers to train on, nor does it disprove it. The average speed of the seven that are from mares known to be purely of running blood is almost exactly the same as that from the fourteen that are from mares known to be purely of trotting and pacing blood. If the thoroughbred cross added anything in the way of training capacity, its effect would therefore appear to have been offset by a loss in the natural deftness of action that comes of an unbroken inheritance of purely trotting blood. Where the thoroughbred is a grandparent instead of a parent, the average speed in Electioneer's list is much higher than in the purely trotting formula, but the instances are too few to generalize from. If the best quality of thoroughbred blood can improve the physical organism of the trotting horse, so as to increase his capacity to maintain high speed for a long distance, it would seem logical to expect a step in this direction by the addition of 25 per cent. at a time. If the addition of thoroughbred blood has a deterrent effect upon trotting action, it would seem that while the trotting influences might prevail in maintaining the action against an introduction of 25 per cent. of running blood, they would be far less apt to do so as perfectly against an introduction of 50 per cent. Speed is the first qualification of a trotter, and speed of the highest order can only accompany perfectly true action. The next qualification is the ability to maintain speed for a distance, and this only comes of a perfect physical organization, giving great vital force through clear wind, perfect arterial circulation and muscular power. A proper blending of these two great qualifications make the perfect trotter. But a hindrance to one of these great qualifications may result from attempting to introduce an improvement in the other. The opponents of the thoroughbred cross say that it will. But the reward of securing both qualifications in equilibrium is worth striving for, say its advocates, who further say that through two hundred years of selection by the test of the turf, the thoroughbred horse at his best has acquired the most perfect physical organism in the world for sustained speed.

As far as introducing thoroughbred blood to trotting lines has yet succeeded, the greatest performers have been secured where no more than 25 per cent. of running blood is admitted through a single source. That quantity seems to have been absorbed to the manifest improvement of the physical organism without disturbing the trotting action. Whether, as trotting stallions are bred with still greater power to impart true action, a larger proportion of running blood can be successfully absorbed, remains to be seen. If any trotting stallion has yet appeared that is capable of the task, it would seem to be Electioneer. Should he by controlling the current of thoroughbred blood with which he is being brought in contact, raise the capacity of his descendants proportionately as Pilot Jr. did, there will prove to be some rare fields to explore for those that breed and drive his descendants in another generation.

The great son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian and Green Mountain Maid is out in strong force this year. With Azmoor's victory at Petaluma, Cal., July 4, when he won the 2:30 race in 2:28½, 2:24½, 2:25½, the sixth representative of Electioneer for this season enters the 2:30 list. Four of these, including Azmoor, are from thoroughbred dams. This is a great number of performers to have appeared so early in the season, especially as most of his get are in California, where the larger meetings do not take place until autumn.

The Rank of Clara as a Brood-Mare.

There is no more pleasing and no more progressive sign discernible around the whole breeding horizon than the increasing interest taken in the discussion of the merits of great brood-mares. As "Aurelius" well says, this is the brood-mare epoch in breeding. Time was when only a sire's qualifications were required to please the breeder; anything would do for a brood-mare. Before truer conceptions of the principles of breeding that grotesque folly has been swept away, and now the power and influence of the mother in the equine world is acknowledged even as in the human family. Great men have great mothers, and great horses great dams. The importance of the dam in breeding the trotter was never as fully acknowledged as it will be in years to come. It is eminently reasonable that the dam upon whose substance the embryo is nourished and grows from conception to birth, and from birth through early colthood should be the greater source of its character and capacity. It is now no uncommon thing to hear thinkers on the subject exclaim: "I would rather take my chances in breeding a good mare to a common horse, than in breeding a common mare to a good horse." And ranging over the great breeding establishments it can truly be said that, with one or two notable exceptions, they have won their success through the power of their mares rather than their sires. This may seem a bold statement, but a careful examination of the records will show it not to be unreasonable. Of course Fairlaw owes more to Almont than to the merits of its sire; and of course, great as some of Governor Stanford's trotting-hred mares are, the fame of Palo Alto is chiefly the fame of Electioneer. But Almont and Electioneer must be ranked as sires of exceptional power. Woodburn never had a sire, unless it was Alexander's Abdallah in his short career, the equal of either of them, yet no farm has outlived Woodburn. Why? Read the answer in the triumphs of its matrons.

Besides being a grateful break in the monotony, it is now most opportune to turn from the perpetual discussion of the power of male lines to pay tribute to the great mares of our breeding history. "Aurelius," albeit we have to somewhat differ with him, has "started the ball rolling" with his interesting and carefully argued-out contribution on Clara. He takes this as his proposition:

Clara was not only a very great mare, but she was in some respects a greater mare than Green Mountain Maid, or any other whose name appears on Mr. Wallace's roll of honor.

And continuing:

The great gift of a perfect sire is the power to breed on generation after generation, and this is too, the greatest gift of a mare. . . . I believe that as Hambletonian is the greatest among horses in the power to transmit extreme speed generation after generation, so to old Clara must the palm be awarded as the greatest of brood-mares measured by the same rule.

And after adducing the bottom facts in his argument, "Aurelius" continues:

I believe the reader will thus see what I started out to demonstrate—that Clara has as yet no equal as a transmitter of speed for two or three generations.

It will be observed that "Aurelius" avoids the positive assertion that Clara was the greatest of brood-mares, but it does seem to us that his proposition and his argument are tantamount to asserting her superiority over all.

He thus pithily sums up Clara's achievements:

First generation: Dexter, 2:17½, Alms, 1:28½, and Astoria, 2:29½. Second generation: Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, Director, 2:17, and Phallas, 2:13½. Third generation: Princeton, 2:19½, Euclid, 2:28½, and Williams, 2:21. Princeton and Euclid are from Clara's daughter's daughter, and Williams is from a son's daughter. This shows that she breeds on both through the male and female lines. Where is her equal to transmit speed generation after generation?

Now, the production of extreme speed is a great point, and the quality to breed on the vital one in estimating the rank of a brood-mare. But there are two other tests that the mare worthy to rank as first must meet: (1) The power to produce performers uniformly; (2) the power to produce performers from different sires. It is of no practical use or of no avail to lop off one qualification where all are essential; and when either any one or all essentials combined are considered there are matrons that outrank Clara. Nor can a fair comparison be made by choosing two or three of the best descendants in each generation. To be candid, and to arrive at a sound conclusion, all essentials must be considered, and the essential power to transmit speed uniformly is not considered when we only take into our count part of the performing progeny of an animal. No other horse has sired three such performers as Jay-Eye-See, Phallas and Director, but to make that a basis for the conclusion that Dictator outranks certain other sires in even the first generation would be an absurdity. Take all his performers, and all the performers of competitors, and then judge. When we consider all the essentials of true greatness it will be found that Clara is outranked by some of her sisters. And first as worthy for the comparison we will name one that "Aurelius" has entirely ignored—Waterwitch.

The first of Waterwitch's family was foaled in 1865, the first of Clara's in 1858. The performing history of the first generation of Clara's family is finished; that of Waterwitch has candidates for turf honors yet to hear from. But as the records stand Clara has three in the 2:30 list with records averaging 2:25½—all the get of one horse, Hambletonian. Waterwitch has three in 2:30 list whose records average 2:21, each the get of a different horse, and one the get of a thoroughbred horse. So Waterwitch very easily outranks Clara in the first generation. In the second generation she has a son with six 2:30 performers to his credit, and three daughters with 2:30 performers to their credit. In the second generation Clara has one son with sixteen to his credit, and that son's sire was Hambletonian, a much greater horse than the sire of Mambrino Gift. Moreover, Mambrino Gift died when he was eleven years old, in 1877, and was on the turf as late as 1874, while Dictator is still at service at twenty-five years of age, and there is really no comparison between his opportunities and Mambrino Gift's. In the third generation Waterwitch's family has as yet but one representative in the 2:30 list, a three-year-old, got by a son of her daughter, but it is yet too early to say what any of our great lines may accomplish in the third remove.

Clara has bred on through two channels—Dictator and Hyscynth. Waterwitch has bred on through four. Clara was bred eight times to Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and four times to Volunteer—Waterwitch was never once bred to a horse as great as either of them. In the point of herself producing extreme speed, in the power to produce speed by different horses, and in the power to breed on through different channels—to breed on uniformly—Waterwitch clearly outranks Clara. And showing her superiority in these points, why is she not the greatest of the two?

A great individual may make his influence felt through many generations, but if we cannot estimate his rank by what she has done in two generations we should hardly hope to better our chances of arriving at a sound conclusion by embracing three or four. And especially if the strain is reinforced by great crosses in every remove is a verdict based upon the third generation unreliable, and it is clearly upon this that "Aurelius" bases his estimate of Clara. She was bred to Volunteer and produced Hyacinth, Hyscynth was bred to Hambletonian and produced Reina Victoria, and Reina Victoria was bred to Princes and produced Euclid and Princeton. Now, here we have three crosses, one each to such great horses as Hambletonian, Volunteer and Princes, between Princeton and Clara. Again, her son Dictator bred to the great mare Crop produced Gsuntlette, and she bred to Combat produced Williams. Here Clara has the assistance of two other great dams—Crop and Minna, the dam of Kentucky Wilkes, 2:21½. Deciding the question of superiority on performances of animals carrying only 12½ per cent. of the blood of the ancestors in question is getting too far away from the subject. Williams carries just twice as much of the blood of Crop as of the blood of Clara, and Euclid and Princeton each carry 37½ per cent. of the blood of Hambletonian and only 12½ per cent. of the blood of Clara. There can be no fairer test than a tabulation of what a progenitor has done directly himself and through his sons and daughters. We estimate the worth of a pedigree through what the immediate ancestors have done; and accordingly we should estimate the worth of an ancestor chiefly through what his immediate progeny have done.

The following table shows what a number of the greatest brood-mares have produced in the first generation.

Table giving the 2:0 performers and their average records of every broodmare having three or more to her credit in the 2:30 list:

NAME AND SIRE.	No. of 2:0 performers.	Average records.
Green Mountain Maid, by Harry Clay.	6	2:23 9-10
Emeline, by H. B. Patchen.	5	2:25 1-5
Ned, by Edwin Forrest.	4	2:22 1-4
Minnehaha, by Bald Chief.	4	2:24 2-5
Maid of Clay, by Henry Clay.	4	2:25 4-5
Miss Russell, by Pilot Jr.	3	2:17 1-3
Molly Walker, by Captain Walker.	3	2:19 9-10

Dolly, by Mambrino Gift.	3	2:21 1-2
Beautiful Belle, by The Moor.	3	2:23 1-3
Gretchen, by Mambrino Gift.	3	2:23 1-2
Jenny Bryan, by John Dillard.	3	2:23 2-3
Duroc Maid, by Messenger Duroc.	3	2:24 2-5
Crop, by Pilot Jr.	3	2:24 1-2
Logan Maid, by Paige's Logan.	3	2:24 2-5
Clara, by American Star.	3	2:25 1-2
Kate, by Bellair.	3	2:25 1-2
Dolsey, by Shasfer Pony.	3	2:25 4-5
Trusty, by Marlborough.	3	2:26 1-4
Whalebone, by Carter's Columbus.	3	2:26 1-4
Alma Maier, by Mambrino Patchen.	3	2:26 3-4
Lady Fulton, by Stubtail.	3	2:27
Myra Shaw, by Tom Lang.	3	2:27 1-3
Jane Murray, pedigree unknown.	3	2:27 3-4
Kate Bradley, by Clifton Pilot.	3	2:27 4-5

We have here classed the great mares in the order of the number they have produced in the 2:30 list, and those equal in numbers we have graded according to the average speed of their progeny. It may be said, and truly, that it does not always follow that a mare that produces four is necessarily greater (now we are considering the production of performers only) than a mare that produces three. Few, for instance, would concede that Maid of Clay was as great a mare as Miss Russell, even without reference to the latter's grandchildren. But, as a rule, it is safe to class producers according to the rate of speed of their performers. But it will be seen that in the first generation, judge by what standard we may, Clara does not stand near the head. Five mares have produced more performers, and twelve have produced an equal number while outranking her progeny in average speed. Sixteen mares have excelled her as uniform producers of high rates of speed.

Now, to pursue the measuring process further, let us see how Clara ranks in the second generation. While in the foregoing table the matter of time, and therefore of opportunity, is very important, in the following one embracing two generations it is vital and cannot be overlooked:

Table of mares having three in the 2:30 list, that also have bred on in the second generation:

NAME.	Year Foaled.	First of Get Foaled.	Number in 2:30 List.	Number Produced by Sons and Daughters.	Total.
Green Mountain Maid	1862	1867	6	24	30
Clara	1858	1868	3	14	19
Miss Russell	1865	1870	3	13	16
Dolly	1861	1865	3	13	16
Waterwitch	1859	1865	3	10	13
Alma Maier	1872	1876	3	7	10
Minnehaha	1868	1872	4	3	7
Kate	1852	1859	3	4	7
Trusty	1860	1866	3	3	6
Tackey	1859	1874	3	2	5
Gretchen	1866	1872	3	2	5
Crop	1861	1868	3	2	5

The second column of dates in this table is a most important factor in considering the capacity of these mares to breed on. In Clara's case, though the gelding Dexter was foaled in 1858, the first medium through which she could breed on was not foaled until 1862. But some of her rivals are placed under equal disadvantage, and these include Green Mountain Maid, Miss Russell, Dolly, Alma Maier, Minnehaha and Tackey. If we could ascertain with certainty the exact date at which the progeny of each was put to breeding we would then have far more satisfactory data, but in the absence of that, the date at which the first born of each was foaled is fairest for all.

Though Clara stands second in point of numbers, who will say that, considering the opportunity and the age of her family, she ranks near the head? And what is also significant is the fact that she is falling back in the race year by year.

Many great mares, greater than some numbered above, do not appear in either of these tabulations. We had to limit our tables, and as the object was a comparison of Clara with other stars, we took her as a measure and shaped the tables to show whether she was equalled or excelled. If we have seemed to argue that she was inferior to some, we have not attempted, or meant to attempt, to detract from her unquestioned merit and superb achievements. She will live in history as beyond cavil or criticism a very great mare, but not as the greatest mother of trotters.

"Aurelius" may tell us that we have answered an argument which he did not advance, for he was careful not to say that Clara was the greatest of brood-mares. We may anticipate that criticism by the assurance that we have not written in a controversial spirit, or sought to answer any argument. We have merely, apropos of his timely eulogy of the dam of Dexter, considered from the standpoint of the records, and measured by the test of producing speed and breeding on in the second generation, the rank of Clara as a brood-mare.—Wallace's Monthly.

Los Angeles Entries.

The list of Los Angeles entries, by some unaccountable postoffice error, was too late for our issue of last week.

FIRST DAY—MONDAY, AUGUST 6.

Emperor of Norfolk alone won at this meeting $23,250.

A notable shipment of American trotters took place recently from New York City, when Mr. John Cheney sailed for Buenos Ayres with the black stallion Endymion, by Dictator, and the bay gelding Volante, by Phil Sheridan. Dictator is a well-known trotter, having a record of 2:23 $\frac{1}{2}$, and when he was a three-year-old was looked upon as one of the most promising youngsters in Kentucky. At that time Mr. J. I. Case bought him, but bad feet prevented Endymion from making the record that would under more favorable circumstances have been placed to his credit, and after being kept in training for several seasons and taken to California and back, he was sold to S. A. Browne & Co., on whose farm at Kalamazoo, Mich., he has made a couple of seasons in the std. Why he should be taken to South America, unless for breeding purposes, it is difficult to see, as he can hardly be of much account as a trotter. Another one that Mr. Cheney took along is the pacer Georgetown, that made a record of 2:16 $\frac{1}{2}$ this season, and is certainly in better shape than ever before in his life. But all the same the South Americans will find him a hard pacer to handle, as he wears toe-weights, and George Robens, who has certainly had plenty of experience at the business, has taken a long time to get the son of Blue Bull at his best. The trouble with American trotters and pacers that go abroad is that they are not the best ones we have, but generally worn-out fellows, and even if this is not the case they are apt to require a lot of rigging that the average foreigner knows nothing about, and hence when the animal reaches its new home, no use can be made of the speed which it possesses. It was the height of folly to send such trotters as Silverleaf and Zoe R. to Europe, and the wonder is that our foreign friends have not retired altogether from the purchase of American horseflesh.—Breeder's Gazette.

An Illicit Betting Room.

The pool-room crowd is a curious one. First comes the layer of the odds. In this room he was a full-faced, pleasant-looking, sharp-eyed fellow of about twenty-eight years. Before him lay a great bunch of hookmakers' tickets, and when a bet was made he wrote the horse's name on the face of the ticket and called out the ticket's number with the money laid, thus—"20 to 5, Belvidere, No. 186." This was recorded by the sheet-keeper. When the sheet is full on each race it is handed to the cashier, who checks off each bet as winning tickets are handed in to him. The betting crowd looked on the whole more like a crowd of workmen than an assemblage of sports. A few young men hovering about their twenty-first birthdays, and dressed fairly, looked like clerks or young artisans. A few were inclined to be tough, and were without doubt young crooks, who are notorious gamblers, and lose all the money they steal. A dozen men present were well dressed, and to all appearances young business men. Just before each race was called a score of men of all ages would flock into the room, scan the card, place a bet and go out again. These were clerks who came out on some excuse to dabble at the infuriating game. One middle-aged man, with a round, lobster-hued face, short and stout of stature, was evidently accepted as an oracle on racing matters by his companions, and many questions were propounded to him as to the merits of certain horses and jockeys. A number of the questions asked were so irrelevant that it was plain the questioners were not conversant with racing matters. A question asked by the writer brought forth the startling information that the man had never been on a race track in his life. There is absolutely no sport, however, in betting on horses in a pool-room; it is nothing but a plain gamble.

The pool-room is connected with the Commercial News Department of the Western Union Building, which has wires running right to the race course. Twice during the interval between each race the ruling prices laid by the hookmakers at the course are received at the rooms and marked on the slips. When the horses canter to the starting post it is so heralded in the pool-room, and a detailed description of the horses at each quarter-post on the course is called out to the excited betters.

The Long Branch Handicap was about to be run when the writer entered the room. The space in front of the card was completely jammed by those who wanted to finally decide what horses they would play. A young fellow in a striped flannel shirt, who watched the rear door, had to clear out the crowd to let others have a chance at the card. Every one was discussing the candidates for stake honors, and a buzz of low conversation filled the room. A tall fellow, with a long, thin face, said to a companion who had handed him $5, to which he added another bill of the same denomination: "Who'll we play Jim? Elkwood or Kingston?" "I don't care. Put it on whoever you want to," was the answer. "Well I'll put it on Elkwood at 3 to 1. But I tell you, Belvidere might win. He went a mile and three furlongs within the record." He then squeezed through the crowd and put it on Elkwood. Most of them were playing Kingston, who was an even-money favorite. "I like Duboyne," said one young fellow. Another didn't see how Triboulet could lose. Several liked Eurus, but others said he wouldn't run straight. Two backed Belvidere at 15 to one against, on his previous form. One or two were on Favor. When the telephone bell finally jingled, and the young man announced, "Dere at de post, gents," every horse in the race had an expectant backer among the sweltering crowd. A few more bets were made, the telephone again jingled, and the tough young man called out, "Dere off, Triboulet in the lead, Duboyne running second." The most breathless excitement pervaded the room and not a word was spoken.

"Passin' de stand Kingston leads, Eurus second, and Elkwood third," called the young man. Several men here nudged each other and made remarks enlusive of Kingston or his jockey, McLaughlin. Another said: "Elkwood's coming up; he'll be there at the finish." Those whose horses were not in the first three hid their time and awaited developments. The horses ran around the homestretch in nearly the same order until they entered the homestretch, which is supposed by pool-room fiends to be as good as if the race were finished. Here Kingston was leading, Elkwood second, Favor third. The Kingston followers, who were in a large majority, here broke the usual stillness, and one of them shouted, "Kingston wins! How can they heat him with Jimmy up?" The racket was at once hushed by the pool-room men, and the crowd awaited with interest the announcement of the winner. Not a whisper broke the stillness of the room. Ten seconds were thus passed, when the young man at the telephone broke the spell by laconically announcing in a wooden voice: "Belvidere wins, Elkwood second."

The crowd was spell-bound for a moment; they were nearly all losers. Jimmy and Kingston were vaquished in that long homestretch, where many fortunes were made or unmade. The two young men who had bet on Belvidere, however, here entered the room, they having gone out until the race was decided, and their joy knew no bounds. They derided the luckless ones and heralded the fact that "they didn't see how Belvidere could lose." The young man who spoke favorably of Belvidere, but put his money on Elkwood, berated his foolishness, and said that he almost knew Belvidere would win.

The handicap was soon a thing of the past, however, and the odds were soon posted for the next race.

A young fellow, with sunburned face, claimed to be a jockey and had a tip from the track, and induced several dupes to invest money on Triboulet for him, he expecting a percentage if that horse won. He was a fraud. Another man much sought after was the one that gets a "telegram" from the track. Some friend there sends him a tip, and the crowd immediately besiege him to give them the good thing. Telegraph operators, who get tips from the telegrams passing through their hands, seek the pool-room to use their surreptitious information. The better of whom the pool-room hookmaker stands in dread, however, is the race-horse owner, who has a cinch bottled up for a particular race, and drops into the room an hour or two before the races begin—the rooms then being open for clerks who can only play during their lunch hour—when higher odds are offered, and lays four or five hundred dollars on his horse. As most of the bets made are two dollars and upward, it will be seen that a heavy loss like that is not easily made up. The pool-room men are also in constant fear of crooked telegraph operators, who clip the wires and send wrong horses in. During the Jerome Park races a few years ago $75,000 was lost in this way.—N. Y. World.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Thos. Bowhill, M. R. C. V. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by three dollars, and addressed to Dr. Bowhill, 1523 California St., San Francisco.

A. C. D., Stockton Cal.

Constant Reader—You will oblige me by giving the latest treatment for water or grain founder in horses.

Answer—There is no difference between water and grain founder. Founder or laminitis is the same disease, whether it is caused by an excess of grain or water, overdriving, or standing in a draught when warm.

Treatment—1st, locally. Rasp down the walls of feet level with the soles, and bleed from the coronary plexus, and after this put the feet in warm poultices, and continue to do so for several days.

2d, Systemic. To alleviate the pain in the early stages, give the following:

Tincture of opium, 1 ounce.
Bicarbonate of soda, 1 ounce.
Water, 1 pint.

Take the chill off the animal's water, and put half an ounce of powdered nitre in it for a few days. If the animal is affected with indigestion or constipation, it will be necessary to give it a pint of raw linseed oil. B.

Fair Notes

The Board of Supervisors of Butte county have appointed a commission to expend the sum of $2,500, appropriated by the Board on June 6, 1888, for the purpose of gathering together materials for a Butte county exhibit at the California State Fair at Sacramento and the Mechanics' Fair at San Francisco, for the year 1888. This commission consists of Messrs. A. H. Crew, S. S. Boynton, B. Russell, J. T. Rutherford and C. N. Reed.

The Fair at Carson City, Nev., should be a great success. They have offered liberal purses, and will offer specials for any horses whose races fail to fill. Accommodations will be excellent, and it is certain any visitor ought to be well pleased.

The time of the closing of entries in the Montana and Washington race circuit has been changed from July 14 to August 4.

The premiums on horses alone (not including the turf events) at the great International Fair, to be held in Buffalo, September 4th to 14th, are $13,450. The great St. Louis Fair gives but $7,995 on the same classes; Toronto, $1,915, and New York State Fair, $2,092. The Buffalo Association has decided that no pool-selling, gambling, nor the sale of spirituous liquors will be permitted on the exposition grounds. When one remembers the large amounts of money derived at fairs from the sale of "license stands," this bold innovation on the part of the directors of the exposition can not fail to commend itself to all as an earnest and self-sacrificing effort to secure good order at the Fair, and to teach to thousands a lesson of sobriety and industry.

The Yamhill County (Oregon) Agricultural Association will hold its annual fair commencing September 10th, and continuing four days.

In the introduction of the trotting colt stakes on the speed programme of our fair the Board of Directors made a wise and sensible move. The stakes were closed May 1st with liberal nominations, and our fair was brought more and more into prominence as being the first to start colt-trotting stakes for all foals of certain years. California is producing thousands of fast horses, and the great rivalry existing between owners and breeders will be a stimulant that will urge them on to win stakes and lower records. Colt trotting will be the favorite with the race-going public in a very few years, for there is something exciting and fascinating in the sight of a number of highly-bred youngsters who come together for the first time, and they are most uncertain, for where one will win to-day he will lose to-morrow.

Petaluma will start the ball rolling on Tuesday, August 21st, with the three-year-old district for a purse of $250 with the following nominations: W. R. Overhiser, s s Oaknut; J. H. White, ob f Alice; D. R. Misner, blk c Anti-Coolie; M. O'Riley, br o Alto; Guerne and Murphy, h s Alfred; A. McFadyen, h o Redwood; B. C. Holly, oh g Ben Davis. On Friday, August 24th, is the district two-year-old, which closed on May 1st, with the following: D. S. Misner, blk a Director; Thos. Smith, b o George Washington; J. H. White, c f Henrietta D.; J. H. White, b f Mountain Quail; A. J. Zane, g c Captor; Guerne and Murphy, b s G & M; W. Page h s Electric. Besides these there is a yearling dash on Wednesday which closed on May 1st with five entries and a free-for-all two-year-old stake on the same day with seven entries. On Friday there will be a free-for-all three-year-old race with ten entries, Redwood, Amigo, Memo, Direct, Monteth, Anti-Coolie and Alfred G. being among them.—Daily Imprint.

Colors Claimed.

Enoch Yates, Santa Rosa, Cal., claims as racing colors cherry jacket, blue sash and cap.

SALE OF TROTTER STOCK.—W. H. Wilson, Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., sold to J. F. Hubinger, New Haven, Conn., July 21st, bay filly Simile, foaled 1887, by Simmons, record 2:28, dam Miss Wilson by Sterling, son of Volunteer.

SALE OF CONDE, 2:20.—July 28th, at Petaluma, the ch g Conde was sold by O. A. Hickok to a party from Arizona for $5,000. Hickok purchased him of H. H. Coleman at the Killip sale, in this city, a month ago, for $2,100. Conde is by Abbotsford, 2:19½, dam Katy Triska by Colonel.

The three-year-old trotting stallion Bell Boy was sold at auction at Lexington, Ky., on July 23d, for the unprecedented sum of $50,000. This is the highest price that has ever been paid for a trotter. His purchaser was Mr. R. T. Seaman, of San Diego, who had owned him in partnership with T. C. Jefferson, of Lexington, Ky. The bidding was spirited, Mr. J. H. Clark, of Elmira, being determined to possess the great three-year-old, but Mr. Seaman was the most persistent.

Bell Boy was bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, and was foaled March 25, 1885. In color he is a seal brown, with a little white on his left hind heel, and stands full 15½ hands high, weighing when in medium flesh 1,025 pounds. He is by Electioneer, sire of 32 performers with records of 2:30 or better.

His dam, Beautiful Bella, five-year-old record 2:29½, is the dam of Hinda Rose, three-year-old record 2:19½ (best up to date ever made by a three-year-old); St. Bel, 2:24½, and Chimes, 2:30½. Her sire, The Moor, although dying when ten years old, left six 2:30 trotters, one of which, like Beautiful Bella, will forever keep his memory green, he being none other than the distinguished Sultan. Bell Boy's second dam Minne-Ha-Ha, is the dam of Beautiful Bella, 2:20½, Alcazar, two-year-old record 2:29½, and three-year-old record 2:23; Eva, 2:26 as a two-year-old, 2:25½ as a four-year-old, 2:25 as a five-year-old and 2:23 as a six-year-old; and Sweetheart, 2:26½ as a two-year-old and 2:22½ as a three-year-old.

Minne-Ha-Ha is by Steven's Bald Chief; her dam being Nettie Clay by Strader's Cassius M. Clay Jr., next dam Col. Morgan's mare by Old Abdullah, and next dam a daughter of Engineer that sired Lady Suffolk.

Bell Boy is engaged to trot in the following stakes: At Marysville, Ky., Aug. 20, 1888, in three-year-old stakes. Matron Stakes, New York Breeders, three-year-olds 1888. Annual Nursery Stakes, New York Breeders, three-year-olds, 1888.

Gasconade Stakes, at St. Louis Fair, for three-year-olds, 1888.

Three-Year-Old Stakes, Lexington Trotting Horse Association, 1888.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Chicago stable lost seventeen races and about $15,000 before winning once at the Chicago meeting.

The Dwyer Brothers remain at the head of winning owners, but Mr. Caldwell, Mr. Belmont and Campbell & Hopkins promise to make it hot for them before the end of the season.

Emperor of Norfolk has already won seven races and $28,530. Terra Cotta has won the same number of races and about $13,000. The Bard has won six races and about $18,000.

The well-known horses J. P., record 2:23; Sleepy John, 2:34; Silver Cloud, 2:30½, and Colonel Wood, 2:20½, have been purchased for European parties by Dr. C. G. Frazier of Boston.

Jay-Eye-See received a bad gash in the mangle of one of his fore legs at Hickory Grove. He was playing in his paddock and came in contact with a barb wire fence that encloses his pasture.

The bay mare Neyella, bred by Theodore Winters, and one of the most rapid mares on the Pacific Coast at distances under a mile has a colt by St. Paul, he by Alarm out of Lady Salyers, by Longfellow.

Seven of the fixed events of the Saratoga Association will close August 15. They are the Saratoga and Kentucky stakes for 1889, and the Travers, Iroquois, Alabama, Foxhall and Kenner stakes for 1899.

Issac Murphy, the jockey, has sold to Green B. Morris, the chestnut colt Barrister, three years old, by Bramble, dam Miss Harding, by imp. Great Tom, out of Melita, by Muggins, for the reported price of $4,000.

In the recent three-year-old race at Butte City, S. E. Laramie's Mautus, by Fieldmont, dam by Forest Gold Duet, fell dead at the finish of the third heat. The filly died until within a few feet of the wire. She was valued at $2,500.

Donovan, the Duke of Portland's colt, had won $47,000 on the English turf up to the 1st of July. From the Brooklshy stakes he got £1,034 15.; Portland stakes, £6,000; New stakes, Ascot, £1,169, and Hartsbourne stakes, £1,250.

Mr. George A. Singlerley's Prince Wilkes, 2:16, McLeod, 2:21½, and Katherine S. will take part in the grand trotting circuit this season at Detroit. Mr. Singlerley's horses will contest for two guaranteed $10,000 purses before they return.

St. Bel, (the brother to Bell Boy), that made a record of 2:24½ as a 4-year-old, and has since been in the stud in Pennsylvania, is to be given a chance next year to lower his record, and his withdrawal from stud duty in 1889 is already announced.

Billet and Longfellow are making a close fight for supremacy as winning sires. The latter has some large winners in Sir Dixon, Raceland, The Lioness and Belvidere, but Longfellow has the Bard, Lavinia Belle, Hypocrite, Linden, Julia L, Long Knight and a host of other winners.

The Dwyer Brothers are negotiating for the old Secaucus race track near New York. The course belongs to the Catholic Church, and several years ago was leased to the late Mr. William R. Travers. It is said that the Dwyers are not satisfied with the treatment they have received from rival racing associations, and may keep the Secaucus track open all the season.

The most fortunate thoroughbred owner in England so far this season is the Duke of Portland. He has already secured $80,565 in stakes. Of this sum Ayrshire brought in $38,125 by winning the Two Thousand Guineas and the Derby; that promising youngster, Donovan, $35,170, contributed by wins in the Brocklesby stake at Lincoln and in the rich Portland stake at Leicester; Johnny Morgan won $4,750 in the Leicester Spring handicap, and Deschamps in some minor races added $2,520.

The report that Mr. A. J. Cassatt, who has been in Europe for several months, intends to establish a racing stable on the other side, has created considerable excitement in turf circles in this country. It is probable, however, that he will continue his stable here, and while he attends personally to his English adventure, will leave John Higgins in charge at home. Mr. Cassatt will not abandon American thoroughbreds, but, on the other hand, export a few of them to contest for the Derby and other English turf events.

At Petaluma, July 23, 1888, O. A. Hickok drove Arah and Conde a couple of fast miles at Agricultural Park. The former was driven three heats better than 20, the fastest being 2:17½; Conde in 2:19 and 2:20. Hickok's string left Petaluma July 29th for Los Angeles Fair, August 6 to 11. Hickok has a big blood-bay stallion called Elector, by Electioneer, that will make his class trot during the circuit. He was driven a mile Wednesday morning in 2:26.

Another brood mare, already well known by the performances of her produce, is to become still more famous. The one this time is Lady Fulton, that is the dam of Wizz 1:23½, Buzz 2:28½ and Rufus 2:29; all these being by different sires, and that were also animals of varying blood lines, all of which showed the old mare to be wonderfully prepotent. Her last trotter is a three-year-old bay stallion called Whitecloud. He is by a son of Blackwood, and not long ago showed a mile in 2:25½ over the half-mile track at Adame, N. Y. He will be put in the 2:30 list this season in order to make certain of having a standard record in case an accident should befall him, but it is expected that as a four-year-old he will beat 2:20.

So it is virtually settled upon that the Haggins are going to retire from the turf and will after this season be content to breed thoroughbreds for the market. It is not a surprise to many, as it has been surmised that the Haggins would long fight against the ill-luck which has attended them this season. Still, turfmen without nearly the financial backing of the Haggins have fought the same kind of ill-luck in years past and have overcome it. The trouble with the Haggins was that they went in too deep. From the manner of their operations it was impossible that they could make racing pay, and their losses this season have been frightful.—St. Louis Republic.

The above are the conclusions which certain papers have generally jumped at, but the truth is that Mr. Haggins resolved to give up racing before the bad luck befell his stable. It was found to be wholly at variance with his immense breeding operations, and he preferred to forego participation in turf sports rather than curtail that. This was announced in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN previous to the opening of the eastern racing season, and the information obtained from headquarters.

Domestic's New Hoofs.

J. H. Goldsmith's famous young trotting stallion Domestic, now at the owner's Walnut Grove Farm near Middleton, N. Y., is at present an object of much interest to horsemen, inasmuch as he has just been shod for the first time since the diseased hoofs, which were removed from his fore feet by a surgical operation, were replaced by new grown ones. Domestic, with a record of 2:20 as a six-year-old, was one of the field in a hot trotting contest at the Detroit races in August of last year, which was prolonged through seven close heats. In the course of the struggle the horse took a cold, which developed into laminitis or acute inflammation of the laminae of the fore feet. It was confidently expected up to that time that he would trot at the last October meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association in this city, but, of course, these expectations were not realized. Suppuration afterward set in, and the veterinary surgeon who attended the horse determined to resort to the novel and delicate operation of removing the hoofs by the use of the knife. Usually in cases of the kind the old hoof is permitted to slough off or to be pushed off by the new growth of horn, but this treatment involves danger of deformity, or permanent lameness, or both. The operation was performed, the horse submitting to the process with remarkable docility and patience.

After a time a layer of bright, new horn spread over the exposed laminae, and the horse was able to get on his feet again. In January Domestic was brought from Detroit to his owner's farm, where he has since remained, slowly renewing his shapely hoofs. These look strong and perfect, but the process of shoving developed signs of great tenderness of the feet. Whether the horse will ever be able to reappear in his old form among the champions of the trotting track is an open and interesting question which the course of time will solve.—Ky. Stock Farm.

Domestic is by Volunteer, dam Godiva by Godfrey's Patchen, granddam by Volunteer. His record is 2:20½; he has to his credit forty heats below 2:30.

Mr. John A. Morris will ship eight broodmares to England to be bred to stallions there. He expects to bring their progeny to America as yearlings.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths to their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—Dear Sir: I have just read a paragraph in your paper of June 23, stating there is a dog trainer called Mr. Buckle, who has established himself near Los Angeles, and who claims at one time to have been associated with Capt. McMurdo. Capt. McMurdo requests me to state that I am the only Mr. Buckle whom he has ever been associated with in the dog business, and that neither of us have ever been to California.

Yours truly,
CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., July 20, 1888.

C. E. BUCKLE.

Sales.

Mr. G. W. Bassford has sold lemon and white pointer puppies, whelped May 11, 1888, by Point (Don—Drab)—Blossom (Glen R.—Josie Bow).
To Mr. Sam Merryweather, Santa Barbara, a dog.
To Mr. L. J. Rose, Jr., San Buena Ventura, a dog.
To Mr. Henry Allen, Vacaville, a dog and bitch.
To Mr. Geo. T. Allender, Watsonville, a bitch.
To Mr. A. Lefevre, San Francisco, a bitch.

The Secretary read the minutes of the last special meeting of the club, and the minutes of the last regular meeting of the Executive Committee. On motion the minutes were accepted as read.

Applications for membership were received from the Tennessee Poultry and Pet Stock Association, the Syracuse Kennel Club, the Virginia Field-Sports Association, the Albany Kennel Club, the Washington City Kennel Club, the Southern Field Trial Club and the American Gordon Setter Club. The Secretary stated that applications were all in order and regular, except that of the Tennessee Poultry and Pet Stock Association, which had not sent a copy of its Constitution and By-Laws. This application was laid on the table for action at the next meeting—the secretary in the meantime to write to the Association instructing them to submit a copy of their Constitution and By-Laws.

All the other clubs named were unanimously admitted to membership.

The Secretary read a communication from A. C. Collins, of the Hartford Kennel Club, requesting the disqualification of J. F. Campbell.

Mr. Peshall said: "Mr. President, I make the same objection in this as I do in all these cases—that the club wherein the offense charged occurred shall act upon it, and that it shall be brought before a regular meeting of this club only on appeal."

On motion, Messrs. Winslow and Malcolm were appointed a committee to investigate the charges, and to report at the next meeting.

The Secretary read a communication from August Belmont, Jr., notifying the club that at this meeting he would propose the following change in paragraph 16 of the rules—shall conclude as follows: "If a dog wins a first prize, etc., the dog shall not be transferred to the said champion class, but shall compete in the class in which he was originally entered."

President Belmont then addressed the meeting as follows: Gentlemen: As you will recollect, I stated to you at our last quarterly meeting, when I had the honor of assuming the office of President of the American Kennel Club, that my policy, subject to your approval, would be to develop some plan by which we could join to the club the breeders and exhibitors of the country through an "associate membership." Having now formulated a plan, I beg to present it to you to-day. I concluded that we would be better able to intelligently deal with this subject if I apprised you of its general features by circular letter. This letter was mailed by our secretary to all the delegates of the club, and to the secretaries of our members, outlining the plan, which is as follows:

1st. To form an associate membership of individuals who shall pay annual dues of $5 each. The benefits derived to be two registrations per year and one subscription to the stud book; one subscription to the Kennel Gazette (hereafter mentioned), and admission to all shows held by members of the American Kennel Club upon presentation of the membership ticket.

2d. To publish a monthly Kennel Gazette after the plan of the E. K. C. Gazette, containing signed articles from judges, both in this country and abroad; American Kennel Club proceedings; official awards at shows and field trials; stud book registrations; notices of fixtures; stakes; whelping and stud services, and such other information as will be of general interest in kennel affairs.

I have condensed under the following headings as a basis, if you approve to-day, the skeleton of the constitution, which a committee can be appointed to elaborate:

1. The title shall be "The Associate Members of the American Kennel Club."

2. The officers shall consist of a president, vice president and secretary and treasurer in one office, an Executive Committee of nine, which comprises the president, vice-president and secretary, and six additional members, to be elected annually in two classes to serve two years.

3. The annual meeting shall take place on the first day of July. The election of members to be by the Executive Committee, two black balls excluding. Dues shall be $5 a year.

One of the Executive Committee shall be appointed to act as delegate to the American Kennel Club, the associate members being considered as a body member of the American Kennel Club.

The Executive Committee shall sit on judgment in all cases brought before it by members against other members for irregular practices, such as false registration, substitution in breeding, faking, etc. The punishment for such offenses being prescribed in the constitution, consisting of either suspension for a term or expulsion. Such suspension or expulsion shall be reported by the Delegate to the Secretary of the American Kennel Club, and shall apply without further appeal at all shows held by clubs, members of the American Kennel Club.

The Executive Committee meetings to be monthly; special meetings at the call of the chair or request of a certain number of members, either of the Committee or of the members at large.

The dues shall be collected by the secretary and treasurer, who, at the expiration of every six months, shall turn in to the treasury of the American Kennel Club $2 for each associate member, to be paid to the Stud Book Committee, and $2.50 to the general fund of the American Kennel Club, retaining 50 cents a head to provide for printing, postage, etc. The membership to include the United States and Canada, and without proposal and seconding, if application is made, any member of the English Kennel Club.

The Constitution of the American Kennel Club to be so altered as to admit of the plan proposed and the publication of the Kennel Gazette; Rule No. 2 to be so amended as to make the registration with the secretary for publication in the Kennel Gazette monthly compulsory at 25 cents, and the registration in the Stud Book voluntary.

A communication was read from the Stafford Kennel Club to the effect that the club was no longer in existence.

On motion, The Stafford Kennel Club was dropped from the membership roll.

The Secretary read a communication from the Winsted Kennel Club, stating that they had decided not to qualify as a member of the American Kennel Club, as, in their opinion, their election was irregular.

On motion of Mr. Peshall, who had heard indirectly from the Winsted Club, the communication was laid on the table—no action being taken.

President Belmont then took the floor and said: "I have here some points to suggest merely as a basis for discussion and a committee should be appointed to elaborate it."

Now, with regard to the Kennel Gazette, I have made some inquiries respecting the cost and I feel satisfied that there would be no trouble in arranging for the expenses to be incurred in the publication for the first year, and I am ready to arrange that the Kennel Club shall be held entirely harmless from any possible loss for any number of years that you think necessary to start it. It is for you to decide how much protection you want. I should think five years sufficient, and the amount I have placed at $5,000 a year, simply a nominal figure, because it could never reach that amount. But I am willing to assure you that guarantee so that we will suffer no possible embarrassment so far as the Kennel Club is concerned, and will do so unless otherwise instructed. The experiment must be tried, in that way; and I am assured from various sources that the advertising will be sufficient to cover the expense after a time.

A point for consideration is that some of the papers might think we were intruding on their field of operations. This we can at the outset assure the press will not be the case. The Gazette will only be a monthly; we can almost call it a free publication, depending as it does upon the dues of the members. The papers would scarcely accuse us of trespassing on their ground when it is considered that the proposed Gazette will be simply a compilation of dry bones, consisting of signed articles by judges of shows, and purely an official record of what is going on in the doggy world. We shall withhold no news from the papers, and as a rule, they will anticipate the Gazette. There will be no editorials or comments and its columns will not be open to correspondence of any kind.

Mr. Peshall, referring to the associate membership, said that he should think something of the kind was perhaps necessary, and was a matter that should be thought of. He had no doubt that a great many of the breeders feel that they would like to belong to an organization of the kind proposed; but he did not believe in giving such an organization any jurisdiction except such as is given to any other club. For instance, the disqualification of members should rest entirely with the American Kennel Club as it is at present. As to the proposed publication, he had been opposed to it at first, but the more he thought of it the more he thought such a step would be advantageous. The only opposition that existed; the fear of expense—was now wiped away entirely by the kind and generous offer of the President of the Club. He moved that a committee of three be appointed—the President to be one of the committee—to draft a constitution, and the different amendments that would be necessary to the constitution of the American Kennel Club, and report at the next meeting.

President Belmont then stated that he thought it was about time for the A. K. C. to take up the question of N. D. C. He did not believe that the breeders in general throughout the country knew what the meaning of N. D. C. was. They don't know how it was started, nor do they know the animus that started it. He stated that he personally knew several members of the N. D. C., who had joined it with idea that it was working in harmony with the A. K. C., and he declared that "if we were to protect the breeders we should make them understand the whole case and warn them against falling into the trap." The N. D. C. was not started to work in harmony with us. If they had intended to manage the affairs of the breeders of the country they could have done so by becoming members of the American Kennel Club. But National Dog Club people intend to pass upon dog matters and be the court of final appeal themselves, and do not even ask the endorsement of their actions by the American Kennel Club. Anybody that has been disqualified by the American Kennel Club can go and show at a National Dog Club show as far as any of their rules are concerned. Among the American Racing Associations, if a horse is ruled off one track it is ruled off all. But the National Dog Club seeks no such arrangement. Mr. Robinson, the Secretary of the Buffalo Fair Association, in a letter read at this meeting, shows that he got the National Dog Club to start these rules for the express purpose of giving the National Dog Club a start through the Buffalo Fair Association. Mr. Robinson applied for membership in this association last March in a manner he knew perfectly well was not regular in order to secure a miscarriage of his attempt and have an excuse for inducing his officers to seek the aid of the National Dog Club. Remember whatever we may do will not be approved or presented favorably by the press. It is just as well for us to compel our enemies to openly declare themselves.

Ever since the club has had its official stud book we have enjoyed the enmity of the Forest and Stream, and there is not a thing that the American Kennel Club does which is not belittled and misrepresented. They are trying in every way to create discord, and really attempted, though unsuccessfully, to break up the American Kennel Club. We all remember their editorials at the time of the withdrawal of the N. E. Club, when that was heralded as the first "big gun" and the death knell of the American Kennel Club. In short, we are misrepresented constantly and therefore cannot properly be judged by the breeders who read that paper, as its judgment and feelings are affected by its interest in the American Kennel Register, a purely financial and private enterprise.

On the question of disqualification he asked how is disqualification to be made effective? Supposing a man or dog is disqualified under the National Dog Club rules, what are they going to do if a Show Committee does not observe such disqualification at a subsequent show? How can they punish the committee or Club and by what method does it appear that it is possible to enforce penalties to be universally recognized? Whom are you going to expel or punish? You cannot expel the committee. None of the rulings of the American Kennel Club are recognized by the National Dog Club other than certain show wins. For instance, their champion regulations directly supersede the official standing given a dog. They count a champion prize under American Kennel Club rules as a first open class win and from such ruling, it being necessary to win five firsts under National Dog Club rules to become a champion, a case will arise in which a dog being a champion under American Kennel Club rules, must revert to the open class under National Dog Club rules. In short, they say an American Kennel Club Champion is not a champion at all.

Mr. Peshall then made a few remarks which he closed by making a motion for the appointment of a committee of two by the president who together with the president shall draw a constitution and by laws for the associate membership, and also a committee to confer with the publishers of any private register published in this country, and if deemed advisable to purchase it for the American Kennel Club.

On motion made by Mr. Malcolm, duly seconded, the president appointed the following committee:

Messrs. C. J. Peshall and A. P. Vredenburgh to draft a circular to be sent to all the breeders of the country, setting forth the history of the American Kennel Club, its aims, also its ineffectual attempt to consolidate all existing registers into one stud book and to explain and thoroughly set forth the meaning and animus of its enemies who are working against it through the National Dog Club.

Messrs. Terry & Daniels to report a plan for associate membership and draft a constitution and by-laws for the same, and also a plan for the publication of the Kennel Gazette.

Messrs. Peshall & Ohl to confer with the publishers of any private register with a view to purchase it and report at the next meeting.

The following changes in the constitution were proposed: That an Advisory Committee be appointed to act in the interval between the regular quarterly meetings.

That a committee on Protests and Appeals be appointed. That the Stud Book Committee and the proposed Advisory Committee be included in one committee.

That the secretaries of clubs, members of the A. K. C., be directed to forward to the secretary of the A. K. C. a marked copy of the catalogue of their respective shows.

That if a first prize winner is disqualified, the next dog in order of merit as placed by the Judge shall be considered first, and the win shall count in every respect the same as if it had been the original award. An equal first prize shall be counted as a win for both dogs.

Mr. Peshall in a few well-chosen remarks tendered the thanks of the club to President Belmont for his kind and generous offer with reference to the Kennel Gazette.

There being no further business before the meeting, on motion, adjourned.

A. P. VREDENBURGH, Secretary.

Mr. E. B. Sears, of Melrose, Mass., has recently purchased in England the mastiff bitch Countess Danemre, a prize winner, and the St. Bernard Lady Wellington. The latter is visiting Plinlimmon, and will be brought over in whelp.

Those who were present at High Point in '86 can never forget the winning of the Member's Stake by "Uncle Ned" Dexter, shooting over Gloster, nor how the frosty polled sportsman mysteriously disappeared in the direction of the Bellevue soon after the award. The evening of that day left a hair of Gloster in the fauces of every one, and if memory serves, more hairs were demanded and liberally supplied on the next. There are too few sportsmen like "Uncle Ned." America is too new, and hereditary predispositions with accompanying means too rare to make it possible to designate more than a very few who have given up lives to the enjoyment and development of sportsmanship on its higher planes, as Mr. Dexter has.

American fanciers are negotiating for the rough coated St. Bernard, Plinlimmon; $5,000 being the price set upon him, and also for Duke of Wellington, of the same breed; $4,000 being asked for the latter.

The mail of Monday brought a note from Mr. Edward Dexter, of Boston, Mass., known to sportsmen everywhere as the owner of the Charlottesville Kennel, and breeder of Gloster, the champion field dog of America. The letter is so characteristic that we venture without permission to reproduce part of it. Mr. Dexter says: "I subscribe for papers in this country, Australia and England, but the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is much the most readable. Editor Simpson is always readable on the horse. I own but one horse, and he is a mare, so you see I am interested in all he writes. She can now bring a load of ice from my pond to the house—a good half-mile—within the hour, and my man Josh says she has gained two seconds this summer. I am going to lend her to the butcher, who thinks he can get more out of her. We of our coast and you of yours can never come together in field trials, the birds are so different. The same is true of England and America. I have something good for our trials this year, but as I don't want a gratuitous advertisement, I had better say they are ornary."

TRAP.

"Standard" Tournament for Central California.

In pursuance of the scheme recently projected by the Selby Smelting and Lead Company, and successfully inaugurated at San Diego two weeks ago, a match will be shot at Adam's Point, Oakland, on August 18th next, for a medal worth $100, presented by the company. The conditions are, $10 entrance, open to residents of counties north of San Luis Obispo, Kern and San Bernardino; Chamberlin rules, five traps; winner of medal four times to take all entrance money of first match; none but "Standard" cartridges to be used; at 50 single and 25 pairs of artificial targets.

The California Wing Shooting Club meets at San Bruno to-morrow. Take the 8:30 A. M. train from Fourth and Townsend Streets.

The Humboldt Sportsman's Club held its first meeting on Sunday last, using Blue Rock targets. It was organized in May last, but its growth has been slow. Now that it has begun to hold meetings regularly, we hope it will so interest the sportsmen of Eureka as to enable them to attend more actively to the game and fish interests of their favored section.

This afternoon at Adam's Point, beginning at 1:30 P. M., a team match at 30 single Blue Rocks and 10 pairs will be shot by teams of five men from the Oakland, Lincoln, Blue Rock and Alameda County Sportsmen's Clubs. The prize is a rich silver goblet, known as the "Olba Challenge Cup." The match will be close and exciting, and should attract a general representation of trap shots.

Mr. Al. Donaldson, of Fairfield, has been doing such shooting recently as to entitle him to claim champion form. A few months ago he beat Dr. Carver at the Fairfield tournament, and recently at Colusa he won against a field of experts. Although his experience extends through comparatively few years, his improvement has been uniform, and he can now shoot a long race with as much steadiness and sang froid as any of his seniors. A match between some of the half-dozen first raters and Mr. Donaldson would be well worth seeing.

Killing game, except to be used as food, is a misdemeanor. Having quail, partridge or grouse not showing shot marks is a misdemeanor.

Taking trout except by hook and line is a misdemeanor. Taking shad or salmon between sunrise of each Saturday and noon of following Sunday is a misdemeanor.

Mesher of salmon and shad nets drawn close together must measure 7½ inches longitudinally.

Pound nets, wires, traps, etc., for taking fish are prohibited.

Destructive Salmon Wheels.

Together with the seals, there is a mechanical contrivance found in the waters of the Columbia river that bids fair, aided by its natural destroyer, to make salmon as scarce as strawberries in January. The device is simple enough in appearance and structure, but in operation it is most destructive. It consists of a common undershot wheel, with the buckets turned the wrong way. This is set in a high, narrow flume near the bank of the river where the current is very swift. From the down-stream end of this flume, extended outward, at an angle of forty-five degrees, are two upright fences, formed by pickets driven closely together into the bottom of the river, and wired to keep them from washing away. Just above the wheel (which is some ten feet in diameter), at the up-stream end, is a platform, from which a box-flume runs to the shore.

When the salmon are running they go up the Columbia by millions. While on their journey the fish are constantly on the lookout for a place to spawn, usually preferring small streams. Again, when the current is too swift they swim in towards the shore, in the more quiet water. One of the salmon wheels is placed at a cascade where the water is very swift. The fish, when just below the fence, are attracted by the rushing of the water coming from the rapidly revolving wheel. The upper fence, which sets squarely across the stream, makes a space of quiet water, and the rapid flow seemingly comes from the bank. The salmon, supposing a suitable tributary creek has been reached, crosses between the fences and makes for the wheel. The first fish reaches it, goes in with a rush to overcome the current, is caught by a bucket, and up he goes high in air, while every bucket brings up another till there is a procession of ascending fish. At the top the velocity throws the fish violently upon the platform, from which he shoots down the flume to a great tank on the shore.

One of these wheels will run a cannery, but fortunately there are few places on the river where they can be successfully worked. Men who control advantageous points are making fortunes, and, as a consequence of the heavy draughts, salmon are becoming scarce in the Columbia, and many cannery factories are idle this year. It might be well for the authorities to take this matter in hand, and by proper legislation relegate these wheels as machines of destruction unworthy of longer use.

Two useful hints to worm fishers are given by Mr. E. M. Tod in the current English Fishing Gazette. Mr. Tod, as will be remembered by those who have read his pleasant letters to this paper, is devoted to fly fishing, but at times turns to the bait of his boyhood days. He says: I remember fishing a deep cauld pool (a "weir") and just about fifty to a hundred yards before the pool tumbled over the "cauld" the trout began to rise at a small fly. It was in July and the sun was bright, with a nice gentle breeze blowing up stream, so that by wading in and getting below the fish one could actually see the trout coming up at the fly, and even see them floating (in the clear sunshine) on the alert. Of course I tried the fly first, but finding this of no use, I put on a very fine Stewart tackle (no sinker) and a fine-trawled gut casting line. Now, mark what followed. I saw a trout feeding very steadily at one spot, and my flies had passed by his very nose time after time unheeded. I stood behind him but not altogether, for I liked my line in such a case to float as little as possible over the fish before my worm reaches his keen wary eye. He rose at a fly. In a moment I had made a lough, very light cast, about a foot above him, and a little to my side of the "rise." He had it like a shot, and it was really beautiful to watch his golden side as he turned and seized the dainty morsel.

I killed some beautiful trout before I left that pool, and the men fishing the stream were out of it entirely. They were by this time "fished down" (as it is called in the south of Scotland), and the worm season was coming rapidly to an end, unless a flood came and made a change by putting off clear water worm fishing for some time, and thus giving the streams the rest that they never could have in a river fished daily by all and sundry, such as that stretch of the Teviot to which I allude.

Lastly there is another, and I am informed a very fascinating method of fishing with the worm in clear water, as practised by the late old Dicky Routledge, of Carlisle fame, and described to me by himself and his pupil (Mr. —) when we all three were fishing the Esk for sea trout, years ago. It is, Dicky and his pupil informed me, a very deadly method, in hot weather, both in the Eden and the Eamont. His pupil in particular seemed excessively fascinated by the sport, and as this necessarily can be followed out when the usual stream fishing is over and done with, its value is apparent.

I have tried it but little, and can speak of it only from hearsay; but the method consists of wandering up the thin sides of perfectly still pools, on a baking hot day—say in July or August—stooping when needed, but ever searching with a keen, hawk-like eye ahead, for a trout sailing in the shallows in search of a minnow or a worm, and then with a light hand deftly casting the worm just behind, not in front of, the trout, which can often be seen as clearly as if it was swimming in our Brighton aquarium. This is the odd part of it, that if you cast the worm in front, the fish may become alarmed by the splash. Behind, and without much splash the chance is that in a few moments he will turn to do his "sentry go," and then seeing a real live worm wriggling about on or near the bottom he instantly gulps it down.

In a recent issue, some discursive notes were presented, bearing upon the outfit suitable for the young angler who desired to derive the utmost sport from his fishing excursions and to experience in the highest degree that fine fervor which thrills the sportsman who matches skill refined by constant care, and tackle of the finest, against the strength and cunning of the gamest of fishes, the trout. Since the issue mentioned, several readers have differed with some of the opinions expressed, notably one, whose experience covers streams from Canada to Kern River. He urges with some plausibility, that he who goes angling goes for fish first, and that, in so far as is possible, the tackle recommended to the general should be such as the average man can use with ordinary care, and without danger of loss, either through careless casting or through the rushes of the fish. In reply it might be said that perfection never comes through merely catering to the wishes of those too indifferent to strive constantly for advancement in skill. The virgin trout of untrodden streams may rise at the rude bunches of ill-assorted feathers, but no credit attaches to taking such fish, and except the mere excitement of playing them, they offer little incentive to the angler. They must, perforce, be sought at such distances from home as prohibit the catching of more than enough to supply needs in the way of food, and any one who has been so limited must know that in a wild stream, a few minutes work will feed a dozen people.

As to the sorts of flies to be used, we said that to imitate the indigenous insects exactly was not necessary. It must be admitted that strong opinion tends to the contrary. Thus Harrington Keene, who has fished many waters and is a close observer as well as an accomplished angler and fly-tyer, says in the August Wildwood's Magazine:

"There are people who persist in condemning the 'exact imitation' theory and practice of fly-making as objectionable. A fly-maker of the old school thus writes: 'The exact imitation theory has advanced considerable of late years, and pictures life with such confidence as to suggest a variety of this fly (gut-bodied fly) with the form of six legs, the complement nature allows, and claims it possible for the fish selecting such an imitation precisely as if it were a living fly, another stretch of the imagination. Such a likeness may appear all right when viewed out of the water, none will dispute, but in clear, well-fished waters, from a bird's-eye point of view, it is natural to suppose that such an imitation would be likely to startle and awake suspicion because of the conspicuity of the hook and lifeless form of the body extending over the bend with no elastic fibres of the matchless cock's hackle to cover its nakedness and give a life-like appearance.' Making allowance for the lack of precision in the foregoing passage, it may be said there are several fallacies in it. If the exact imitation is exactly what its name implies, it is hard to find where "the stretch of imagination" comes in, which supposes the fish capable of mistaking it for the real insect. I, by no means, despise the hackle for legs in a fly, because the currents of water setting against the elastic fibres render them tremulous and hence life-like, though be it said the fly intended to be imitated by this movement does not struggle at all. It simply uses its legs to steady itself, and thus steadied floats down until taken in by the fish, or until ready to ascend in the air, mate, lay its eggs, and so fulfill its cycle of existence. It may be granted that the ordinary method of presenting the artificial fly must be reformed to suit the exact imitation; that I do not deny. It has already been reformed in England, where exact imitations are presented up stream and allowed to float down without movement, exactly like the natural insect. If this were tried—as in California, in the neighborhood of San Francisco, it has been tried and successfully—we should hear no more about the fish being suspicious of a lure which to the critical human eye is a perfect imitation of the natural lure."

By coincidence as these lines are written, the mail brings three sample flies from Mr. Keene together with a note saying: "In your issue of July 14th, in the course of kind notice of my article on 'Trout' in 'Wildwood,' you say, 'The best fly tied to form cannot be said after being wet to resemble anything in the insect kingdom.' Herewith I send you three of my 'exact imitations,' and you will find that the water in nowise alters their appearance. The wing material simply softens and becomes tougher though absolutely pliable by immersion. Pray try them dear Editor and see if my experience with these flies cannot find endorsement in yours. I can kill trout on the much fished Eastern streams when others cannot touch a fish, with these identical imitations—and after all to make a vile pun—experience, does it, eh?"

The flies sent are well tied, gut bodied, scale winged imitations of one of the yellow Ephemeræ, snelled on fairly light gut, the hook being of the "Sproat" pattern, and about 12 in size. That they are good imitations cannot be denied, and the remark of the maker about the preservation of form after immersion is well within bounds, but it may be admitted that the gut flies do not cast so lightly, nor do they, in our experience raise so many fish as those dressed in feathers, while, also in the experience of several, they wash out and become practically colorless. It has never been our privilege to use flies of Mr. Keene's tying, and until we can try those just received judgment must be withheld, but in a general way the opinion is held that lightly tied feathers are more killing, and it is almost impossible to prepare really good imitations of form in the latter material.

As an exponent of the "exact imitation" theory, it is only fair to quote Mr. Keene's own words when he says:

"There will always be flies of no definite imitation and yet killers. Such are the Coachman, the Professor and the Grizzly King. These are valuable because there are no substitutes as such, based on a rational plan of manufacture. If the Professor does not 'take' one may try a Coachman or Grizzly King (et hoc genus) and so go on empirically to find out what will 'take.' The intelligent angler, however, (and the advanced 'exact imitator' would do this) picks a dun or spinner with his landing-net from the water, sits down and imitates it, and thereafter kills fish. If he does not, he varies the shades and size of his flies, not the colors and forms in a haphazard way.

Herein surely, he behaves as a rational being, acting from what premises his observation has afforded him. And to sum up the whole thing: all I seek to promulgate in the exact imitation theory is an application of the rules of common sense. If you fish with an imitation, let your imitation be uncompromisingly exact. Don't be satisfied with less because some ignorant fly-maker can't make an exact imitation, and if the old style of presenting the lure does not do justice to the similitude, the reform the presenting—oh, reform it altogether," to quote Hamlet's advice to the players, and bring about a really scientific method worthy of the gentle craft in the nineteenth century."

As to other angling suggestions offered through this paper, it may be said that they are the outcome of experience, not alone of a single writer, but of a score or more of persistent anglers whose methods and materiele are familiar, and of whom it may properly be said that on the stream or lake they have no superiors either in manipulation of tackle or in the success which uniformly attends their efforts. Nothing is more difficult than to make close comparisons between anglers. Methods so diverse as to make it seem impossible that success should reward them all are yet rewarded. There are those who fish down stream with short lines, and do about as well as those who always cast forty or fifty feet. Among the up-stream men, a tribe that increases in geometrical ratio, there is greater likeness in procedure, but even at that style, each has little peculiarities which he considers essential, but which his brethren deem wholly useless.

One friend writes to learn why mention of reels was omitted in the discussion of tackle. An answer is, that the reel is the only non-essential item of the outfit. Made in a hundred forms, any one of which can be used to advantage, the choice of reel may be left to almost unguided fancy. There are zealous advocates of multipliers, and good reasons can be given for their use. Plain click reels are as warmly urged by others, and their use as cogently supported. Absolutely plain reels meet the needs of still others, and have no doubt excellences. If an expression of personal preference can be of use, it is freely said that our own favorite reel, to be used with rods under eight ounces in weight, is one formed of aluminium, with steel bearings, raised pillars, narrow barrel and flush handle, to carry seventy-five yards of G line. It has a light click which responds to any trout heavier than four ounces, and is yet stiff enough to prevent over-running and consequent fouling of the line. Such a reel we had made several years ago—the first of the sort that had been manufactured. It has stood rather hard usage since without giving way at any point, and is to-day really a smoother instrument and in better condition than when new. Trials of it by others resulted in receipt of many orders by the maker, and not less than six dozens are in the hands of local experts, from whom we have yet to hear a complaint. An aluminium reel of the style mentioned, full of waterproofed silk line, weighs less than four ounces, and just balances a seven-ounce split rod. Of the reel it may be said that one costing very little is worth very little. An expenditure of fifteen or twenty dollars is not too much for one of any good sort, and with such an one the angler may safely go into the mountains without one in reserve. The original pattern was closely followed in the first orders, but recently the barrel has been widened to carry more line, a departure which cannot be recommended. Seventy five yards is really more than enough for all possible contingencies, and to carry more is merely to expose valuable line to danger of rotting on the reel.

Manzanita.

Indirectly we learn that Manzanita has broken down, the mishap occurring after her arrival in Los Angeles. Like other rumors, which have proved erroneous, this may be without foundation, though there are grounds for credence. Should it be true, there will be a great gap in the free-for-all races all through the circuit, though some are inclined to the belief that more interest will be felt with the champion of the four-year-olds out of the way. That may be the way speculators regard it, but the great mass of those who attend the fairs would be better pleased to see the animal trot, which trotted in 2:16 when four years old.

Montana and Washington Racing Circuit.

The opening day of the Deer Lodge Meeting having been postponed until August 15th, the closing of entries to the above circuit has also been postponed until August 4th. Although the meetings of this circuit are held while our most important fairs are in progress, it may be that some owners would like to take a trip to the north, and certainly there are strong inducements offered.

Los Angeles Entries.

Elsewhere will be found a full list of the entries for the Los Angeles Fair, and while we would have been better pleased with a longer array of horses from this section there are enough to give promise of capital sport.

The racing events have filled so well that there is more than a promise of exciting contests, that being so nearly assured that it may be taken for granted. While the harness division is not so strong in numbers, an analysis will prove that there is no lack of quality, and that even in the races where the fewest entries appear it will be worth a journey from San Francisco to be a spectator. For instance, in the free for all are named, Stamboul, Arab and Manzanita. Their records run 2:17 1/2, 2:16 1/2, 2:16 so that taking previous performances for a guide it will be somewhat difficult to choose a favorite, or rather, eliminating favoritism, which will be the safest to "carry the money." But favorable as the showing is for a grand race in the free for all there are others which will be watched with fully as much interest. There is the 2:45 with Albion, Pink, Dick Richmond, Aldeana and Maggie E. Albion is one of Palo Alto breeding, though now owned by Chino Raucha. Pink is spoken well of, Dick Richmond is a son of our old favorite, Aldeana is another of the "half-and-half" tribe from the banks of the San Francisco which is stirring the trotting world, and we know that the daughter of Nutwood has claims which will enforce consideration.

There is a peculiarity in the two-year-old which is novel in California, the home-bred colts Monteith and Direct have a competitor in Gossiper foaled in Massachusetts, and by the noted Kentucky sire Simmons. The 2:30 has Don Tomas, Elector, Franklin and Express. The Don is unknown to us, but if he can get to the winning score before the others named he will require no further certificate of merit. Elector is very fast, Franklin is fast, game, and reliable, and Express is likely to be troublesome before the race is marked. The "district" three minute has six entries, two of them bred at Palo Alto, but the 2:20 and the 2:23 bring together contestants which can be safely marked for two grand exhibitions of trotting speed. In the 2:23 are Alcazar, Valentine, Gertrude Russell, Maid of Oaks and Alfred S.

All are so well known to the patrons of trotting on the Pacific Coast that comments may be regarded as superfluous, and yet we will venture to say that if their claims were argued in a promiscuous crowd of trotting experts, there would be a diversity of opinions which a listener would be troubled to reconcile. Alcazar has a record of 2:23 made when a three-year-old, Valentine a mark of 2:22 1/2, Gertrude Russell scored 2:23 1/2 in the only race she ever started in, Maid of Oaks has 2:23 against her name in Wallace's Year Book, and from the same authority we learn that Alfred S. has scored 2:22 1/2, won five races "right off the reel," his only defeat when he had to be drawn, being so sick that his life was endangered. With 2:22 1/2 for the inside mark and 2:23 1/2 for the outer it would puzzle the speculator who depends entirely on public performances to make his investments. The 2:20 has Valentine, Maid of Oaks and Alfred S., and to take the place of Alcazar and Gertrude Russell, are Hinda Rose and Conde. This virtually leaves the interest unabated, although it brings a higher rate of recorded speed into the calculation. Conde has an even mark of 2:20, Hinda Rose half a second below. This will be her first appearance since her last Eastern trip, and now that her "full" brother Bell Boy has been sold for more money than was ever paid for a trotter prior to his sale, her re-debut will be eagerly looked for all over the country. Conde has been showing exceedingly well, the best proof of the reports being correct the fact that he was sold a short time ago for more than twice the sum he realized at the auction sale.

The 2:25 has Jim Blaine, Azmoor, Express, Longfellow and Maggie E. Blaine trotted some good races, getting a record of 2:26 1/2. Azmoor gets into the 2:25 by the aid of the rule which ignores fractions of seconds when eligibility is at stake, Express is his stable companion so that Marvin has two chances. Longfellow under the rule which favors Azmoor has a tight squeak, inasmuch as 2:24 1/2 is his record. By the way Azmoor, Express and Longfellow are all from thoroughbred mares, the last named being from Revere by imported Glencoe. Maggie E. is without a mark, but, as has been stated before, is very liable to get one during this meeting.

By referring to the list it will be seen that were the running races and the colt stakes closed some time ago taken up for a full exposition, a great deal of space would be required. Such a course is not necessary as there are few, indeed, who are not aware from a mere perusal of the names, that the "legitimate" will be a feature of the fair. Who, that can possibly get away, will stay at home? The trip itself is a reimbursement. A week in the City of Angels would tempt an anchorite, a series of races such as the entries fo shadow fills the bill, runs the blood over, intensifies the enjoyment. What more can be asked?

Grover Cleveland.

There is no doubt of the President being in good health, and having thoroughly enjoyed his late fishing excursion, though up to the time of writing we are somewhat in doubt in relation to the reported killing of the horse Cleveland. The following, cut from the N. Y. World, would appear to place it beyond question, but as the other New York dailies received do not corroborate the statement, there are still hopes. The World is in error regarding the ownership, as J. W. Lundy, of San Francisco, has the title, and has had ever since he was purchased at Palo Alto.

The Californians at Monmouth Park are in hard luck. Monday Mr. Porter Ashe lost Triboulet from lockjaw, and yesterday Matt Storn had to stand by and see his pet horse, Grover Cleveland, shot. It was the verdict of Dr. Shepherd. The loss is a serious one to Mr. Storn, for the horse was just running into form, and it was the general remark as he passed the stand on his way to the post that at no time since his arrival from California had he looked so well. He certainly looked the winner, but a compound fracture of the right pastern joint stopped him in the race, and a friendly bullet ended his career an hour after. Cleveland, like Triboulet, was brought on specially from California to run for the Brooklyn and Suburban Handicaps. He did badly, and it was not until he had run in thirteen races without winning, that he achieved victory. It was the mile and a furlong handicap run at Monmouth in the heavy storm last Thursday. It was his first victory in 1888. He won a number of races in California last year, a majority of them in fast time.

CLEVELAND'S LAST RACE.

Fourth Race—Handicap sweepstakes, for all ages, at $30 each, with $1,000 added, of which $250 to the second; 11 entries. Mile and a furlong.

D. T. Pulsifer's ch c Rapine, 3, by Rapture, dam Engeline, 109.
W. C. Daly's b h The Bourbon, 5, 99.....Goodall 1
W. B. Jennings's gr h Boaz, 5, 109.....Palmer 2
Aretino (G. Covington) 98 1/2, Prodigal (O'Brien) 91, Connemara (F. Littlefield) 104, Fitzroy (Shaner) 113, Little Jim (Anderson) 99, Locust (Armstrong) 101 1/2, and Grover Cleveland (W. Donohue) 108 lbs., also ran. Time, 1:56 1/2.

Betting: 9 to 5 against Fitzroy; 7 to 2 Connemara; 7 to 1 Boaz; 8 to 1 Grover Cleveland; 10 to 1 Rapine; 12 to 1 each The Bourbon, Prodigal and Aretino; 15 to 1 Little Jim, and 20 to 1 Locust.

The Race—With the flag Fitzroy and Grover Cleveland came away like quarter-horses, and at the end of the odd furlong they were running neck-and-neck three lengths in front of Prodigal and Rapine, who led the others. There was no change in the run round the turn to the quarter or half, other than that Grover Cleveland was leading Fitzroy half a length, with Prodigal leading the others three lengths away. At the five-furlong post, just back of the Oceanport depot, Grover Cleveland was still leading, half a length, when he suddenly stopped, as did Fitzroy, the pair being passed by Rapine, Prodigal and Boaz. The three as named reached the three-quarters on nearly even terms, followed by Fitzroy and the others. It was a close race up the stretch, with Boaz and Rapine on equal terms at the beginning of the last furlong, after which Rapine came away, winning by two lengths, with The Bourbon, who got up in the last strides, second, a short head in front of Boaz, with Aretino and Prodigal close up, followed by Connemara, Fitzroy, Little Jim and Locust as named. Time, 1:56 1/2. After the race it was learned that Grover Cleveland had broken his right front pastern, Billy Donohue, who rode the horse, saying that it took place soon after the horse had passed the half mile post, and that he struggled on a full furlong before he really gave way. The fracture was bandaged the best way possible, and the horse was got off the track on three legs. When Dr. Shepherd was called, he said the injury was fatal, and soon after the crowd left the track Grover Cleveland was shot. Place betting, 3 to 1 against Rapine and 5 to 1 The Bourbon.

"Welcome Assistance."

When under the above heading the announcement was made that Miss A. L. Wilson had become our assistant and general manager of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, we did not look for so general an interest as has evidently been awakened. Few of our exchanges have failed to notice, and, as will be seen by those copied, with encouraging remarks. That outside of our exchanges the press of the country has favorably commented upon the acceptance of the position by Miss Wilson, is evident from many letters received, in which the writers gave as the source of their information journals which are not on our X list. Although we did not think of it in that light when the announcement was written, the fact of its being a step outside of "established custom" had something to do with the nearly universal recognition. While it is, in all probability, the first instance of a woman filling the position now occupied by Miss Wilson, it is not the first on record where the horse and kindred subjects have been treated by women, and so well handled, too, that few of the male writers who have acquired celebrity in that field of journalism could equal. A great deal of balderdash has been talked, written and printed about the proper sphere of woman. As a rule, whatever is proper for man to do, if it comes within her physical powers, and is not repugnant to her more refined nature, should not be placed beyond her reach. Taking the business management and assisting in the editorial work of such a paper as the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is certainly appropriate labor when the woman on whom it devolves is fitted for the position. There is not the slightest danger of being brought in contact with anything which would offend the gentlest of feminine characteristics, or which in any degree runs counter to propriety. There is not a paper which is worthy of the name of turf journal which is not far more particular what appears in its columns than are the leading papers of the country.

To those who read the leading turf journals of the country it is a waste of words to mention their standing, but people who know little or nothing about them are apt to associate a "horse paper" with an inferior sort of journalism, coarse if not positively vulgar. When there was only one journal of the class in the United States, viz: the old Spirit of the Times, there was not a paper or magazine that had a higher standing. Its correspondents were men of high social position, many of which were men of mark outside of what wealth and culture gave them. There were papers then, as there are now, which mixed the sports of the turf with the prize ring, the cockpit and other disreputable amusements, but these were never recognized by men who were engaged in breeding horses for the turf and track. In this connection we prefer to say man and woman in preference to gentleman and lady. Manly attributes are more praiseworthy characteristics than the gloss of gentility; womanly traits are more to be admired than all the polish which high society can give. Not that there is incompatibility, for, as a rule, the most ladylike are those which can be classed as true women. Having the capacity to successfully manage the business of a paper with a circulation extending into foreign countries, as well as a home territory extending over thousands of miles, is not unwomanly; the possession of acquirements resulting from education, joined to natural ability, which render the possessor competent to take the editorial control of a paper of this character is as worthy of commendation in a woman as it would be in a man.

More so, a greater degree of moral courage to break away from the trammels of custom, sterner determination to accept a post where adverse criticism is sure to be encountered is required. At this day when the women of our country are compelling attention to their fitness for various pursuits which were held to be the inherent right of men, the resolve of Miss Wilson to accept the position she now occupies is of great significance, and every well wisher of the sex must render her the praise, she so fully merits. Another potent example, still more proof to add to the volume of evidence that woman are capable of taking care of themselves, and that the thralldom of centuries has to give way in the progress of the whole of humankind.

Even in so short a time as Miss Wilson has had to master the routine of the office, the business is in a better shape than ever before. We have not the least hesitation in promising that hereafter there will be little cause for complaints which were justified by previous shortcomings, and that the business will be conducted in a satisfactory manner.

The following are some of the "press notices" received.

"Welcome Assistance."

Under the above caption the California BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of June 30th, announces that the services of Miss A. L. Wilson, of Cynthiana, Ky., have been secured as general manager and assistant editor. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is owned and edited by Mr. Joseph Cairn Simpson, the most graceful and accomplished writer on matters pertaining to the horse and turf in this or any country, and in securing the services of Miss Wilson he demonstrates a sound judgment regarding people as well as horses.

Miss Wilson is the daughter of W. H. Wilson, whose name is as familiar as household words all over the land, and it is not strange that she inherited an extraordinary love for fine and fast horses. Liberally educated, instead of wasting her time with novels and trashy literature of the day, her natural taste led to storing her mind with a knowledge of the history, form, genealogy and most successful blood-lines of the trotting horse. For several years she has conducted the extensive in-door business of her father, keeping books, answering correspondents, tabulating pedigrees and compiling his catalogues. All who have had business with Abdallah Park will add their testimony that she has abundant capacity to successfully fill her new position on the Pacific Coast. And though this is the first instance on record of a lady filling such a position on a paper mainly devoted to breeding, rearing and developing fine and fast horses, we believe we can truthfully say it is also the first instance on record of a lady wholly competent to honor the position.

We have enjoyed the acquaintance of Miss Wilson for several years, and during frequent visits to Kentucky have universally heard most complimentary expressions from those who have known her from childhood. She is a prominent member of the Episcopal church, a favorite in society, and no young lady ever left Cynthiana whose absence is more keenly felt by the entire community. — Western Sportsman, Indianapolis, Ind.

The general manager of the San Francisco BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is Miss A. L. Wilson, of Cynthiana, Ky. She is reputed to be one of the best informed women in America on pedigrees and the history of trotting horses. Very few men, indeed, are so well posted on turf matters, and she is besides an able and graceful writer. — N. Y. World, July 20th.

Miss A. L. Wilson, general manager of the San Francisco BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, is one of the best informed persons in this country on the pedigrees and history of trotting horses. She is also an able writer on turf matters generally. The sex seem to be making "good time" in all directions. — N. Y. World, July 22d.

We congratulate the renowned editor and sportsman, Mr. Joseph Cairn Simpson, proprietor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, San Francisco, California, upon having secured the services of a handsome Kentucky girl, and one so entirely competent and efficient as Miss Wilson, for business manager and assistant editor, for we know she has not only had the very best opportunities, but that she diligently improved those opportunities by becoming accurately posted in pedigrees, and that she is thoroughly accomplished for editorial work by her scholastic education and experience as a writer and bookkeeper for her father, Mr. W. H. Wilson, Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., and we also congratulate Miss Wilson on securing the situation we believe will be congenial to her tastes. — Kentucky Stock Farm, Lexington, Ky.

Miss Annie Laurie Wilson is the first lady to accept a situation of any kind upon a sporting journal, she having recently connected herself with the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, of San Francisco, as general manager and assistant editor. Miss Wilson is a daughter of W. H. Wilson, proprietor of Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., the home of Simmons & Wilkes Brino, and is well posted in the history of the trotting horse. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is one of the best papers on our exchange list—one we never fail to read, and now that Mr. Simpson is to be so ably assisted, marked improvements may be expected. — Reins and Whip, Philadelphia, Pa.

While attending the races last October at Lexington, Ky., I took occasion to visit Abdallah Park, the home of Mr. W. H. Wilson at Cynthiana. While there I had the pleasure of meeting my host's daughter, Miss A. L. Wilson, and found her not only a very entertaining lady but a thorough horsewoman. I am now pleased to learn that she has found a broader field of work than that opened to her at her father's house. — ALBEMARLE in N. Y. Sportsman.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, published in San Francisco, has taken a new departure for horse journals. It has engaged the services of a woman as general manager and assistant editor, in the person of Miss A. L. Wilson, daughter of W. H. Wilson, of Cynthiana, Ky. Miss Wilson has had an experience of several years in all pertaining to the trotting horse, having conducted the indoor business of her father at Abdallah Park. — Mirror and Farm, Manchester, N. H.

Annie Laurie Wilson has become general manager and assistant editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of San Francisco. Though quite young Miss Wilson brings to the journalistic position a ripe knowledge of the trotting horse, his history, performance and breeding. She is a daughter of W. H. Wilson, proprietor of Abdallah Park, at Cynthiana, Ky., the home of Simmons and Wilkes Brino. She refused a handsome offer from a seminary in Iowa, to accept the place. — Springfield Sunday Republican.

Miss Annie Laurie Wilson has accepted a position as general manager and assistant editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of San Francisco, and we take pleasure in congratulating Editor Simpson upon the capture of so able an ally. Although quite a young lady, Miss Wilson brings to the journalistic position a ripe knowledge of the trotting horse, his history, performance and breeding. She is a daughter of Mr. W. H. Wilson, the well known proprietor of Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., the home of Simmons and Wilkes Brino. The young lady brings to the post a high degree of culture, for to accept it she refused a handsome offer from a seminary in Iowa which desired her services. This is another step toward the independence of women. Into almost every field she has pushed, and her efforts have invariably been successful. We have every confidence in Miss Wilson's success, a success which cannot fail to enlist the sympathy of her sex in outdoor sports. — N. Y. Spirit of the Times, July 14th.

We are pleased to welcome to the editorial ranks of journalism, Miss A. L. Wilson, daughter of W. H. Wilson, of Cynthiana, Ky. Miss Wilson has been assigned the position of business manager and assistant editor of the California BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. That Miss Wilson will fill those positions creditably we do not question, knowing as we do her labors at and untiring devotion to the Abdallah Park breeding stud. Miss Wilson is fitted for such a position both by reason of her education, industry and courage. — Danton's Spirit of the Turf, Chicago, Ill.

Miss Annie Wilson, the highly accomplished daughter of Mr. W. H. Wilson, proprietor of Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Kentucky, the home of Wilkes Brino and Simmons, refused a lucrative position in an Iowa seminary, and accepted a position as general manager and assistant editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of San Francisco, bringing to this responsible post, although yet quite young, a ripe knowledge of the trotting horse, his history, performance and breeding. — Agriculturalist, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia.

Firenzi's Victory.

Pleasant it is to record the victory of the Rancho del Paso stable over The Bard in the Freehold Stakes. The following is the telegraphic account, and from that it will be seen that fast as the time was it seems to have been bandily won by the great filly. We trust that the bad luck of the stable has now come to an end, and that the other members of the string will emulate the example.

MONMOUTH PARK, Aug. 2.—It was a gala day for California here to-day, Haggin's Firenzi having defeated the king of the racing turf in a race of a mile and a half. It was a grand race throughout, and was run in the best time ever made at the distance, 2:34, which was Luke Blackburn's record made over the track in 1880, and Jim Guest's at Washington Park in 1886. The betting was 2 to 5 against The Bard and 2 to 1 against Firenzi, and Appleby and Johnson lost over $15,000 on The Bard.

Ben Ali Haggin is reported to have won $25,000, and cabled the result to his father in Paris. The Bard made the running two lengths ahead of Firenzi for a full mile and a quarter. On entering the homestretch the filly closed on The Bard, had him in distress at the eighth pole, was on even terms at the sixteenth, nearer the end, and then coming away strong won by two lengths.

Firenzi finished without any sign of distress. Fractional time: Quarter 27, half 52, three-quarters 1:18, mile 1:42½, mile and a quarter 2:08½, mile and a half 2:34.

Send the Entries.

The secretaries of the association will be remiss in their duties if they fail to send copies of the entry lists as soon as it is possible for them to do so. This is especially necessary with the fairs which are held at the earliest dates. We desire to notice them fully, "but cannot do so without knowing what the entries are."

Sale of Bell Boy.

Fifty thousand dollars is an immense sum to pay for any horse. That amount obtained for a three year-old trotter at public auction is so far in advance of all previous prices that it has raised a whirl of excitement all over the country. That it was a sale in good faith is as well assured as anything of that character can be. So much advertising was done that, added to other expenses, the outlay, apart from commission to auctioneers, must have been fully one thousand dollars. Then, too, the evidence that Bell Boy's "book" for 1889 was full at $500 was straight, and here was something tangible to build upon. There were so many eastern applications for the services of the sire of Bell Boy, Electioneer, at $1,000, that it is beyond doubt that had he been sent East last spring, a greater sum than $50,000 would have been obtained for his services this season.

Ten thousand dollars more than the highest price ever paid for a trotter is startling, but that there is a better chance for the investment to prove remunerative than was the case in any of the high-priced trotters which approached that sum, is too plain to require argument. The sale adds to the value of all of the near relations of Bell Boy. Both sides of the house are benefited, and incidentally California trotters appreciated far beyond the amount paid for this one son of the Golden West.

Lists of Mares.

The lists of mares bred to any of the prominent California stallions will be published without charge if sent soon. Those which have made seasons and are engaged in the Grand or National Stakes will be peculiarly acceptable, as the mooted question whether service impairs the trotting powers, is one of great interest. Director has probably made the heaviest season, and from what we hear, Woodnut has about the same number as Antevolo. When the list of the latter was published last week we supposed that he was through, but a mare owned at North San Juan came in again, and she was served August 1st. As Stamboul is named to trot at the Los Angeles Fair next week, it is probable that his season came to an end some time ago.

We are informed that Woodnut was in the same fix as Antevolo, a mare belonging to Henry Pierce having "broken," when Mr. Holly gave them permission to return her on day this week. It is very little trouble to copy the books, and when that is the only expense, the motive for non-compliance is not readily understood.

Sale of Colton.

Some weeks ago Henry Pierce of San Francisco, purchased of A. J. Green the brown yearling colt, Colton, by Antevolo, from Contra by Electioneer, granddam by Billy Cheatham. The price paid was $1,000, and as Colton is named in the Stanford and Occident Stakes of 1890, his double strains of Electioneer should make him well worth the money. A catalogue of Ash Grove Stock Farm received a few days ago, drew our attention to Colton. In that Mr. Simmons says: "First on the list is Eagle Bird, four-year-old record 2:21. He is closely inbred, being by a son of George Wilkes out of a daughter of George Wilkes, and the inbreeding don't seem to hurt him much. I believe in inbreeding to a certain degree, and a pretty close degree at that, to a great individual. I would like to own a son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, out of Rosa Wilkes, 2:18½; or a son of Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Manzanita, 2:16; or a son of Piedmont, 2:17½, out of Fanny Witherspoon, 2:15½."

Golden Gate Fair.

The changes made in the programme of the Golden Gate Fair which have been made since the first publication are of great importance, and as it now stands it is complete. That it has received merited support from the owners of horses is beyond reasonable doubt, and when these are published there will be promise of one of the greatest exhibitions of the circuit.

Premature.

Our intention was to withhold the picture of Marion until her son, the Emperor, had closed his season of 1888, when a list of his contests could be appended. When the intelligence came that he was hopelessly broken down there was no further occasion for delay. Now we are well pleased to learn that he is again galloping with a good prospect that his retirement will be short. That being the case, the picture of his sire will be held back, when the whole history will be given.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the first day of August, 1888. Entries for the purse must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by consent of the Judges.

All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race.

Entries to all trotting races will close August 20, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association Rules to govern running races, except as above.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walkover shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66 2/3 to the first and 33 1/3 to the second.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walkover.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors which must be named in their entries.

Each day's races will commence promptly at one o'clock p. m.

All entries must be directed to

In all trotting and pacing races, three moneys, viz., 60, 30 and 10 per cent, except Trotting Stake Races, Nos. 5 and 9, in which money to be divided, and races trotted according to published conditions.

All races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

American Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

In all races, entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any district race that has not been owned in the district six months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the American Association and rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association, and expulsion from this Association.

If, in the opinion of the judges, any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the fair, it may be continued or declared off, at the option of the judges.

In all races noted above, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start.

The Petaluma track is one of the fastest and safest in the world.

Trotting and running colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp.

Stables bay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

FALL MEETING OF THE OVERLAND PARK CLUB,

DENVER, COLO., October 20th to 27th, 1888.

The OVERLAND PARK CLUB announces that its Fall Meeting for 1888 will be held on the dates above mentioned, and that Purses and Added Money will be offered amounting to over $10,000. The programme will include Running, Trotting and Pacing Races, but the meeting will not be what is commonly known as a mixed meeting. The Running Races will be on different days from those devoted to Trotting and Pacing, and on a separate mile track expressly and exclusively made for Running Horses and Races, equally as good, conspicuous and desirable as the Trotting Track.

ENTRIES FOR THE FOLLOWING STAKES AND PURSES WILL CLOSE ON WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1888.

RACING STAKES.

1. The Silver Stakes.—Sweepstakes for Two-year-olds (foals of 1886); $100 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $15 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winners of any stake race to carry three pounds extra; if of the value of $3,000 or more, 7 pounds extra. Maidens allowed 5 pounds. Three-quarters of a mile.
2. The Mirage Handicap.—Handicap sweepstakes for two-year-olds (foals of 1886); $100 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $15 additional from those who accept the weights; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Weights to be announced at 1 p. m. the first day of the meeting. Acceptances to be made through the entry box, at the usual time of closing, the day before the race. The winner of the Silver Stakes to carry five pounds in addition to weight assigned. Seven furlongs.
3. The Colorado St. Leger.—Sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1885); $100 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any stake or purse of the value of $1,500 or more, in 1888, to carry five pounds extra. Horses that have started and not won in 1888 allowed five pounds; maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile and a quarter.
4. The South Park Stakes.—Sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1885); $100 entrance, to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any race in 1888 of the value of $100 to the third. Winner of any race in 1888 of the value of $100 to the third.

value of $750 or more to carry three pounds extra; of two such races, five pounds extra; of three or more seven pounds extra. Maidens allowed five pounds. One mile and a furlong.

5. The Denver Cup.—Sweepstakes for all ages; $100 entrance to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start, with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Winner of any stake race in 1888 of the value of $1,000 or more to carry five pounds extra; of two or more such races, seven pounds extra. Non-winners in 1888 allowed three pounds; maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile and a half.

6. The Rocky Mountain Handicap.—Handicap sweepstakes for all ages; $100 entrance to accompany the nomination; $20 additional to start; with $500 added by the Club, of which $100 to the second horse, $50 to the third. Weights to appear at 1 o'clock p. m. the first day of the meeting; acceptances to be made through the entry box at the usual time of closing the day before the race. Winner of a race after the publication of weights, to carry three pounds additional; of two or more races, five pounds additional. One mile and a quarter.

The running races will take place on Saturday, October 20th, Wednesday, October 24th, and Friday, October 26th. Two stakes and three purse races each day, with an extra day on Monday, October 23rd, should it be deemed desirable. The total amount of running stakes and purses offered on the three regular days will not be less than $5,000. All Running Races governed by the American Racing Rules in force at the date of the meeting (except in regard to trainers and jockey's licenses.)

Ed Corrigan Assaults a Horseman for Protesting.

Chicago, Ill., July 24.—Ed Corrigan, the Kansas City horseman, to-day introduced into his management of the West Side race track, tactics which have made him very notorious in the Missouri city. He took a fancied offense at a protest made by Samuel Lavis, and raising a loaded cane, brought it with full force upon the head of the latter cutting through a stiff hat and laying the skull bare. Lavis fell as though he were shot, the blood streaming over his face and clothes. A crowd immediately formed which proposed summary vengeance for the act of Mr. Corrigan, and if it had not been for a number of the horsemen's friends, who hurried him from the scene, he would have been roughly handled.

Since the races have been opened Corrigan has been the fear of all who were brought in contact with him. A few days ago he struck a track employe, fracturing his jaw; he has had innumerable encounters with newspaper reporters with whose accounts of the races he had become displeased, and only yesterday threatened to break the head of one of them. Much complaint has been heard daily concerning a new starter, who is a friend of Corrigan's and whom he is teaching the art of getting the horses off. It is claimed that the starting became worse and worse, and that hardly a race was run without one or more horses being left at the post. To-day in one of the events Rambler, who was a hot favorite, was left at the post. Lavis, with a number of others, proceeded to the judges' stand to protest. The judges ordered him from the stand, when several voices cried: "Get some new judges" and "give us a new starter."

Just then Corrigan, who had seen Lavis addressing the judges, came upon the scene. Without any warning the blow fell upon Lavis' head, knocking him senseless. He was taken care of at the track until he could be removed to his residence on West Madison street, where he was lying in an insensible condition at a late hour to-night. When Capt. Aldrich of the district in which the track is located, heard of the man's condition he swore out a warrant for Corrigan's arrest. At midnight there were eight detectives after him, but were unable to locate him. It is supposed that he was hurried out of town on some evening train. The local papers will unite in condemning Corrigan's action in running race-tracks.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 25.—Edward Corrigan, the noted horseman, was arrested this morning for slugging a spectator yesterday at the West Side driving park with a loaded cane. Corrigan is proprietor of the track, and the assault was committed because the victim was protesting against a doubtful ruling in one of races by the judges. A number of detectives were searching for Corrigan all night, but he kept out of the way until to-day. It was ascertained this morning that the life of the man injured was not in danger. Corrigan promptly gave bail in $800. The bondsman was William A. Pinkerton.—St. Louis Republic.

Big Winnings on the Turf.

Mike Dwyer has placed himself forward in the ranks of men who bet money. He has blossomed out as the great American plunger. Time was when he was content to back the horses only in the Dwyer stable. Now that his own horses do not seem able to run and win with any degree of regularity, Mike has taken to plunging on horses owned by others. I am credibly informed that he won $38,000 on the 4th of July, $27,000 on the 5th and $49,000 on Saturday, the 7th. Dwyer is a man who can win money and not lose his head. He is as unassuming as a day laborer, and while he sometimes declines to give information about his horses, he never, when he does give information, tells a falsehood with the view of deceiving the public and getting a better market for his money.—From the Pittsburgh Post.

Usually if the Dwyer Brothers are spoken about, "Phil" is the one mentioned, though from the above it will appear that the quiet member of the firm has the tact to place his wagers judiciously. In a year like this when the stable is in a bad run the winning of $114,000 in these days will fill some of the leaks. But it is well to bear in mind that the bright light is always visible, the half and full shadows not so conspicuous. The victory of Kingston over Terra Cotta and Elkwood in the Excelsior Stakes last Tuesday, in all probability put another large sum to the credit of "Mike."

Another Highly-Bred Pacer.

When General R. L. Howard, of this city, purchased the chestnut mare Laura Bassett from Captain Barney J. Treacy, of Lexington, Ky., that veteran horseman predicted that she would prove to be the most valuable matron at the Howard Stock Farm, in this city.

Laura Bassett is royally bred, being by Balsora 1024, sire of Kentuckian 2:27 1/2, dam by Norton son of Lexington, second and third dams thoroughbred. In 1881 she foaled the chestnut colt Balsora Wilkes, by Wilkie Collins 3901, one of the most promising sons of the great George Wilkes 519.

He was a crooked-legged, ugly-looking colt, and to be plain, General Howard was a little disappointed with the youngster. As he matured he was a mixed-gaited animal, and apparently not worth a picayune. The General finally sold him to Frank Grahenstatter, a milkman of this city, for $150, and for a couple of years the colt was used daily in delivering milk or "chalk and water!" Call it which you like.

One morning while Grahenstatter was driving down town he suddenly struck into a fast pacing gait. The milk cans began to rattle, and poor Grahenstatter was high soared unto death. The milkman finally stopped the big chestnut after going a dozen blocks or more, and, after waiting for his breath to catch up, began to look at the nag and wonder what it all meant.

Some of the boys standing near whispered "world-beater!" and from this moment Frank Grahenstatter was the happiest man on earth. During the winter of 1886 Balsora Wilkes was driven a little on Delaware avenue, and "see him go!" was soon a common expression. Last season he was entered in a few unimportant pumpkin fair races by young Louis Grahenstatter, aged nineteen years, Frank's boy, and won a pretty fair amount of winter oats.

This spring young Grahenstatter started with his horses for Louisville. Everybody laughed at the idea of a "kid" just out of school going away to campaign a green horse. "Oh, he'll soon cut his wisdom teeth and come home broke!" was the general verdict of the old knights of the sulky and veteran horsemen who have been compelled to wear linen coats many a winter after a hard campaign.

But young Grahenstatter hasn't come back worth a cent! He sat on the sulky like a farmer, and laughed at the old professionals in his first race. The son of Wilkie Collins stopped the ticker at 2:27 1/2, and rumor has it that Grahenstatter salted down a barrel of money that night.

From there he went through Indiana and the Western circuit, meeting all of the crack side-wheelers of the blue grass region and the great Northwest, and vanquished them in regular order. At Council Bluffs, Iowa, week before last, he met quite a merry string of flyers. The race was fixed to do up the green horse from Buffalo. But they didn't do up worth a cent.

Grahenstatter gave the chestnut his head, and he reeled off three winning heats, and made a record of 2:19 1/2. Another barrel of money salted! Out of the fifteen races paced this season Louis Grahenstatter has piloted Balsora Wilkes to victory in thirteen of them, and captured a place in the other two. It is safe to say, all things considered, that this record has never been beaten. A "green" driver, a "green" horse, starting out among old campaigners, with no record in April and celebrating the Fourth of July with a snug little fortune, and 2:19 1/2 written on the blackboard.

Buy him? Why, you couldn't touch Balsora Wilkes with the New York Central Railroad! It is quietly rumored that he has shown a trial mile in 2:12, but don't give it away.

He is certainly one of the fastest pacers ever bred and raised in Erie county, and Louis Grahenstatter deserves the credit of being the champion kid knight of the sulky on the American turf.—The Horseman.

He Remembered.

Many years ago Mr. Abram Dodge, of Ipswich, Mass., owned a beautiful horse which was the pet of the family. He was admired by all who knew his playfulness and good qualifications. In the summer it was Mr. Dodge's habit occasionally to have a frolic with his horse in his barn yard, then let him out alone, and he would go to the river, which was about one-third of a mile distant, where he would bathe, then go to a common and roll on the grass, then start for home; his stable was renovated for him while he was gone, and his breakfast put in his crib. If he met his master he would show some coltish pranks, run for the stable, pull out the wooden pin that fastened the door with his teeth. One night the horse was stolen from the stable. After the expiration of sixteen years Mr. Dodge was at the tavern when a man drove a horse up to the door. Mr. Dodge at once recognized his horse, and told the driver his reason for believing it to be his; the man told his story of whom he bought the horse, and that he had owned him for several years. It was finally agreed that if the horse would, on being taken to his stable, go through the habit of bathing, rolling on the grass, and pulling the pin from the stable door as above described, that Mr. Dodge should have him. When the horse was let out into his yard he viewed the premises for a moment, then started for his old bath tub, then for his green towel on the common, then to his old stable, pulled the wooden pin, won for himself a good meal, and his old master his favorite horse. These facts are vouched for by reliable residents of the beautiful, picturesque old town, and show conclusively the long memory of our noble animal.—Exchange.

The St. Paul Globe sent its society reporter to bauld the 4th of July race between the pacer Johnston and the trotter Oliver K. This is the way he did it: "The grand special match between Oliver K. and Johnston attracted the liveliest interest. The two famous horses were a splendid picture as they cauntered along the track to the post. They are both bays, docked manes and tails, with beautiful arched necks, at the half post they were running level, and on entering the straight Johnston came away with a tremendous spurt, winning by a length in 2:16."

Wm. George, proprietor of the hotel at Spring Valley, Nebraska, died in terrible agony on the 8th instant. He owned a valuable blooded horse that was shot June 6th, by the state veterinarian. The animal had the glanders. In caring for his horse during its sickness Mr. George contracted the disease. The horse snorted and threw the poisonous pus over his head, face, neck and arms. Every spot of flesh it touched developed into an ulcer. For two weeks he suffered untold agony, none of the local doctors being able to tell the character of the disease until the arrival of the state veterinarian. Mr. George's last hours were spent in the most terrible agony, the poison having secured such a hold on his system that relief was an impossibility.—Stock Grower.

A high compliment has been indirectly paid by the Italian powers to the American trotter in the offering of $11,000 in prizes for trotting races this season, and for the encouragement of breeding race horses. We have no particulars as to through whose influence this measure has been adopted, but infer that Commodore Breda, a firm friend of our national horse, has been its ablest advocate. Commodore Breda has the most extensive distinctively trotting stud in Europe, most of its members being American bred. He is not alone a breeder but a practical turfman, and his enterprise has awakened an interest which, without doubt, is the cause of the official action of his government.—Spirit of the Times.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the two-year-old, unless otherwise specified; five to enter, and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 50 per cent to first horse, 25 per cent to second, 15 per cent to third, and 10 per cent to fourth.

The National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may consent to the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 55% to the first, and 33% to the second.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that in the above stakes declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all race entries not declared out by 5 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 5 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running races, except when conditions are named otherwise.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance under Rule 3.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Entries in all, except otherwise stated, to close with the Secretary, Wednesday, August 1, 1888.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is entitled to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races.

If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

The Stockton track is one of the fastest in the world.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp. Stables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nominations. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 60 per cent. to the first horse, 30 per cent. to the second and 10 per cent. to the third.

American Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money to be divided as follows, 66 2/3 to the first and 33 1/3 to the second.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named at 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over, except as otherwise specified. Running races will be conducted under the rules of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association.

Non-starters in running races will be held for an entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races, drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary on Wednesday, August 1st, 1888.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary.

The district embraces all the territory north of the Bay of San Francisco and west of the Sacramento River. District horses must have been owned in the district six months prior to closing of entries.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS.

National Trotting Association rules to govern all trotting races. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all running. Five to enter and four to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than four to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, ten per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting, pacing and running premiums to be divided at the rate of fifty per cent. for the first horse, twenty-five per cent. to the second, fifteen per cent. to the third, and ten per cent. to the fourth.

All horses entered for trotting, pacing or running races, for which entrance has been paid and who go in the race designated, and fail to win any part of the purse, will have their entrance money returned to them after decision by the Judges.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary. For a walk-over a horse is only entitled to its entrance fee and one-half of the entrance retained by the Society from the other entries for said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race, entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field then to first and fourth moneys.

Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in by 8 o'clock P. M., or they shall be required to start or forfeit the entrance money.

All purses or premiums paid as soon as a decision is rendered.

Entries to the races, except No. 8, will close with the Secretary August 10, 1888.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M., sharp. The Association is a member of the National Trotting Association. The Board of Directors will have charge of the grounds during the week of races, and will see that the Rules are strictly enforced. Address all communications to the Secretary.

Admission to Fair Grounds, 50 cents; Children under 12 years, 25 cents. To the pavilion, 25 cents; Children under 12 years, 15 cents.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

Care of the Skin.

The following in relative to the human skin may be found of service in the treatment of horses, especially those which are undergoing a preparation to fit them for continued active exertion. By continued is meant power of keeping up a high rate of speed for a longer distance than it would be possible for the horse to accomplish in what can be termed a natural state. In order to accomplish this good health is not the only requirement. Vigorous health may be accompanied by what would be a hindrance to speed. A surplus of adipose tissue is the encumbrance which is most likely to be encountered although the reverse may be the trouble. Good health, however, is the foundation on which "condition" must be built, and unless that prevails it is useless to expect the desired result. While good health can be promoted by care of the skin, it is one of the means whereby condition can be improved. As the doctor remarks in the article quoted, it has a great deal to do with carrying away deleterious matters and as trainers of horses know, it has important duties to perform in order to bring an animal into "order." The outer layer, which becomes dead, accumulates with greater rapidity when there is a close growth of hair. Even in horses which are well groomed there is quite a deposit, and when the groom knocks the curry comb on the wall or floor a good deal of dust will be shed. Sweating loosens it, and the flow of perspiration will carry it to the surface. If copious enough to "scrape" a good portion of it cleared off by the "knife of sweat," if allowed to dry and the animal has not been subjected to the process before, there will be a crusting which will change the color of the horse for the time being, the darker shades turned into a dingy white. A short time ago we had something to say about sweating, so that it is unnecessary to go over that ground again, but the effects of clothing on the skin it may be as well to consider. Trainers of race horses have discarded stable clothing to a great degree, trotters are still encumbered with blankets which are a positive injury in a climate like this. Not only while in the stable, as it is long odds that if a string of trotters are out for a walk they will be enveloped in blankets and in some cases a kersey over the blanket, and a thick hood reaching from withers to muzzle. This, too, when the thermometer shows a temperature of 70 degrees or over, so that the coat of hair should be ample protection against even slight chilliness.

It is manifest that this extra covering will interfere with the skin getting rid of that which would be eliminated were it left free to perform its natural functions. The pressure may also aid in closing the pores, and then again there is a stimulus in the atmosphere when that is permitted to encircle the animal without intervention. The air bath promotes the escape of what will work injury if confined, and strengthens the system with its wholesome influence. Not merely by inhalation, as the good effects are not confined to what passes through the respiratory organs, and therefore due care should be observed not to diminish the beneficial supply.

Three or more years ago we watched with a great deal of interest some pedestrians exercising on the Oakland track. There were noted men among them, men who ranked among the fastest. Unclad excepting the slight covering of the loins and racing shoes, it appeared the extreme of carelessness to be moving slowly when the perspiration was trickling from shoulders to feet. Standing for a moment, perhaps, and then walking leisurely about, varied with a few trotting steps, and then repeating the work which had induced the free flow of sweat. They assured us that they never caught cold so long as motion was kept up, but that if clothed before the flow ceased, sitting down for any length of time while in that state, there would surely follow muscular soreness. If the naked skin of a man can be subjected to an envelopment of air, and that at times in quite rapid motion, and soon after having been in contact with the cool waters of the Pacific without injurious effects, it is reasonable to conclude that there will be less liability when there is such a protection as the coat of a horse affords.

That cleanliness is one of the most important things in the care of the skin is universally acknowledged. The bath is an easy method of accomplishing that purpose in human kind, in our belief it is decidedly wrong in the treatment of horses. How shall cleanliness be observed without this adjunct? is the question, and when we state that the curry-comb and brush is used too much, it seems to be a difficult task to present proper substitutes. At the best a curry-comb is a harsh instrument. As usually handled it may truthfully be termed an instrument of torture, still more severe on a horse which is subjected to frequent sweats, scrapings and manipulated with rubbing cloths. When there is a thick coating of dead skin the pain is modified, and the relief from an itching sensation for the time being overcomes the suffering. But with an ordinary groom the modus operandi is to bear on, rake backward and forwards, not only digging through the scales of dead skin, wounding the sensitive tissue, but also irritating the hair follicles, until the animal suffers so intensely that fear of the operator is all that keeps him quiet enough for the operation to be performed. A stiff brush is nearly as bad when that is subjected to heavy pressure and directed against the hair. As it is a difficult job to induce men who have care of horses to discard curry-combs for implements which are not so severe and fully as effective, the next best thing is to curtail the use of the comb, and insist that the brushing be in the direction of the hair, and with a lighter hand. There is not time now to treat this question as its importance merits, and hereafter further attention will be given. There are valuable hints, however, in the article copied from the Mail and Express, and our readers interested in the training of horses will not lose by a careful perusal:

"For much attention cannot be paid to the care of the skin in sickness," said a distinguished physician to a Mail and Express reporter, a few days ago. "The skin," he continued, "is composed of the outer, middle and lower layers, and it is essential that the outer, or, as it is commonly called, the scurf skin, should be kept perfectly clean in order that the other parts may perform their duties. The outer layer is that part which is being continually formed and given off, while the middle layer, or true skin, is practically constant. The inner layer is composed chiefly of fat, which is mostly carried off during long sickness."

In addition to its functions as a general covering the skin has other duties, having many sweat and oil glands as well as nerves and hairs. There emanate from the skin exhalations of carbonic acid gas, water and other products which the system throws off. The sweat glands alone throw out during twenty-four hours from a pint to a pint and a half of water, which is about twice the daily quantity cast off by the lungs. Through its evaporation the sweat maintains a uniform temperature of the body, and the more vigorous the exercise in which one indulges, the greater is the amount of sweat secretion, and thus the increased internal temperature may be prevented, acting as it does as a safety valve for the internal heat of the body. The mission of the oil glands is to keep the skin smooth and soft by the exudation of an oily substance, invisible in ordinary circumstances, and also to act as a preventive of a too rapid evaporation of the body's moisture.

The pores of the body are really only the openings of these sweat and oil glands, and accordingly the skin has but a passive part to play in the general system, being one of the four outlets of the body, the kidneys, the intestinal canal and the lungs being the other three. As a rule, these four outlets work together in harmony, and when one fails to perform its functions the others assume part of its duties, and in a measure compensate its loss. To keep the skin in good condition in health, therefore, is of vast importance, but it is of greater moment still in case of diseases like scarlet fever, measles, typhoid and typhus fevers and others, due to poisonous or zymotic material. To keep the skin in such a condition, therefore, as to throw off as quickly as possible all poison from the system is the supreme duty of a physician. To promote this healthy action different methods should be adopted in different diseases. The first consideration of importance is that of cleanliness. The pores or outlets of the system of glands should always be kept open so that the outer skin will not accumulate and harden, and thereby retard the escape of poisonous matter.

The question of washing and bathing thoroughly is one of great importance. In sickness, except under peculiar circumstances, bathing should never be long omitted, and the water should always be at such a temperature that all chances of chilliness are avoided. It should be from 90 to 98 degrees, and in order to be as near that degree as possible it should be tested with a thermometer. Afterward, should the bath not be satisfactory, more hot or cold water may be added. But water alone is not sufficient to cleanse the skin of its impurities, and toilet soap of good quality should be freely used. In some instances, especially in skin diseases, a stronger or potash soap is required, but if the skin is too tender to endure much friction, weak solutions of alkali, like borax or carbonate of sodium, may be brought into requisition, being applied with a soft sponge and afterward rinsed off with clean water. The exposed parts of the body, as the hands and face, should be washed at least once a day, as should those parts of the body where the oil and sweat glands are mostly located, as, for instance, under the arms, where the oil-glands are especially numerous. The scalp, too, should be cleansed once a day.

In certain diseases it is often advisable to use what are called dusting powders, which should be applied to the skin after a bath, thus imparting to it a soft and comfortable feeling. In the use of these powders care should be taken to have them free from a symptom of grittiness, or irritation will certainly result. The powders may be applied with an ordinary toilet-brush. In itching or burning of the skin, as in virulent fevers, the use of washes or soothing lotions is recommended. Simple washes containing no sediment may be applied with an atomizer, sponge or absorbent cotton. Of these the last named is perhaps the best, as the cotton is not costly and can be destroyed each time after using, while the sponge is more difficult to keep clean and too expensive to throw away. In cases where a lotion containing a sediment is used the application with a sponge should be scrupulously avoided, as the sediment would disappear in the sponge instead of being deposited upon the skin. Such washes are especially good for chafing and in many eruptive diseases, as the wash dries and leaves the sediment for a protective coating to the parts.

In a certain class of diseases, like measles and scarlet fever, ointments should be applied to the skin. They are soothing and grateful to the patient, and tend to limit or prevent the danger of contagion. In scarlet fever the ointment should be smeared or gently rubbed over the skin, either with the hand or a small piece of flannel, and care should be taken that the ointment be smooth and free from lumps."

Great English Race-Horses.

The Duke of Westminster owns some of the finest race-horses in England, and it was our good fortune to see them, though travellers are not usually shown the stables. These latter are located to the left as you enter the park, and not far from the river. After manipulating the assistant groom, who went through the red tape of consulting the head groom, we were shown into the paddocks, and seized the opportunity of inspecting three of England's greatest thoroughbreds—Ormonde, Ben d'Or and Shotover—all Derby winners. The greatest of these is Ormonde, a truly superb looking animal. Several years ago he won the three big events of the English turf year—the Derby, the St. Leger and the Two Thousand Guineas. His winnings for his owner amounted to in the neighborhood of £20,000. He is a great-sized bay, reminding me somewhat of our own great Ten Broeck, though I do not think he is the horse Ten Broeck was. He is sixteen hands one and one-quarter inches in height and has hanches which indicate a wonderful power and staying qualities, and such as I have never seen upon any horse before but Ten Broeck. His hind eyes betoken a good nature, and his fine black leg, taper gracefully to larger hoofs than you would expect in such a horse. Were Ormonde a trifle longer I would say he was much like the great Emperor of Norfolk also. Next to Ormonde's room is that of Ben d'Or, his sire, the dam being Lady Agnes. These two horses occupy an entire stable, with a yard 20x70 feet on either side. The rooms—you couldn't call them stalls—are 15-20 feet, the walls being of walnut, and the ceilings, which slant up to a cupola on each side, of tiling. Between the room and the yard in which the horse exercises are large sliding doors of walnut, and as beautifully finished as though for a parlor. These horses are a sort of dukes in thoroughbreddom. Ben d'Or shows the Arabian origin in the curve of his neck and in the shape of his wicked-looking head. He is a light chestnut and is covered with peculiar-looking black spots.

The assistant groom didn't seem to think much of Shotover, though he pronounced her one of the few mares who have won the Derby. "You know, sir," said he, "curses all 'ave their h'ff days and fields are sometimes better than others," which was his explanation of how Shotover won the Derby. These three horses won their owner in the neighborhood of $300,000. Ben d'Or and Ormonde are in the stall, and Shotover was in foal when we saw her. Probably you are acquainted with her namesake in America.—London Correspondent of Louisville Courier-Journal.

The great Ormonde is unquestionably a grand looking horse, in fact, with so few exceptions that one in fifty is not out of the way, whenever a really good, big race-horse is found a close approximation to one of two forms will be met. While Ten Broeck and Longfellow presented different types, to take these two as examples of racing form, and one or the other will be fairly represented in those which rank in the large division. The equipoise of mechanism is shown to great advantage in the son of Leamington, immense muscular power in Ten Broeck. Rather a singular result came from breeding mother and daughter to Leamington. Natura's son Longfellow is nearly seventeen hands, very deep through the chest, so deep that it made him appear light in the flank, altogether after the greyhound pattern. Her daughter, Fanny Holton by Lexington, had an entirely different looking son in Littleton which was rather under the medium size, and though a good horse, far inferior to his three-quarter brother. But Fanny Holton bred to Phaeton produced Ten Broeck, and though not quite so high as Longfellow, a larger horse in other respects. Emperor of Norfolk is more after the shape of Longfellow, though as we have not seen him since his purchase by Mr. Baldwin, we cannot speak authoritatively of his present appearance. His brother, the Czar of Norfolk, is an immense youngster and with a good deal of resemblance to the elder, though fully as strongly "put up." Of all the large race-horses we have seen in late years our preference must be given to Darebin. If there is a fault it is what is mentioned of Ormonde, rather too large feet. That the tendency of present systems of breeding is increased size is patent to anyone whose recollections embrace even so short a period as the last twenty years. Horses which ranked as large then would be passed now without comments as to size, and two-year-olds of this height, length and general muscular development, scarcely observed at the present time, would have been regarded as prodigies a quarter of a century ago. It would be visionary to speculate where the limit will end, though as long as the "best of their year" are of the size of Ormonde, Ten Broeck and other big celebrities, the tendency will be in that direction.

An Actress at Exercise.

Perhaps not one person of the many thousands who have been reading of Fanny Davenport's recent relinquishment of the bonds matrimonial, or who have seen her in the American La Tosca during the past season, have a suspicion of the heroic struggle she has made to fight off an ever-encroaching embonpoint and keep herself in a condition to look the parts for which her talents best fit her. There is nothing so deadly to a tragic actress as adipose tissue. Cruizette threatened for a time to rival Beruhardt in her own roles, but gradually retreated, fighting every step of the way, before a relentless increase of avoirdupois, which drove her finally into the arms of a rich banker husband and retirement, while the meagre Sarah, strong in her leanness, can bid time defiance. Davenport was threatened in the same way, and has many a time been near giving up the battle, since she found eternal vigilance was the price of alenderness. Fifteen years ago she was already becoming solid and buxom, and was known to the little men as what they enthusiastically designate a fine woman.

She saw before her insignificance and old women's parts, and she made one mighty and stern resolve to conquer her tendency to flesh, and to-day she weighs twenty pounds less than she did a decade and a half back. She lives on meats that are lean and well cooked, graham bread and acid fruits, while she takes, but little wine, no awests and her coffee "straight," that is to say without milk or sugar. Then she walks—walks prodigiously and persistently. During her "La Tosca" engagement, despite the strain she went through in rendering that emotional part every night, she rose early every morning, before the rest of the world was awake, donned a long cloak and a veil that she might attract no notice, and tramped in the face of wind and weather often to the Park, through it to the obelisk, and round to the old sandstone shaft a fixed number of times. The early Park policeman was desperately puzzled for a while and watched narrowly as if he feared she had designs on the Serpent of old Nile's Needle, but even he grew accustomed to her after awhile and gave up trying to fathom the mystery of that persistent circling of the obelisk. Before people were beginning to go to their daily business she was back again; had a salt bath, was thoroughly rubbed down and had gone back to bed for a sleep until noon, when she woke with a cheek like a rose and a sweet consciousness that her insidious enemy was checkmated.

Horse trainers and athletes are not the only ones which are troubled to solve the problem of how to get rid of superfluous flesh as the above, cut from the N. Y. World, shows that an actress may be beset by the same trials. It requires a good deal of resolution to battle against this accumulation of fat when the party has the control in his own power. The horse can be forced to exertion, and athletes are not only urged by sure defeat if work is neglected, but usually have a mentor who compels when the pupil is reluctant. The trainer of Guerrero, when that ped. was living here had at times to resort to harsh measures, and once "Fred" when engaged in a match slipped away from him and was captured and made to perform by the fear of chastisement which he knew would surely follow non-compliance. That an actress, who will restrict herself in food, and take such an amount of exercise as is outlined in the above paragraphs, is entitled to success few will dispute. Now that she is in California she will have the benefit of a climate which will render her tasks less irksome.

A California Romance.

Mr. Henry Clews, of New York has a book about Wall street nearly ready to be issued, and from the advance sheets of which the N. Y. World presents a couple of columns of extracts. That in relation to James R. Keene will be of peculiar interest to many of our readers who were well acquainted with him before he abandoned his domicile on this Coast.

Horses had little to do with his reverses as Foxhall won a great deal of money for him in England. His first outlay in horses was in the trotting line, Ella Lewis and Sam Purdy being among the first of his purchases. We accepted a proffered match on Ella Lewis against Albatross soon after we came here, but on consultation with his driver Mr. Keene declined to make it good. It was to be heats of two miles for $1,000 a side, and would have been a good thing for Albatross. It would have taken a wonderful horse to have beaten Sam Purdy in that kind of a race.

JIM KEENE'S CAREER.

Of Mr. James R. Keene's career Mr. Clews writes at considerable length and says that he has had one of the most remarkable up-and-down lives ever known to Wall street. After referring to Mr. Keene's early experience as a lawyer and newspaper man in San Francisco, he tells how he came East for the benefit of his health, but prior to his departure invested a few hundred dollars in a mining stock, then selling very low.

Communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts in those days were infrequent and uncertain, and after nearly a year's absence Keene was surprised to find on his return that mining stocks had taken a prodigious bound upward and carried the one in which he had invested with them. The stock which had cost him only a few hundred dollars was then worth over $200,000. Flood, Mackay, Fair and O'Brien were then the prominent operators. Keene's further investments were crowned with success similar to that of his first venture, and even in a greater ratio of profit. Seeing the great and rapid advance in the stocks of the Comstock mine he naturally reasoned like old Daniel Drew, that what had gone up so high and so fast was bound to come down. There were but few people on the Coast at that time, however, in a mood to reason so soberly, and it required more than ordinary nerve to make the experiment in selling short. Mr. Keene had the courage of his convictions and made an onslaught on the market. There was a strong contingent to oppose him, for the wealthy syndicate named, with the Bank of California behind them, were his bitter foes. In spite of their efforts, however, the market began to yield under the pressure of Keene's short sales. In a little time the list gave way and stocks began to topple from their dizzy eminence. Keene netted millions in their fall. He cleared $2,500,000 in the Belcher and Crown Point mines and over half a million in Ophir.

In 1877, Mr. Keene started on a voyage to Europe on account of his health, and made a friendly call in Wall Street to see how business was transacted there. He found the speculative attractions irresistible. Mahomet had come to the mountain and was held by its magnetic power. A pool was formed by Mr. Keene and Jay Gould to put down Western Union. Keene and Selover sold the stock in large blocks, but was absorbed by some party or parties unknown as fast as it was thrown out. It was gravely suspected that Mr. Gould was the wicked partner who was playing this absorbing game behind the scenes. Major Selover and Mr. Keene met one morning at the rear entrance of the Stock Exchange, in New Street, and after a moment's conversation Selover walked down the street with blood in his eye, and meeting Mr. Gould on the corner of New Street and Exchange place, caught him up by the collar of his coat and a part of his trousers, and dropped him in the arway of a barber-shop. The little man promptly picked himself up, went quietly to his office and made a transaction by which Selover lost over $15,000 more. This was his method of retaliation.

Mr. Clews goes on to trace Mr. Keene's marvellously successful transactions in the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph pool, and his heavy buying of stock previous to the enormous speculative era of 1879 and 1880, declaring that the millions with which Keene had come to New York from California were during this period doubled and trebled. Fully $9,000,000 were added to the $4,000,000 which he brought from California. He stood in the center of that great pile, figuratively speaking, the cynosure of all eyes from Maine to California, and his fame was noised abroad in Europe. Gould and other old speculators began to grow green with envy at Keene's unprecedented success. He seemed likely to exceed the wildest dreams that ever the avarice on Monte Cristo or Daniel Drew had conjured up. His fortune was without parallel in Wall Street for its size and rapidity of accumulation. The history of speculation was ransacked in vain for an illustration of such amazing success in so short a period. In an evil hour Mr. Keene was induced to spread himself out all over creation while he still retained his immense interests in stocks. He was so flustered with successive victories that he began to regard failure as impossible. He speculated in everything that came along—in wheat, lard, opium and fast horses. Keene's attempt to get a corner in all the grain in the country was a signal failure. The very week that Foxhall won the Grand Prix in Paris, he himself was sadly beaten in a speculative race by the steady-going farmers of the west, who sent their wheat to market quicker than he could purchase it with his $13,000,000, and all the credit which that implied.

All of a sudden a reversal in the tide of speculation set in. Mr. Casmack was quick to perceive that Mr. Keene was extending his lines and his ventures. He had a conversation with Mr. Gould. They became convinced that the Californian must soon be obliged to leave some of his enterprises in a weak and unguarded position. It was impossible that he could take care of them all. These two champion heads united their efforts to upset the market, and each day brought additional force to their aid. By dint of perseverance their efforts commenced to bear fruit, and it was apparent that they would soon be rewarded with success. The hearer began to multiply while the bulls diminished, and the remnant of the latter that were left were anything but rampant at that time.

The bankers became timid. The brokers were inspired with the same spirit and were still calling out for more margin. Loans were called in as a part of the programme of a bear campaign, and all the machinery of depression was put in active motion. Prices were torn to pieces. Properties that had been considered good as solid investments for a long time were mercilessly raided and some of them shattered to fragments. In fact, there was a regular panic. In the general slaughter many of the brokers sold Mr. Keene's stocks out. His wealth was also sold in immense quantities at great sacrifice, and his load was lightened all around even more quickly than it had been heaped up. His losses are said to have amounted to $7,000,000 at this time. The many efforts of Mr. Keene to recover these losses, as is usually the case in such instances, only resulted in further misfortune. Disaster followed disaster, and as he became desperate in his efforts to get back something, his losses became constantly greater, until nearly the whole of his immense pile was buried in fruitless efforts to recover a portion of it.

The Futurity Stakes.

This race which will be run on the first Monday in September had by far the largest number of nominations ever made in America. Seven hundred and fifty-two were made, and of these 360 have not been declared out. Appended to a list of the eligibles in the N. Y. World is the following:

The conditions now stand at $250 each for starters, with $10,000 added, of which $2,000 and 30 per cent. of the starting money to the second and $1,000 and 20 per cent. of the starting money to the third. Among those that have won and have run prominent without winning, and are owned by men not usually afraid of putting up the entrance money when they believe they have good horses, are the following:

Auricombs,	Goldfish,	Oregon,
Bootmaker,	Gipsy Queen,	Once Again,
Buddhist,	Hayward,	Proctor Knott,
Bell Barnes,	Holiday,	Princess Bowling,
Carnot,	Lady Margaret,	Reporter,
Clarissa,	Liberty,	Seymour,
Caliente,	Miss Cody,	Servia,
Erie,	Monsoon,	The Lioness,
French Park,	Marsac,	Tipstaff,
Felicia,	Maxim filly,	Winfield,
Galop,

The race will be run over the straight three-quarters of a mile at Sheephead Bay. It is to be hoped that the track will be dry, for if it is heavy it will, by reason of its newness, be an exceedingly bad track to run over.

Monsoon and Winfield are the only ones belonging to California stables, Mr. Haggin being the owner. Monsoon is by Kyrle Daly, from Mnra. She won a very good race at the Chicago meeting, in which were 18 starters, among them Galen, which subsequently won the Quikstep Stakes in the very fast time of 48 seconds, Monsoon being fifth in the race. The race she won was at five-eighths of a mile, which she made in 1:02½. Winfield is by Kyrle Daly, from Winifred, so that she is one of the great family which spring from Hennie Farrow, and though she is still a maiden, has shown fair capacity, running third in the Good-Bye Stakes at Chicago, and second in the Hopeful Stakes at Long Branch.

Racho Del Paso has quite a number of eligibles, beside the two mentioned, and it may be that some one of them has been retained for this big stake. These are Winfield, Monsoon, Uintale and Rosa Bella filly, by Kyrle Daly; Mabel, Macao and Marsac, by King Ban; Sarcen, by Longfellow; Mojave, by Pat Malloy; Tehschafi, by Ten Broeck; Examiner, by Enquirer; Timball, by Great Tom; Salvator, by Prince Charlie; Abilene, by King Alfonso; Blue Grass, Florenzo, Ransom, by Rayon d'Or; Hector, by Virgil; Balzac, by Onondaga; Florentin, by Glenelg, and Widow Clicquot, by Prince Charlie or Glenelg. Santa Anita has Ganymede, Carantes, Janova, Alaho, Rosebud, Gladiator, Viente, Indianola, by Grinstead; Paola, Lady Lulu, by Rutherford, and Opal, by Gano. Palo Alto has Shannon Rose, by Shannon; Faustine, Geoffrey, Amy Gardner, Gerhardine, by Flood; Anrelia, Festus, by Wildidle; Bessie Hooker, by Joe Hooker; Marcella, by Grinstead, and R. P. Ashe has Sinfire, by Kyrle Daly; Daphinita, by Jocko. The only probable starters are from Racho Del Paso.

Telegraphic Topics.

There are always doubts in relation to the accuracy of telegram. While it is probable that the ticking is correct, there are so many cases which the mail reverse that full acceptance is not awarded until the endorsement comes. It is to be expected that turf matters will trouble operators, and names of horses and their pedigrees are twisted into queer shapes. The technical phrases in use on the turf are also troublesome, so that it is not surprising that mistakes should be made. A short time ago there came the following dispatch, causing a shock throughout the country, when in due course of mail Mr. Morria was reported to be progressing so favorably that he would soon be in the saddle again.

SARATOGA, July 28.—The sensation of to-day's racing was the fatal injury of Henry J. Morris, of Baltimore, a wealthy and popular owner and a gentleman jockey and the best amateur horseman in the East except Foxhall Keene, the son of James R. Keene, lately of San Francisco, who was his chum. Morria rode his own horse, Warrington, and took the lead cropper. At the first hurdle he was rolled on and trampled on and dragged many yards by his horse, receiving internal injuries which resulted fatally. His former partner Harry Harwood, well known locally in California was killed last October in the same way.

The mishap to the Emperor of Norfolk was magnified into a "hopeless breakdown," and then came by the more reliable route, that the injury was comparatively slight. There are some queer mistakes which could only occur by carelessness in the receiver, and which the average proof-reader intensifies in the endeavor to remedy. For instance, in the account of the second race of the opening day at Los Angeles, it was stated: "After passing the stand at the finish, Del was cut down by his rider, Frisco, thrown and badly hurt." This is the first on record where a rider cut down the horse he was mounted on, the [punctuation and interpolation of "by" changing the sense. Thus, "After passing the stand, at the finish, Del was cut down; his rider, Frisco, thrown and badly hurt," is surely nearer right. Judging from the telegraphic report, as we are writing before that of our special is received, the sport was very good. Lady Helen won handsomely and so did Laura Gardner, and the three-year-old pacer, Gold Leaf, made a grand performance. As that was the next race to the running, in all probability the track was quite slow; 2:23½ in a second heat is capital, and when to that is added the defeat of Belmont Boy, she must be ranked as one of the coming wonders of the Coast. By Sidney from Fern Leaf, it was likely that she could pace fast, that she can "stay" as well is evident. Maggie E., seems to have had an easy job, though the mail accounts will not be anticipated as there may be other changes to make. Still with all the errors and strange mixtures, we would be sadly at fault were it not for the intelligence brought by the wires.

Obituary of Stallions.

A recent issue of The Field (English), has an interesting article on the subject of the "Obituary of Stallions." The writer states that the average age at which exported sires die is less than that attained by their home-staying brethren; although the most patriarchal thoroughbred stallion of which an authentic record exists was Sir Charles Bannbury's Diomed, who won the first Derby in 1780, and was sold by his avaricious owner for fifty pounds when nearly twenty-two years old to go to Virginia, where he died after a most distinguished stud career at the advanced age of thirty-one. Diomed was the son of Florizel, who was the son of Herod, and in this way the valuable blood of Herod is well represented in the United States, through the progeny of that great horse, Lexington, who was foaled in 1850, and during a long career on the American Turf was only beaten once. He subsequently became the sire of 400 winners, and Lexington mares were as much prized in the United States as the daughters of Stockwell, Orlando and Macaroni in this country. Curiously enough, the direct male line of Herod, through Woodpecker, is almost extinct in the great Republic, notwithstanding the fact that Glencoe, who was of this strain, covered in America for twenty years—from 1837 to 1857—during which long period he almost invariably got fillets. During his single year at the stud in England, Glencoe begat Pocahontas, the dam of Rataplan, Stockwell and King Tom. The famous son of Sultan, who won the Two Thousand Guineas and Goodwood Cup for Lord Jersey in 1834, died in the United States at the age of twenty-seven; and such was his extraordinary courage that, although racked with pain, he refused to lie down, and died literally on his legs. The direct line of Eclipse, through Sir Hercules, has many representatives in America; and Leamington, the sire of Parole, Iroquoia, and many other good horses, was the son of Faugh-a-Ballagh, who was the son of Sir Hercules.

Another celebrated horse mentioned by him is Sir Hercules (by Whalebone out of Peri), who was born in 1826, and was sold with his mother to Lord Blenheim of Summer Hill in Ireland, where he ran among his three-year-old career. He was trained for all his races in Ireland, and it is said that when John Scott looked him over after the St. Leger in 1829, he remarked that he had the horse been trained at Whitwell he would have been first instead of third. For many years he stood as a stallion at Summer Hill, where he became the father of Coronation, the Derby winner in 1841; of Faugh-a-Ballagh, the St. Leger winner in 1844; and of Irish Birdcatcher, born in 1833, who was the sire of one winner of the Derby, three winners of the St. Leger, one of the Oaks, and two of the One Thousand Guineas. From The Baron, a son of Irish Birdcatcher, sprang Stockwell, one of the grandest stallions ever bred in these islands, to whom we are indebted among many other superior horses, for Blair Athol, Doncaster and all their descendants, including Prince Charlie, Silvio, Ben d'Or and Ormonde. In 1853, when Sir Hercules was twenty-seven and apparently worn out, he became the property of Mr. E. Phillips, of Bashbury near Wolverhampton, who gave a few sovereigns for the old horse. Under the influence of a little care and good food he soon revived, and from his union with Snowdrop, by Heron—the first mare put to him by Mr. Phillips—sprang Gemma di Vergy. In the same year he got Gunboat out of Yard Arm, by Sheet Anchor; and next year, when twenty-eight, he became the progenitor of Lifeboat from the same mare. Sir Hercules died in 1855, aged twenty-nine, at which age Gunboat, his last surviving son, also died in 1883. No more prepotent sire than Sir Hercules figures in the pages of the Stud Book; and to his son, Faugh-a-Ballagh, the sire of Leamington and Fille de l'Air, the thoroughbred blood of the United States and of France is deeply indebted. The history of Sir Hercules and of his stock down to the present day, teaches us that it is eminently desirable to breed from stallions which have not been run to death as two-year-olds—the same maxim which is enforced by Bay Middleton and Glencoe; by Touchstone, Newminster and Stockwell; by Venison, Velocipede, Slane, Irish Birdcatcher, Faugh-a-Ballagh, Voltigeur, Pantaloon, Sweetmeat, Macaroni, King Tom and Doncaster.

In the long annals of the stud book there have been but two stallions—Competitor, the last surviving son of Eclipse, and Touchstone—who died in England at the age of thirty years; while Sir Hercules and Gunboat died at twenty-nine, Macaroni at twenty-eight, Orlando, Irish Birdcatcher, Emiline, Voltigeur and King Tom at twenty-seven, and Pantaloon at twenty-six. Breeders of previous generations were firm believers in long-lived stallions and mares, and it was a recommendation in Lord Jersey's eyes that Miss Sophie dropped Mameluke to Partisan when she was twenty years old, and to Mr. Sadler that Ferina gave birth to Pretender—the son of Adventurer—when she was twenty-two. Nowadays the average age at which stallions and mares die is lower than it was thirty or forty years ago, which is but another exemplification of the favorite maxim of Hiram Woodruff, the great American trainer of trotting horses, that "early maturity means early decay."

A curious case in New York involving the value of pool tickets, came up in general sessions recently. Ward Vaughan and John Binky, boatmen, stole pool tickets on the Jerome Park races on May 29, for which Charles A. Whittier paid $299. They were indicted for grand larceny, but before their trial opened their lawyer stated that the tickets had no value in law except what the pasteboard might be worth. He offered to accept a plea of petit larceny. The district attorney took the same view, and the men were sentenced to thirty days in the penitentiary for petit larceny.

Fair Notes.

At Santa Rosa Fair, August 13th to 18th, Mr. J. M. LaRue will preside in the judges' stand, and E. S. Culver will act as clerk of the course.

Tickets for life members in the Golden Gate Fair Association are now ready and may be procured from the Secretary, Jos. I. Dimond, 109 Front Street, San Francisco.

Owners of 2:30 trotters in the counties of Sonoma, Marin, Napa and Solano will be glad to observe that there is a new race now advertised for them. W. E. Cox, Secretary of Petaluma Fair, writes us that the purse is $300, the conditions are the same as those advertised in another column for Petaluma Fair.

The winner of the free-for-all pacing race at Los Angeles, Pleasanton Stock Farm's Gold Leaf, is but a three-year-old, and hersire is now but seven. She is by Sidney (son of Santa Claus 2:17 1/2) out of Sweetness 2:21 1/2 and her dam is Fern Leaf, (the dam of Shamrock 2:25) by Flaxtail. Count Valensin is to be congratulated on the remarkable performance of his young stallion's young pacer. A second heat in 2:23 1/2 is a phenomenal performance for a three-year-old.

Some misunderstanding has arisen in regard to the use of the words "free for all" in the advertisement of the 2:40 class of the Ormsby County, Nevada Fair. It will be observed that some of the races are for only such horses as are owned and kept, for six months prior to the race, in Nevada and California east of the Sierra Nevadas. All except these "District" races are "free for all" horses, wherever owned. That are ordinarily eligible to the various classes. This fair promises to be a great success.

The Lexington, Ky., Fair has an admirable list of entries for their approaching meeting. In the 2:21 class seven entries paid up out of sixteen. In the 2:25 stallion class sixteen entries out of eighteen made last payment; in the 2:30 class twenty entries out of twenty-six remained in; the special three-year-old class has eleven—Linnie (Egbert, dam by Mambrino Time), Silver Bell (Cuyler, dam by Harold), Victoria Wilkes (Oward, dam by Eggewater), Daphne (Col. Hambrick, dam by Nick Monroe), Keller Thomas (Pilot Duroc, dam by Dictator), Bonnie Wood (Nutwood—Bonnie Duroc), Bosque Bonita, Bolmdel, Aloegetta (Alcantara—Lady Daggett), Egotist (Electioneer—Sprite).

The special four-year-old has Susie S. record 2:20, Hourri, record 2:19 1/2, Eminence, record 2:27 1/2 as three-year-olds.

The State Agricultural Society is expending some $10,000 in making improvements at Agricultural Park, Sacramento. Many changes have been made which will add to the comfort and convenience of exhibitors and visitors. The county exhibits will occupy all of Horticultural Hall, three of the conservatories and the major part of the main hall. This will be an agricultural fair in every sense of the word. The counties that have secured space are the following: Amador, Calaveras, El Dorado, Nevada, Placer, Yuba, Sutter, Tehama, Colusa, Yolo, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Merced, Fresno, Tulare and San Diego. Butte County, it now appears, does not intend to exhibit at the State Fair.

Mr. Smith said he was confident that the attendance at the Pavilion this year would be far in excess of that of any preceding year. This would largely be caused by the great number of country exhibits. The citizens of all sections will want to come to Sacramento to see how the products of their county compare with those of their neighbors.

Remember the cattle sales—Col. Younger's sale of celebrated shorthorns, August 14th, at San Jose; and the Baden herd of Durham's at ———, August 15th.

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

There was a larger attendance at the club-house than there has been for months last Sunday, and the many visitors were treated to some very pretty races and as fine a spectacle from a sailing point of view, as could be desired. The first event was the race for the Edward's Cup. The conditions are that it should be raced for monthly, and for it to become the property of the canoe winning five times. It had now been won four times by both the Water Lily and Falcon, and three times by the Luck, consequently great interest centered in the race this time. There were six entries, Shadow, Agnes and Nip, besides the above mentioned. A large number of B class canoes were afloat, and sailed round the course with their smaller conferees. After a fine contest the Water Lily came in first, but one boat's length ahead of the Luck, and therefore the Edward's Cup now becomes the property of her skipper. In the yawl boat-house next door is a large canoe, 15 feet by 4 feet, with two centreboards, named the (E)ins, and the Sunday before last, when some of the boys were down in the basin, she turned up and in a scrub race home beat them all pretty badly. Most of them, however, had on cruising sails only, and so did not feel very much injured; but, behold! on arriving at the boat-house this Sunday, there appears a broom hoisted at the flagstaff buck of the rival club.

This was too much for the canoe men, and a message was at once dispatched for the Oeolus to come out and prove her right to such a signal, or forthwith lower it. The Oeolus being ready and eager, racing sails were speedily hoisted and fourteen canoes were presently awaiting the signal to reaffirm their long acknowledged supremacy on the creek. Away they went to a good start, Myatic shortly taking the lead, Flirt next with the Oeolus close under her quarter, the rest well up. Thus order was held until the stake was turned, the Conchita pressing the third boat in the windward work. The fleet got widely separated owing to the different courses being taken. However, Dart, Flirt and Conchita soon showed up ahead and passed the line in that order, the Oeolus coming in fourth with the Mystic scarcely a boat's length behind. Whispy sixth, then Hebe, Gypsy, Echo, La Polono and Bonita in order named. The presumptive bron was immediately hauled down and sent over to the canoe club-house, where it was hoisted with appropriate ceremonies.

TRAP.

California Wing Shooting Club.

The last meeting of the season was held at San Bruno on Sunday last, six members taking part. The day was singularly calm for that windy section, but the liveliness of the birds more than offset the propitious weather. Mr. C. J. Haas came down from Stockton with his shooting clothes on and made a clean score, as did Mr. Osborn. Dr. Knowles although scoring but ten did some of the best shooting of the day. A resume of the work of the club during the season is given. Mr. Haas won the first medal. Messrs. Meily and Osborn tied for second and third medals, the latter coming second on the shoot off.

At twelve birds, Hurlingham. For club medals: Knowles, 10; Norton, 9; Haas, 12; Meily, 8; Osborn, 12; Dr. Vaull, 7.

THE KENNEL

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Whelps.

Mr. A. B. Truman's Irish setter Lady Elcho T., whelped July 20th, six, four dogs, to owners, Mike T.

The whelping of Lady Elcho T., noted elsewhere, adds another litter of superb Irish setters to the already excellent stud now owned in California. The dam is without doubt one of the best specimens of the breed now living, and as both sire and dam have shown field merit and marked potency in their offspring, the local kennel world may be pleased that Lady Elcho has so favored it.

Prefix Claimed.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Mr. Lawrence Timpon, Red Hook, Duchess Co., N. Y., has filed his application for the sole use of the prefix Maizeland. Objections, if any, may be forwarded to me at any time within two weeks.

A. P. VANDENBURGH,
Secretary A. K. C.

NEW YORK, July 27, 1888.

Breaking Young Retrievers.

About the most critical period of the breaking of a young retriever is when he first sees game. You must be careful how you take the bird from his mouth (let no one else do it for you), so as not to let the dog drop it before you have hold of it, for if it flutters away your dog may be tempted to bite it, and so injure his temper somewhat. If he lets go too soon, step back a pace or two, and encourage him to carry up to you; if, on the other hand, he holds on too tight, take hold of his cord with one hand and jerk it as you receive the bird with the other, saying "softly" to him all the time till he releases his hold. "Softly" is a very important word, to be constantly used, and perfectly understood by the dog, that he may be punished, if he ever requires it, for being in any way rough with a cripple at any future time in his life. Always keep as quiet as possible when your dog searches for dead or wounded game. You may pretend to look too, but not keep calling out to him "He, he!" If he is wild your doing so will make him overrun the place or scent; and if he is slack he will expect you to find for him and show him too much where he is to seek for it. If possible do not let him be disappointed in his search, for if you have a dead bird in your pocket you can easily drop it, and let him come upon it before he quite gives up seeking. Then caress and praise him well for his exertions. Praise for good work is a great reward. Should you see a running bird flutter and try to rise above turnips some way before your dog whilst he is following by scent, do not hasten to lift him (i. e., take him off the place where he is following it to put him nearer to the bird), but give him time to trace it as much as possible by himself; because if you lift him you make him wild, and he then will raise his head and try to see the bird, not keeping his nose down as he ought to do. Do not send a dog after a wounded hare until the hare has got out of sight. Your dog must then follow by scent; the hare will not run so fast or so far if not pursued at once, and will often stop and become stiff, and so be easily secured for you. Many hares will beat a dog that follows at once, and never be taken, as when warm they can run, even when much hurt, to a considerable distance. Numbers of dogs are ruined by being broken too quickly, all their courage leaves them. They will not hunt in thick hedges or seek long or at all out of sight for wounded game, and this would not have been the case had they been broken by degrees. Their masters call them perfect retrievers because they never run in, and will follow them loose through coverts full of game, but for any practical purpose as retrievers they are almost useless.—William Ridgway.

Diseases of the Rectum.

These diseases, though not perhaps in themselves of the highest importance in canine pathology, are sufficiently serious and common to make it necessary that the non-professional dog-owner should have some idea of their treatment; and they are, if not directly the result, at any rate so intimately connected with habitual constipation, that it is necessary to establish certain premises before entering upon the symptoms and treatment of the diseases themselves.

Constipation, when it has become habitual, is in itself a disease, and more, it is one of the commonest ones in this country, and almost always occasioned by the neglect and indifference of owners. For instance, how often is it the case that an owner is not sufficiently energetic or fond of his dog to give him enough exercise for his health. In the hot weather particularly, the days are too hot for the poor brute to roam about outside, and he is confined to the house. During the night he is probably chained up because he barks. In the cool of the mornings, when exercise would be so beneficial, the master may be accustomed to enjoy his soundest sleep, and object to rise early for that reason. In the afternoon he leaves the dog to be taken for a walk by the sweeper; and what does this mean? The knight of the broom, nothing loth to have a few hours leave, but by no means disposed to fatigue himself, drags his charge on the chain to a friend's house, where he squats and smokes in his turn, while the dog paws and lies in the dust at his feet. When it is time to return he gives the creature a kick to rouse him, and drags him home again. The dog has walked perhaps a mile or a mile and a half. It is obvious enough that this exercise is insufficient, and what wonder if the health suffers.

Exercise is one of the main secrets of health, and it should be regularly and bonitfully given. If an owner be disinclined to take his dogs out himself, let him train his dog-boy to exercise them off, not on the chain. The dogs may be led beyond the neighborhood of houses and streets and given a run in the open country beyond. There is no difficulty in training a boy to be sufficiently sensible for this responsibility; and if a difficulty be found, the remedy will lie in changing the dog-boy. If there be many dogs, the boy might be entrusted with a whip, but he should be warned against using it on the dogs; the sound of it should be sufficient to bring his charges to heel when it is time to return.

It is probable enough that the dogs in time will become fonder of their attendant than of their master, but it is better that this should be the case than that they should pine and sicken, and at any rate who is to blame for it? If a man keep dogs at all, let him make their health and comfort a question of duty, or part with the animals to one who is more fit to own them. If a dog be fond of retrieving, or of running after a ball, it is easy enough to give a great deal of hard running in a short time. We read of a London owner bringing his bull-terrier in hard condition, and at the same time keeping him in health by allowing him to jump up a wall after a cat's skin suspended from it. It is not difficult to devise a means of giving sufficient exercise if it be really so desired; and the question may be entirely apart from that of habitual neglect; an owner may be sick or absent from home or unable for some reason to take his dogs for their usual run, and then some temporary expedient may be necessary.

A daily swim also tends to prevent constipation; the dogs may be taken for exercise to some canal or tank where they can swim about and cool themselves down, and they will be all the better for it. If a swim cannot be arranged a bucket bath of cold water in the morning will be found beneficial. The water should be dashed over the dog from the bucket; the loins and abdomen should be well soaped; he should then be given a good hand rubbing, and allowed a run afterwards. The bucket bath should not be given to dogs with weak hairs, or at any rate the water should not be too cold. If a dog stand and shiver after his douche, the bath can be doing him no good; but healthy animals thoroughly enjoy the sensation, especially in the hot weather; and will, when accustomed to it, voluntarily come for the ducking, standing for it with a wag of the tail, and when it is over shake themselves and dash about in hearty enjoyment.

Improper feeding is another cause of constipation. In the hot weather, and when exercise is scantily given, due attention should be paid to laxative diet. Boiled liver and greens, given say twice a week, is an admirable diet for a costive animal, and a dose of sulphur in the food, two or three times a week, will cool the blood, and tend to keep the bowels in working order. Raw liver is more laxative than cooked, and may be given occasionally. Give coarse flour and oatmeal rather than fine flour or white bread, and avoid bones. You'll say: "Many dogs have a dry constipated habit, often greatly increased by the bones on which they are too frequently fed. This favours the disposition to mange, and to many diseases depending on morbid secretions. It produces indigestion, encourages worms, blackens the teeth, and causes fetid breath. The food often accumulates in the intestines, and the consequence is inflammation of these organs. A dog should never be supposed to remain costive more than a couple of days."

Take care that the dogs have not access to filth and the refuse of the kitchen.

The dog is very subject to hemorrhoids or piles. Dr. Stables says: "The rectum of the dog is not only pre-disposed by nature to piles, but the habits of the animal and his feeding have a great deal to do with their production. Remember, the dog's rectum is comparatively narrow, and is plentifully supplied with a network of blood vessels, and by far the greater portion of the venous blood is returned to the heart through the liver. Now the liver of the dog is large, and, as we all know, is easily put out of order; when it is so, and the circulation in the portal system is sluggish, the veins of the rectum are apt to become congested. If, in addition to this, the bowels are constipated, the areolar tissue gets stretched and loose, irritation is set up, and piles result." We thus see that the dog is by natural structure predisposed to the disease—a predisposition which is greatly aggravated by constipation, pure and simple, or constipation connected with sluggishness or disease of the liver.

Hemorrhoids or piles consist of small nut-like tumors which form at the base of the rectum. They may be external to the bowel, and so observable; or internal, not seen at all, or only so when the anus projects at the time of defecation. The bleeding form of piles is less common than the other, but is by no means rare. When piles are thoroughly established and external the symptoms are of course sufficiently striking, but signs of something being wrong may be observed before the case is far advanced. There may be evident pain and uneasiness at the time of evacuating the feces, or an irritation, leading the dog to look and lick at the anus, or to draw himself along the ground by his forepaws in the attitude commonly known as "sledding." This is not, of course, an indication that piles must be present; irritation, due to the presence of worms and other causes, might lead the dog to do the same, but on such symptoms being shown, an examination of the anus will soon show whether piles are present or not.

Old dogs suffer from piles far oftener than young ones. This is because the system may be more debilitated, or constipation become chronic from long neglect in treatment or sluggishness of liver.

In ordinary cases, there should be no difficulty in obtaining a cure. All the causes of constipation should be avoided, and measures taken that the bowels work easily. Powdered sulphur given every morning (or twice a day if necessary) will be found of great service. The dose is about as much as will lie on a quarter piece for a twenty-pound dog; and more or less according to the size of the animal. It is not a bad plan to administer the sulphur in a little salad oil; the dog will then lick it up freely and the oil is in itself laxative and beneficial. Sulphur has, however, no taste to speak of, and if powdered finely, not to be gritty, any dog will take it in his food. I generally employ sulphur in the form of what is known as "milk of sulphur," to avoid having to grind it when required. If in addition to the bowels being costive, the liver be sluggish, give a podophyllin pill at night, besides the sulphur in the morning.

Locally, and in mild cases, washing the part two or three times a day with cold water may be sufficiently effectual, but some astringent lotion or ointment will generally be required to produce a speedy cure. A solution of alum and water is a cheap, simple and effectual remedy, and in more decided cases have used the compound gall ointment. The ointment should be applied three or four times a day, inserting a little up the rectum. The sulphate of zinc, a strong astringent, is also a good remedy; the strength would be about a couple of grains to an ounce of water, the part being bathed with the lotion, and a little injected into the rectum. In bad cases it may be necessary to remove the tumors by means of ligatures, but this will be rare if the case be taken in time and properly treated.

Fistula in Ano is the result of bad and long neglected piles, or may be due to laceration of the membrane of the rectum by the impaction of hardened feces, when inflammation and ulceration may set in, ending in a fistula. The treatment is much the same as in piles. Great care should be taken to keep the contents of the bowels soft, so that the dog may have easy stools; and if there be hard, impacted feces in the rectum, they must be removed by mechanical means. The end of a small spoon is a good instrument for the purpose, the bowels being washed out by an enema after the mass has been broken. Nothing likely to irritate the bowels should be given in the food, and the part should be washed frequently with cold water, to which a few drops of phenyle have been added. A fistula is a sadly painful affair, and the patient should be very tenderly handled, otherwise he will soon fight shy of being touched, and will offer a strenuous resistance. In ordinary cases, the treatment indicated will suffice, and no professional aid will be required, but in bad cases an operation will be necessary.

Prolapsus recti or prolapsus ani consists of a falling out or protrusion of the rectum through the anal opening. It results from debility and constipated habit. When the disease commences, the protrusion will only take place when the feces are evacuated, but afterwards as the rectum is continually stretched and loses tone, the prolapse may take place at any time and become chronic.

Treatment lies in washing the part with an alum or sulphate of zinc solution, and then carefully returning it to its place. Afterwards astringent injections will be necessary, or the compound gall ointment may be inserted up the rectum. The patient should be fed on laxative food, and no exercise or only very gentle exercise, should be given. If the disease become chronic, an operation may be necessary, and the part excised by the knife, or the loose portions of membrane may be ligatured, and so removed, the parts being touched with sulphate of copper or nitrate of silver.

Polypus recti is a tumour on the rectum, which will require removal by an operation. The use of the knife is not necessary, and the ligature is in every way preferable. Dr. Stables says: "A polypus must not be confounded with a pile, the latter is broad at the base, the former has a neck." Others assert that this tumour is only a larger, harder form of piles. We are not, however, concerned with this argument. There are other more obscure and complicated diseases of the rectum, but a description of the symptoms and treatments of the above will meet all the requirements of the non-professional owner. It will have been noticed what an important part constipation has to play in the production of these diseases, and we cannot therefore impress upon our readers too strongly the necessity of avoiding this ailment by all possible means.

One of the most attractive exhibits at the April dog show was Mr. H. R. Brown's white and lemon pointer Donna Sensation, a bitch of rare beauty and perfectly shown. Elsewhere it is noted that Donna is a matron, but the information is of little value to would-be purchasers, because her owner intends to present to friends such of the puppies as he does not wish to reserve for his own use.

New English Military Rifle.

The efforts of the leading powers to attain perfection in arms are increasing, but the end striven for seems as far off as ever. The soldier must be able to carry a large number of cartridges, of such power as to instantly disable an opponent at long range, and must also carry his rifle, of weight and strength sufficient to shoot heavy powder charges without danger of bursting, or very heavy recoil. Hitherto, English cartridges have contained a certain charge by weight of fine-grain powder (85 grains R. F. G. 2 powder for the Martini Henry and 70 grains R. F. G. powder for the Snider), and the bullet has consisted of lead, or an alloy of lead and tin, and took the rifling by the cutting of the edges of the rifling into the bullet itself. The new cartridge has a pressed powder pellet instead of loose powder—i. e., the necessary weight of powder is pressed into a solid cylinder by hydraulic power, and this cylinder takes the place of the ordinary powder charge. The cartridge case is, of course, to be of solid drawn brass, and the explosive pellet will have a hole bored through its centre, so that the cap will be over the passage, and the dash will strike against an edge and ignite the powder rapidly. Moreover, as this air channel reaches from just beneath the cap to the base of the bullet, the bullet is acted on by the very commencement of the combustion, and has, consequently, a slow movement at starting, which enables it to take the rifling without shock, and prevents any waste of force or strain on the barrel. The velocity of the bullet is also greater, because more of the force of explosion is spent on driving it out of the bore, and less on forcing it into the grooves and straining the bore. The bullet itself is made of a mixture of lead and tin, and is completely covered with a copper envelope (if the Lorenz bullet is finally adopted in place of the Rubini, this envelope will be of soft steel, but this point is not definitely settled). The grooves being broad and shallow, and having no sharp cutting edge, the envelope gradually sets up into the shape of the bore without being cut, and consequently there is comparatively little distortion. It may be said, popularly speaking, that the bullet is "corrugated" instead of being "scored." The advantages of this are evident. In the first place, the rifle is not loaded; and every marksman knows the difference even a faintly leaded barrel makes to the shooting, and the difficulty of thoroughly cleaning ratchet grooves that have once been leaded. The bullet itself is also much the better for the absence of scoring, as its sides, being smooth, offer less resistance to the wind, and consequently retain their velocity longer, and strike the object more straight and true. The absence of any cutting edge on the groove also renders the formation of a "wing" in the bullet impossible, and thereby diminishes the chances of a ricochet and of those strange and fearfully erratic shots that so often perplex riflemen, but which are nearly always due to the fact that a small piece of lead becomes partly detached from the bullet, either on account of a flaw or of being cut by a leaded groove, and acting on the bullet like the stick on the rocket.

The possibility of bad shooting from flaws in the bullet is also reduced to a minimum, as it is much easier to ensure the regularity of metal when using lead only. Another great advantage that the new cartridge has over the old is the lubrication of the bullet with mineral vaseline, and the consequent discarding of the old wax wad. The shape of the grooves has something to do with this also, as the old ratchet-shaped grooves could only be cleaned by driving a wax wad through them, whereas a coating of vaseline is sufficient to keep the shallow edgeless grooves of the new rifle in order, especially as there is no chance of leading. Only a thin cardboard disc separates the powder from the bullet in the new cartridge, and this does away with more than one cause of inaccuracy. In the first place, especially in India, there was the possibility that the wax wad might adhere to the bullet in flight and divert it under the action of the wind like its tail diverts a rocket, for minute portions of wax might stick the cardboard wads together, and thus join the wax wad on to the base of the bullet, while extreme heat would cause the wax to soften in the cartridge and act prejudicially on the shooting. Above all, the new cartridge is far less affected by variations of temperature than the old, and is, therefore, extremely well suited to the requirements of the British army.

Fish in the Northern Pacific.

The United States Fish Commission steamer Albatross, after lying in San Francisco bay for several weeks and refitting is now on a cruise in the northern waters of the Pacific. On her way to California some researches were made off the Santa Barbara Islands, not however, with the thoroughness which is to characterize the efforts in the north.

Instructions in detail have been forwarded to Captain Tanner and the scientists abroad, from Washington. After leaving San Francisco the Albatross first sailed for Nanaimo, stopping on the way only off the Humboldt County Coast, to deposit near Point Trinidad some of the lobsters sent from Massachusetts. At Nanaimo all the coal the vessel will hold, including a deck load, will be taken aboard. Sitka will be the next port. The voyage up from Nanaimo will not be by the inner island channel, but off the Islands in a more direct line. From Sitka she will go to Oonahaska, which is to be the northern and western limit of the cruise. Thence the vessel will work easterly to Kodiak, keeping as nearly as possible about one hundred miles off the coast. The nature of the work will be somewhat varied. One of the chief objects will be to determine the 100-fathom curve—that is, the distance from the coast line, where the water reaches that depth. The Ranger, in sounding on the southern coast, has been locating this line. The determination is for the benefit of fishermen, for it has been the experience on eastern fishing banks that it is not profitable, from a commercial point of view, to fish at a greater depth than 100 fathoms. It is the belief that in the area of 100 miles off coast from Oonahaska exists one of the best fishing grounds of the world, more productive than the famous "banks" of the North Atlantic Coast. With lines, nets and dredging, the Albatross scientists hope to demonstrate this. That cod of the best kind, and halibut with many other excellent food fish, are in that marine area, is well known. The Mollie Adams, a Gloucester fishing schooner, is now in there, and recently her enterprising skipper has been sending dried cod and halibut back to eastern markets and selling them at a good profit.

While sounding and locating fishing grounds, the classification of new fish found will progress, and facts regarding marine flora, mollusks, suitable bait for fishermen and the location of good harbors for fishing boats will be noted. These two last items are of great importance in a fishing ground. The scientists will endeavor to find different kinds of suitable bait, ascertain where it can be obtained, both afloat and ashore, and the information will then be reported for the use of fishermen. Shrimps, squid and clams are of common use for bait. Cod and halibut caught will be examined carefully with view of finding exactly what they feed upon. In this way the most tempting bait to be offered may be learned. A large quantity of clams, taken up from San Francisco, will be planted at the Obumagin Islands, and used as bait. These clams, now so common along the California coast, were, it is believed, planted by some of the early mariners. They are not found generally on all the Pacific coast, and there are none of consequence in the northern fishing grounds. The various islands in the region designated will be explored and all fair harbors for fishing boats will be located on charts. Bait will be sought for ashore along the beach, for there, according to calculation, it will be found in greater quantities and more easily.

Professor Leslie Lee, who is in charge of the scientific work, says the chief work of the Albatross on this cruise will be to demonstrate, if possible, the suitability of the district designated for fishing boats to visit for commercial purposes. Commissioner McDonald is satisfied that that region will prove more productive than any of the Atlantic fishing-banks. In Professor Lee's judgment the cod and the halibut-fishing and curing ought to become, on the Pacific Coast, one of its great industries, capable of supplying fully one-half of the United States with its dried fish product. The upper coast ports ought in time to rival Gloucester. A large export trade with the hot countries south ought to be built up. In his judgment, as San Francisco is destined to become the great center for trade of all the western coast, this branch, so important on the Atlantic, ought to grow to proportions fully as great as there. Gloucester fishermen go north every year, off the coast of Iceland, in order to secure halibut. The voyage is a long one, much longer than from Portland or from this port to the region south of Alaska.

The scientific men aboard the Albatross left in San Francisco, for shipment to the National museum at Washington, specimens collected on the outward trip. The collection includes many fish, fowl and flora, which have been placed in cases specially constructed for the purpose, and shipped in the car which, a short time ago, brought the lobsters to California. In this, too, the scientists send several marine products peculiar to the Pacific Coast, which will be of value to the eastern commission. Among these products will be a number of common crabs, Cancer magister, the like of which none of the Atlantic coast waters produce. They are destined for the Woods Hole station for breeding purposes. A number of cray fish will be sent, which are said to be greatly superior to those found in New England. Several hundred clams, small and tender, coming from Tomales Bay, will be included in the shipment. The scientists pretend to say that eastern clams, so widely prized, can in no respect compare with the product of Tomales Bay. Fourteen Galapagos' island tortoises are directed to Wilmington. The largest weighs about one hundred pounds.

The Albatross will remain north on the scientific cruise as long as the weather permits. Returning to San Francisco, after the necessary repairs, she may go south for further work, either in the Gulf of California, or off California's southern coast. Much of her winter's explorations will depend upon the success of the present trip. Captain Tanner is an enthusiast in his work and an earnest student of pisciculture. Nearly all of the officers, while coming from the navy, are greatly interested in the mission of the Albatross. Messrs. Alexander, Lee and Townsend are the gentlemen forming the scientific corps.

Art of Worm Fishing For Trout.

Concluding a series of suggestions to worm fishers for trout, which embodied the results of an experience extending over some forty years of angling in many lands, our sometime contributor, Mr. E. M. Tod, sums up his ideas in relation to that style of fishing in the following words, which we take from the English Fishing Gazette:

First of all, let me observe that you must learn to be practical, and not too theoretical in order to become a first-rate worm fisherman; likewise, that you must possess an intuitive perception of the best feeding stations for the larger trout, and go with them always. In fishing deepish runs you must use rather a heavy sinker, say No. 4; and here let me say that if "half a gale of wind" is blowing down stream in your teeth, you are a fool if you fish without a sinker. If the river you are fishing is abnormally low (and, of course, clear), and if there is but little or no wind, a shot of any kind or description on your gut line is contra-indicated; as it likewise is in fishing some shallow tributary streams where the normal volume of water is small, and where you would only be constantly coming upon weeds, sticks, stones and other fouls. In such tributary streams and brooks you may do without a shot, but even here you must use your judgment, and if you come to a deep pool at the foot, say, of a high waterfall, and where the trout often abound, you may put on a sinker, and fish there in the most pot-hunting and cockneyfied manner imaginable, and perhaps out of one such "deep, dark pool," you may lure nearly half-a-dozen "fine fat fish" (if small); whereas in the reach just above or below it may run so shallow, and the bottom be so foul that you may want, if possible, to oil your worm in order to get it to float sufficiently well.

As for fishing in ponds, lakes, etc., with the worm I know absolutely nothing, and I care even less. This paper deals with sport, and worm fishing for trout in a pond is not sport.

I have at last come to the end of my tether, and I can only say before adding my signature, that if any young brother fisherman desires me to explain anything that does not appear quite clear in this purposely discursive, chatty paper, no one would be more delighted to turn his darkness into light than the writer of the paper.

It may appear at first sight very inconsistent to speak of fishing one still pool by throwing a foot in front of the trout, and then another still pool by throwing behind the trout. But herein lies the subtle distinction. In the first I described trout hovering on the surface feeding on flies during the hot summer months. The trout in this case is always or nearly always waiting for the next fly floating down stream, and cannot see with his tail, or even with the tail of his eye. In the other case you are fishing for trout which are not after flies, but have come into the shallows, eddies, etc., on purpose to pick up worms, minnows, oreopere, caddis, and so forth. Now, such fish have a trick of making a tour—a kind of "sentry go," as I called it—and hence the value of dropping the worm behind the fish. He turns round sooner or later, and goes for the worm, which must never be dead (half stunned, but still be wriggling about), for a dead worm few trout with any self respect will touch.

I will only add these words of caution. Do not be misled by me into thinking that I advocate fishing with the worm down stream, save under exceptional circumstances. But when I see my opportunity, I never hesitate to spin my worm, or to follow down some deep rapid, already fished up. The trial takes a few minutes, and cannot waste much time in a long day's fishing.

The great thing to aim at is to suit your method of fishing to the pool or stream that lies before you; but you never can be successful as a worm fisherman, if you do not fish quite nine-tenths of the entire (average) day up stream.

As an instance of what I have been driving at, many years ago, when fishing at Alford, Aberdeenshire, on the hotel water of the Don, myself and my friend B. got a day on the preserves at Kildrummie Castle water. We had several miles to drive, and made a rather late start. The water was very low, and there was quite a succession of broken streams—the very water for clear water worm. Alas the day was cloudy, and rather a strong breeze blew right down stream, making us renew a cast time after time—very much too frequently. By about 11:30 we both had done well, but I distinctly remember that I had no idea how to meet the case when the breeze became a gale of wind, blowing one's line down stream faster than one could pitch it up. After mid-day all chance of worm fishing was over, but I had even then about 15 pounds of splendid trout.

Now-a-days, if I found the trout keen as they were on that day, with the wind a gale down-stream, in a low water in July, I should put on my swivels and fish the streams with the spinning worm; and had I only but known how to do this on the day in question, I should probably have basketed 40 lbs. of trout, for from 10 to 11:30 most of my fish were taken, and my fine tackle was smashed amongst the stones more than once by big trout. It was just the thin water (tall of trout) best adapted for spinning the worm. But the method by no means pays for daily use. Far from this, it should only be tried when the trout seem to come shy at the worm when fished up-stream in the orthodox manner, one's crutch, and not one's staff, in fact; or, in a case like the foregoing, where a gale of wind utterly forbids fishing worm up-stream, and trout are keenly on the feed. In such cases, treat the worm as if it were a minnow and spin it; and, hark you, if you only make your worm wobble, and not spin rapidly, that worm won't do much execution.

I proved this once in a very special manner when fishing a thin ford on the Esk for herling and sea trout. No one had ever thought of spinning the worm, and poor Dicky Routledge was quite beaten that day, and yet I picked eleven fine herling off that short, shallow ford, breeze being up stream meanwhile, making a nice ripple. I noticed, however, that whenever the worm did not spin rapidly the fish came at it again and again shyly, and would not hook. You saw their silver sides gleam. Then I would alter the position of my books, and try it close to my feet, till I got it to spin perfectly, and I was almost sure of a fish the next cast.

Unhappily, both above and below for some distance there were hardly any streams, mostly deep pools, to fish which by spinning the worm would have been, more or less, a waste of time.

I remember Dicky's astonishment, for the word was thin, and of no extent, and waters so low that but for the breeze up stream, not even the spinning worm could have had much chance of success. But what "licked" him was, that he had never before seen any man spin a worm, and it was hitherto unheard of for the Esk sea-trout and herling. And well do I remember poor Dicky's salutation to me as I said good-bye to him. "Well, you have shown me one or two things quite new to me;" and he added jocosely; "Eh, but I will leather they sea troots wi' that spinnin' worm some day yet."

Whether he ever did; I cannot even guess, for he died before I went on my fishing trip in the following year. No better or more practical angler ever handled rod; and it was something to see how generously and with what a good spirit he grasped at the two new ideas—the worm spinning and my plan of dressing flies with the treble gut hinge. I tied several for him on Sunday at the Metal Bridge Inn. On the other hand, he imparted to me the secrets, of fishing the worm in pools (already described), and which both himself and his pupil said was so fascinating, that once acquired, it became a passion.

Let no mere thrower of a fly turn his celestial nose up as he reads of worm fishing as an art, for I speak the truth when I say that lots of men can fish with the fly tolerably—I don't speak of fly fishing from a boat in a Highland loch, which requires very little skill—who could no more fish the clear water worm properly than they could fly. For, besides the fact that it requires a peculiar knack to pitch the worm upwards, it takes considerable skill and knowledge to guide the line when it is thrown, and to know how to search a place thoroughly and rapidly demands much skill and experience, and I should pity any fisherman, however accomplished, who within the same day tried to fish with worm behind any good "clear water worm" fisher, for he would hardly catch a fish, whereas his friend in front would have filled his basket full.

The largest fish constantly fall victims to this method, which, I need not add, should never be practised upon streams where the privilege of angling extends to the artificial fly only; but there are abundance of rivers in the United Kingdom in which anglers may freely practise "the art of worm fishing in clear water."

The staff of this paper received last week a box of trout caught by our valued contributor Petronella at Webber Lake. They were of good size and very toothsome.

A gentleman of Sacramento who returned recently from a trip over the California and Oregon Railroad, reports an outrage which should have the immediate attention of the Fish Commissioners. He says that at Fraser's sawmill, about three miles this side of Dunsuir, a dam has been thrown across the river which makes it absolutely impossible for a salmon or other fish to get up the stream beyond that point. Until lately the sawdust from the mill was being dumped into the river, but that has now been stopped. The mill is on the east side of the river, and a bridge has been constructed over which the sawdust is now carried to the west side and dumped upon the rocks in such a position that when high water comes it will be carried down stream. Slabs line the banks and are lodged on the rifles for three or four miles below the mill, in one place shutting off the run of fish about as effectively as the dam itself.

Some distance above the Fraser dam is one almost completed by Anderson and Bailey, and another has been commenced at a point still farther up, but the first one is sufficient to prevent the fish from reaching the upper spawning grounds. The gentleman who gives this information is entirely reliable, and the attention of the Fish Commissioners is respectfully called to the matter.

Rookwood.

We heartily congratulate the proprietor of Abdallah Park on securing the young stallion Rookwood, a notice of which appears in another column. With two strains of thoroughbred so near as his grandams, one being by a thoroughbred mare and the other with her second dam a thoroughbred mare there is good backing to the double Hambletonian, Pilot Jr., Mambrino Chief and double strain of Bellfounder.

Presuming that his form is good (and Mr. Wilson would not have chosen him if that important factor was wanting) he should be a good mixture with other families beside those of Wilkes and Sultan. From the descriptions of Simmons, both as to his form and speed, and from our knowledge of Sultan the "Nick" with Rookwood can scarcely fail to be "happy."

Three Times Three for Stamboul.

We join in the acclamations which the telegraph informs us rung over the course again and again for the son of Sultan. Heartily and sincerely we join in the chorus of praise, and offer our warmest congratulations to Mr. Rose on the grand performance of his colt. In the first place it is a triumph for California, a practical and convincing endorsement of the ground we took fourteen years ago and never have surrendered, that this was the country above all others to breed and rear fast trotters. In the second none are more worthy of success than the man who was the pioneer in trotting-horse breeding in the southern country and who has never relaxed his efforts to promote the sport on this coast. Another grand result from the union of the families which trace to imported Messenger and the famous Barb Grand Bahaw, and a potent example of the value of high form in the trotter as well as the racehorse.

There is another feature which is of great significance, and though some narrow-minded men may question our sincerity we are "more than pleased" with the capacity Stamboul has shown for the bearing it has on the National Stallion Stake. We have argued from the first that with such a day and track as were presented when Sable Wilkes trotted in 2:18 and with the horses in good condition the stallion record will be lowered. When in his first race for the season Stamboul goes "round the turn" in 31½ seconds, to the half in 1:04½, three-quarters in 1:39½ and the mile in 2:15 it is only a question of health and order for him to go below 2:13½. From the first review when the nominations were made we have adhered to the belief that the race would prove the greatest contest ever witnessed in the way of harness sport, and orally as well as in published communications have voiced that belief. As this ground was taken on which had been done before the nominations were made the victory of Stamboul was as much a part of the prediction as is the future, and we have the fullest faith in its verification all through. The race of last Wednesday will (and very properly too) give Stamboul the call. The best of all tests to base a judgment upon is public performance, and many will argue that it is not likely that there is another California stallion which can equal the showing. For all that there are grounds for the prediction that 2:15-2:17½ and 2:16½ will not win with day and track favorable, and furthermore it is our individual belief that every one of the horses which are likely to start in it will be equal to the task of lowering these figures. This does not detract an iota from the well-deserved fame of Stamboul. He ranks now as the king of California stallions and anyone who disputes his title has either a want of candor or a lack of judgment. Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!! for the son of Sultan and Ruby.

Santa Rosa.

We were disappointed at not seeing a better list of entries from the Santa Rosa fair. The one trouble was the meeting at Los Angeles this week causing an apprehension of the ability to meet both engagements. The long distance between the two points is an obstacle which is difficult to overcome, and hereafter we hope that dates will be so arranged that there will be no jar. Now that San Diego has taken such a prominent place in the California Circuit, the better plan would seem to arrange Los Angeles dates after the last of the northern meetings and then that and San Diego would attract all the good horses of the upper country. Notwithstanding that so many of the Santa Rosa trotting purses did not fill it does not follow that there will be a failure in that part of the programme. Special purses will take the place of those which did not receive the stated number of entries, and specials are nearly sure to result in close and exciting contests. This comes from bringing together horses which are known to be not far apart in point of speed. Classification based on time heretofore made does not answer like qualification, but when the selection is guided by what the horses are actually doing there is a likelihood of interesting races. The Santa Rosa people have always been liberal in the sums appropriated for this class of races and people who have horses to take part in them need not be afraid of making the trip. The running events have filled well enough to insure good sport in that department. As will be learned from the list published, all except the selling race have received the required number of entries. The 2:30-2:25 pacing the 2:23, the 2:45, and the district 2:38 and three-year-old classes have filled with horses which are sure to offer attractive contests. The 2:30 with Judge, Franklin, Rosie Mc and Bonanza will set the speculators to guessing, and so will the 2:25 pacing when Little Hope, Damiana, Raquet, Victor, Gold Leaf and Prussian Boy "look horns." Thapsin, Gertrude Russell, Gus. Wilkes and Alfred S will make a great race of the 2:23, and the 2:45 in which are Sonnett, Lady Escott, Maggie E. Peribellion, Ben Ali and Direct is more than a puzzle although Maggie E. from her late victory at Los Angeles may have the call. From what we learn of the three year-olds engaged in the district and those in the 2:38 that section of the country will have some representations which would make a good showing in company not restricted to geographical lines. The 2:20, free-for-all pacing, the 2:25 and free-to all trotting are all that is necessary to provide for of the open races, and when the horses arrive it will be found an easy matter to provide for these lapses. That the Santa Rosa Fair will be a "grand gathering" is beyond reasonable doubt, and that there will be the usual large attendance is also assured. It is such a pleasant jaunt from San Francisco to Santa Rosa that the trip has enticements which is a drawing card. When to that is added the pleasure of the exhibition, it will be difficult to resist the combined attractions.

Golden Gate Entries.

At the time of writing the entries of many of the fairs have not been seen. Owing to having to rearrange the purses the Golden Gate did not formally announce the entries until Wednesday evening. As these are published in another column it is not necessary to go into a minute description. The racing events have filled so well that there is an absolute assurance of good sport in that line, and the trotting is not in a bad way by any means, if even the free-for-all 2:20 two-year-old and yearling did not secure the required number of participants. The new arrangement brings the stallion purse of $1,000 and the 2:27 pacing on the first day. The entries on the former are Stamboul, Guy Wilkes and Woodnut, and it must not be accepted as a "foregone conclusion" that Stamboul's great performance will either make the others "lay down their hands," or that the race will prove of the jug handle description. We have been informed that Goldsmith was better pleased with Guy than he ever had been at this stage of his preparation before, and a man who saw Woodnut a short time ago was enthusiastic over his appearance and exploits. The association has no reason to regret giving this purse or that it was decided to let it go with three entries. It is one of the grand attractions of the meeting, and the result at Los Angeles will intensify the desire to witness it. Coming on the first day there will be a large concourse, and it is well known that a crowd on the first day means a big attendance all through. Tuesday being a racing day with twelve two-year-olds in the first race, eight three-year-olds in the second, seven of all ages in the third and ten in the winding up dash of a mile, the interest of the first day will be increased, and these two insure the remaining. Inasmuch as a majority of the horses entered will come together before the Golden Gate Meeting we have no desire to speculate upon their relative chances. Santa Rosa and Petaluma will afford something to guide, and even then it will be a peer fellow who will know it all.

Mark Up the Figures.

Stamboul has made a new mark for a California bred trotter, and the fastest ever scored by a stallion on this coast, and the fourth in rank for all stallions. Maxie Cobb 2:13½, Phallas 2:12½, Patron 2:14½, Stamboul 2:15. The telegram being all we have to judge by, a proper estimate cannot be made until a full account is received. From that it would seem that Patron's time could have been beaten. The quarter in 31½ seconds and the half in 1:04½ was a "terrible rate" especially the first quarter, and a horse must necessarily be of great endurance as well as in the bloom of condition to stand the strain. Supposing that Stamboul went the whole of the mile as well as he could, and it is evident that the first quarter was too fast to ensure the fastest mile. Had the first quarter been made in 34 seconds, the half in 2:07 it is nearly a foregone conclusion that the mile would have been one, perhaps two seconds faster than 2:15. It may be that Arab forced him to that great speed in order to retain the lead, though that is not likely and the probabilities are that he was sent off at his best clip and kept at it for the whole of the circuit. It will not do to argue from this assumption that Stamboul quit. There is a limit to the powers of horse or man. When muscular tissue is depended upon for motive force, there must be a husbanding of the supply, and when the stroke of a trotter is fast enough to be equal to a rate of a mile in 2:06 or when a race-horse can show a quarter in 23 seconds, if the throttle valve is opened to its full extent it is certain that there will not be steam enough to keep up the pressure.

Stamboul has marked up the figures for the Stallion Stakes. We are well pleased that he has done so. A couple of weeks ago a prominent trainer from Sacramento was at the Oakland Park and of course, the National was discussed. He said that three heats in 2:18 would win, our opinion that there was not a horse in it which had not a good chance to do that, and that three seconds could be taken off his mark without making a "dead certainty" for the horse which could reach these high figures. While there is not a doubt that the stallions engaged in the coming purses and stakes would have been given every attention without the stimulus of 2:15, it is likely to have a good effect in awakening them to a realization of the situation. It is peculiarly gratifying to us in many ways. Pleasant always to have predictions fulfilled, doubly so when the prophesy is held to be altogether too rosy. When the National was gotten up many had the impression that a record of 2:15½ would frighten everyone out. Nine nominations disposed of that "foolish notion," the plea entered in this journal that the fastest stallion record for California was sure to be rubbed out, has been answered in the affirmative at the first meeting of the circuit.

Los Angeles Fair.

There is so much worthy of extended comment at the Los Angeles Fair, and with the meeting still under way, that anything like an extended review cannot be written this week. In this section, while the race of Stamboul created the greatest excitement among the trotting fraternity, race-horse fanciers were struck with amazement at the performance of Laura Gardner, which is within a quarter of a second of the best on record, and that with her "full weight up." Whereas the fastest was made by Dry Monopole, a four-year-old, with twelve pounds below the schedule. The time of Laura Gardner, 2:07½, is the fastest made this year.

There are always plenty of people who are ready to carp, and the fast time made in so many instances has given rise to questioning the length of the course. As the Los Angeles track is a member of one or both the associations, a certificate of it being the proper length must have been filed. Mr. DeCamp will set this matter at rest by sending us a copy for publication.

The Fair Entries.

The entries to the fairs were received so late, some of them being not yet received, that there was not time for comments. Taken together there is a good prospect, and there can be little doubt that the fairs of this year will, by long odds, be the greatest exhibitions ever seen in California, and that is saying a good deal.

Send the Entries.

The secretaries of the association will be remiss in their duties if they fail to send copies of the entry list as soon as it is possible for them to do so. This is especially necessary with the fairs which are held at the earliest dates. We desire to notice them fully, but cannot do so without knowing what the entries are.

Reader, San Jose, Cal.

July 28th we published your inquiry in regard to Baby Mine. Mr. Dudley gives us the following information:

Baby Mine, blk m, foaled 1881, bred by John Burns of Stockton, sold in 1882 with her dam to P. W. Dudley of Oakland. The dam Lady Burns (bred by J. Burns) was by Black Boy; second dam, a big fine road mare, pedigree untraced at present. She was owned by John Oliver. Black Boy was bred by Judge Brown and was by McCracken's Black Hawk.

J. M. Gray, Fresno, Co., Cal.

Will you be kind enough to give me the breeding of Joseph now running in the East, is he a son of General Beale's Joseph of N. J.?

Answer—Joseph is by Duke, from Brademante and therefore a half brother to The Bard.

George C. Smith, Santa Maria, Cal.

Please let me know the record of Doty and where he made it. I think the horse was raised by Wm. M. Doty, Meridian, Sutter Co., Cal., and the sire of the horse is Challenge, No. 1698, he by Sherman's Black Hawk, 142.

Answer—2:21, San Jose, Oct. 3d, 1878.

Name Changed.

Kodiak, instead of Scythian, for bay colt, black points, near hind foot white, foaled April 26th, 1883, by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny by Bonner, second dam Sophia by Williamson's Belmont. This colt is full brother to Gus Wilkes, and belongs to Capt. Irvin Ayers.

Unusual Vitality.

D. H. McIntyre, grocer, of Johnson's Junction, Ky., is authority for the statement that Mrs. Eliza Reeves, of Plummer's Landing, has a mare now in her 38th year. Said mare is a black, raised in Carter county, Kentucky, and is daily used upon the farm or road, standing up to her work as well as the younger horses. The mare has a colt only one year old, being thirty seven when said colt was foaled. McIntyre says he has known the mare for sixteen years; that in that time she has had fourteen colts, slipped one foal, and barren this year.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

Si Holloway who went East to ride Grover Cleveland returned last Wednesday. Matt Storn will come back with Fred Gebhardt's horses.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

FIRST DAY.

The races were called at one o'clock with four events, on the card, but with the usual first day difficulty in organizing the forces it was after two o'clock before the horses came out for the first race. The attendance was excellent for a Monday opening, some two thousand people being on the grounds. The grand stand was well filled and the carriage paddock resplendent with equipages. The dusty state of the roads leading to the park precluded any display of toilettes, and the ladies who were numerous, contented themselves with travelling costumes. The day was beautiful a warm morning, but a cool breeze at the track that made everybody feel comfortable and enjoy the sport.

The first race was a running purse for two-year-olds with eight youngsters at the post. They gave the starter some trouble to handle them, and when they did get the flag Odette stood still and never moved until the field had run nearly a quarter of a mile. Her jockey was mainly to blame in the matter. He appeared to be dazed by the size of the field, and afraid to go up among the plunging mob that struggled for the best of the start. The winner turned up in Lady Helen, but there were others in the lot as good as she had they had her advantages of good luck and good riding. The local talent was very sweet on Four Aces, Odette and Fandango, and free with offers to match the daughter of Norfolk after she won the race.

After a long delay they were sent off without Odette, who was left standing. Lady Helen was in front, and jumped away with the lead, Fandango lapped on, Wild Oats third and Four Aces fourth. Helen and Fandango raced around the turn together, drawing away a couple of lengths from the bunch, the Billy Lee colt contesting every stride. Four Aces ran out on the turn and lost his chance, though he straightened and came again, but too late. At the head of the stretch Wild Oats came up, and a punishing finish resulted between her and Fandango for the place, Fandango getting it by half a length. Lady Helen won by three parts of a length without much riding at the finish. The rider of Fandango complained that both Wild Oats and Helen interfered with him in the run, but the judges overruled the objection.

August 6th—Purse $300; for two-year-olds; $195 to first, $75 to second, $30 to third. Half a mile.

The second event was a mile for all ages with ten starters. The betting was warm, Laura Gardner having the smallest of margin, Idalene Cotton next, then the field and Welcome. They were a long time at the post. Sprey (a sister to Jim Renwick), and Moses B. being especially unruly and hard to manage. After several break away the starter lowered his flag to the top of the fence to await the return of the horses which movement the assistant took to be a go and struck his flag. The horses were scattered but away they went, Carmalita leading for a quarter, but Gardner moved to the front ere long, and came in first, Cotton second, Welcome third. In pulling up after passing the wire Dell stumbled and fell, and from the stand it looked as though he rolled over his jockey, but fortunately the boy went off forward under the horse's head, and although at first appeared badly hurt was all right the next morning, though bruised and shaken by the fall. Dell was considerably cut up and battered and cut up, and was withdrawn. The judge ordered the horses to the post again immediately and Gardner repeated the operation beating her field easily. Carmalita was the good thing for the horse speculators, but she failed utterly to justify their confidence this time. Stuart had the mount, the same boy who made the fiasco on Odette in the first race, and rode the mare badly, but Gardner is fit and well just now, ready to meet all comers of her class. Details:

After some trouble at the post with Sprey and Moses B. and a mistake of the assistant starter that sent the horses clear around the course, they got away with Moses B. in the lead, Gladstone second and Gardner third. Moses laid aside his sulks for the time and took a fancy for running. He had three lengths of daylight behind him at the quarter, where Gladstone was two lengths ahead of Gardner. On the back quarter Gardner moved up to Gladstone and raced the courage out of him in short order. She gradually overhauled Moses B., passed him at the three-quarter mark and won handsily enough by two lengths; Colton third by a length and abalf and a head in front of Welcome's fourth.

The gallopers now retired and the harness division took possession of the course. The free for all pace was first in order, and Gold Leaf, Belmont Boy, San Diego and Patchen T. were to contend. The race amounted to a procession only. Before the start it was whispered that Belmont Boy might do something, and there was some betting with the mare a long favorite, but after a heat there was no further business. Belmont Boy gave an exhibition of back jumping but not much pacing, Gold Leaf winning in straight heats with ridiculous ease.

The 2:45 trotting purse came next and was another walk over. A few pools were sold at $100 for Maggie E. to $20 for all the rest, but only a few, and the pool seller was without an occupation. Pink won the first heat plainly by consent and then Maggie wound the business up. At the close of the second heat the Palo Alto representative, Aldeana, was badly distressed and the judges allowed her to be withdrawn.

Aug. 7th. The second day saw an increased attendance, although the card was short and at first sight offered little chance for good sport. The ladies equestrian tournament was the first attraction of the day. Three ladies contested for the prizes, but Miss Irene Savage of Los Neitos was first, the judges and spectators being unanimous in her favor. She was mounted on a spirited horse and handled him with grace and courage. During the exercises her horse attempted to bolt the track through an open gate, but she brought him to terms in a way that secured a round of applause from the spectators and made the verdict in her favor a certainty. Miss Sarah Baker of Norwalk was awarded second prize, and Miss Fannie McElfresh of Santa Monica third.

The first race on the programme was the Southern California trotting stakes for three-year-olds. It had originally eleven nominations, but they all scratched but C. A. Durfee's b c Raymon by Simmons, dam Lady Raymond, and he walked over for the stakes, jogging the mile in 3:05.

The first contested race was the trot for the 2:23 class. Consideration $1,000. Alfred S. Valentine and Maid of Oaks started. The Maid quite lame, but game to the back bone. Alfred was such a favorite as to almost preclude betting, and after a few pools at $100 to $10 for the field Alfred was barred and speculation confined to second place. Valentine brought $45 to $11 for the Maid.

First Heat—Alfred lay alongside Valentine most of the way keeping a head in advance until within a hundred yards of the wire when he drew away a couple of lengths and won in a jog, Valentine second, the Maid third. Time 2:21.

Second Heat—In the second mile there was a slight variation. Alfred led by three lengths down the back quarter and around the lower turn, but in the stretch he made a tired looking break and swerved to the fence, Valentine and the Maid both besting him home finis. Alfred S. looked very weary when being called out and did not sweat out as a horse in good condition should. There was a hum of talk among the betting men and when the pool seller was ready for business the field sold even with the whilom favorite. The speculators gradually recovered their equilibrium, however, and at the close rates were: Alfred $50, field $27. Alfred was as dry as a chip, but won the third and fourth heats without difficulty, making his backers happy and spreading a smile over the face of his genial owner, Mr. H. W. Seale.

Aug. 7th—Trotting—Purse $1,000; 2:23 class.

Time, 2:21, 2:25, 2:23½, 2:25.

The district 2:35 class, an extra race, was then called and betting men had a taste of the glorious uncertainty of home racing. Dubec, Don Tomas and Pond Lilly were the starters. Dubec valued at $100 to $50 for the other trio. At this rate a great deal of money went on but did not come off. Don Tomas won in straight heats, never letting Dubec get closer than his wheel, and apparently trotting well without in himself all the time. It was simply a procession without change from first to last.

Same Day—Trotting. Purse $300. District 2:35 class.

Entering the grounds, we found trainer Golden entertaining a group of horsemen, among which were W. H. Wilson, of Cynthia, Ky. Mr. Wilson is as wide awake as ever, and reports that the trotting interests in the Blue Grass section are in a flourishing condition. He had been up to see Warder, with view of inducing Col. Hale to part with him, but, fortunately for New England breeders, his efforts were unavailing. Mr. Wilson has introduced a number of noted trotting stallions into the South. Among these were George Wilkes, which he induced Mr. Simmona to send there in 1873. Goldsmith's, Abdallah, 2:30; Smuggler, 2:15½; Jubilee Lambert, 2:25; Kaiser, by George Wilkes, dam by Dictator, and Sultan, 2:24, the most wonderful sire of his age yet produced.

The following private note from the well-known proprietor of Abdallah Park shows that he has not been idle during his visit to New England:

"I have secured the stallion Rookwood, five years old, by Wedgewood, 2:19, out of Noontide, 2:20½, by Harold, sire of Mand S., 2:08½; second dam Midnight, dam of Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, by Pilot Jr., to breed on Wilkes and Sultan mares, at Abdallah Park, Cynthia, Ky. I think no better bred colt lives, and that, considering his blood, he has a good chance to be a sire of trotters as any untitled stallion. The dam of Wedgewood, 2:19, also produced Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½, and if Noontide proves to be a great brood mare, why is not the blood of this colt as good as can be bred at this date?

The colt is certainly a royally-bred one, and he is going to a locality where such a gilt-edged combination of trotting strains will be appreciated.

The Blue Ribbon Meeting.

There were some notable events at the Detroit Meeting. Guy redeemed himself by making the fastest mile to the credit of the three minute class, and he is thus pictured in a letter to The Horseman.

DETROIT, Mich., July 30, 1888.

ED. HORSEMAN.—Guy, the trotting wonder was foaled at Stony Ford, N. Y., in the early summer of 1880, and is eight years old, a black gelding about 15½ hands high and weighs 945 pounds. He is by Kentucky Prince, dam Flora Gardner, by American Star. He was bought for $400 at the Kellogg sale in New York in the spring of 1883 by Jacob D. Perkins of Cleveland, O. Mr. Perkins' trainer, Jim McKeever, gave him some work, and in the spring of 1884 he began to show some very fast pieces of miles, and at a matinee trotted a full mile in 2:21½. A few weeks later W. J. Gordon paid $10,000 for him, $6,000 down and $4,000 when he could show 2:20. In the fall George Sanders gave him a mile in 2:19½. In 1884 and 1885 Tom Dunbar was then the Gordon trainer. During that season Dunbar drove Clingstone and Guy several exhibition team miles, and in Cleveland the pair went in 2:17. But the high-spirited youngster was a bad actor, and nothing reliable came from him in single harness. In 1886 John Splau had the Gordon stable. He tried to break Guy's spirit and failed. He was then weak, and it was near the end of the season, but he was meaner than ever. During 1887 he was allowed to rest and gain. Millard Sanders began to jog him last March, and with gentle treatment his temper improved and his speed came to him very quickly. All his work was in company.

Three weeks ago he trotted a mile for Sanders on the Cleveland track in 2:16½, and later one in 2:15, middle half in 1:05½. Sanders says of him: "When I took him up I had no idea that Guy had never been properly balanced. I experimented with him, and in all his work he starts in with eleven-ounce shoes and three-ounce weights in front and five-ounce bar-shoes behind. In last Tuesday's race he carried four-ounce weights. I reduce his weight as he goes heats to two ounces in the second and none afterwards, the work steadying the gelding as he goes along. His double gait inclination comes while he is going at half-speed. He wears quarter boots and buckskin rolls in front, and scalpers and shin boots behind. He is rigged with a perfection bit and nose band and over-draw check attached to the lines."

Guy has already shown plenty of quarters in 31½ seconds, and is regarded as a phenomenon likely to make a mile in 2:10 or better with a little more shaping up and racing education. Sanders says: "I think I can give him a mile in 2:13 in a week on a good track." The gelding is named after Mr. Perkins' favorite child, a bright boy, who would be as old as Guy had he lived.

The "regular" of The Horseman has this to say about him: The special between the two great horses, Guy and Prince Wilkes, excited unwonted interest and awoke the audience to almost frenzied demonstrations of applause. It was in many respects a remarkable race. Guy was known to possess extreme speed, but was considered unmanageable. Great credit is due Millard Saunders for his success in making this horse tractable and controllable. Mr. Saunders informs me that he had not prepared the horse for such a race, and would be well pleased if he made a respectable showing. That he won two heats and his horse acted so well was a gratification to himself and his friends.

The former effort of Guy at Detroit was disastrous, and it seems peculiarly appropriate that his first success should be on the field of his defeat. From the account in the Detroit letter we are of the opinion that the gentle treatment had more to do with balancing him than shoes and toe-weights. Whatever the system pursued, Mr. Saunders is entitled to a great deal of credit. The next event which can be classed as notable was the victory of the California-bred pacer Arrow. We copy The Horseman's account of the race:

The third race of the day was for the free-for-all pacers. Little Mack drew the pool, Arrow second, Puritan third, Dan D. fourth, Gossip Jr., fifth and Mike Wilkes sixth. Budd Doble drove Arrow, Abe Rohrbach Mike Wilkes, Van Ness Gossip, Newbro Dan D. and Caeo Little Mack. Little Mack led at the quarter by three lengths, Dan D. second, Puritan third and Mike Wilkes fourth. At the half Mack led by four lengths, with Dan D. second and Mike Wilkes a close third. At the three-quarters Mack led by three lengths, Mike Wilkes was second and Arrow third. Down the stretch Mack paced fast, and Mike Wilkes, with a terrific burst of speed, made play for the heat. Half way from the distance to the wire he was at Mack's wheel, and each of them was taking the whip freely. Mack won by half a length, Mike second, Dan D. third, Arrow fourth, Puritan fifth and Gossip sixth. Time, 2:16½.

Second Heat—Pools sold: Field, $25, Arrow, $25. This was an exciting heat. It was evident that Doble was out for the heat. Mack led to the quarter by a length, Arrow was second, Dan D. third and Mike fourth. At the half Mack led by a length, with Arrow second, four lengths in the lead of Dan D. Gossip was fourth. At the three-quarters Mack, Arrow and Gossip were well hunched, and down the stretch they came fast, until at a point five lengths from the wire Gossip broke and Arrow won by a length. Gossip was second, Mack third, Dan D. fourth, Mike Wilkes fifth and Puritan distanced. Time, 2:14½.

Third Heat—Pools: Arrow, $50; field, $15. The heat was between Arrow and Gossip and was a contest from wire to wire. They got away to an even start. At the quarter Arrow showed a length in the lead, with Gossip second, Dan D. third and Mack fourth. The second quarter was paced as a team, Arrow being a neck in the lead. At the half Gossip was second and Mack third. On the upper turn Gossip broke but lost little ground, and at the three-quarters they were on even terms and paced down the stretch head and head to the distance, where Arrow showed half a length in the lead, and in this position he went under the wire. Gossip was second, Mack third, Mike Wilkes fourth and Dan D. distanced. Arrow's time was 2:15½ and Gossip's 2:15½.

Fourth Heat—This heat was another fight between Gossip and Arrow, with Mike Wilkes a dangerous competitor. They went to the turn head and head, but at the quarter Arrow showed a length in the front. Gossip was second and Mike Wilkes a good third. At the half Arrow led by two lengths, with Gossip second. These were the positions until rounding into the stretch, where Gossip and Mike Wilkes made a supreme effort and succeeded in getting to Arrow's wheel. Arrow won by nearly a length, with Mike Wilkes second and Gossip third. Time, 2:16½.

In addition to the description of the heats, the following general portrayal will be found interesting. DETROIT, Mich., July 26, 1888.—There were four heats trotted yesterday in the free-for-all pace. The fastest heat was 2:14½, the slowest, 2:16½, and the average was 2:15½. It was an exciting contest, and that the finishes were close is shown by the fact that in the third heat the winner's time was 2:15½, and the time of the second horse was 2:15½. It was won by Budd Doble's bay gelding Arrow, which last year as a four-year-old paced to a record of 2:14. This is his first race on this side the mountains, and Mr. Doble was naturally anxious to see how he would behave in hot company. It is sufficient to say he acted like a gentleman from start to finish. Gossip, Mike Wilkes and Ed Mack were fast.

The 2:18 trot was conceded to Rosaline Wilkes, and it showed her a great mare. It also showed that Loretta F. is a much better mare this year than ever before. There were four heats in the race. The fastest was 2:17½, the slowest 2:19½, and the average about 2:18½. Rosaline's time in the four heats was 2:20, 2:18½, 2:18½ and 2:17½. Loretta's time was 2:19½, 2:19½, 2:18½ and 2:18½. Each of the grand mares was steady and exhibited extreme speed and racehorse qualities.

There were eleven heats during the day. The slowest was 2:25, the fastest 2:14½, and the grand average was 2:19½. It is a remarkable showing, and indicates great contests, superb animals and a perfect track.

The attendance was unusually large, reminding us of the great day of last year. The interest in the first race was manifest, but when in the first heat of the pace Little Mack came sweeping down the stretch with Mike Wilkes in a seemingly hopeless stern chase, yet gradually narrowing the distance until he finished at Mack's wheel, the enthusiasm knew no bounds, and broke forth without restraint. It was not remarkable time, yet it was fast. But it was a contest, and each of the noble animals was straining every nerve, and every muscle was stretched to its utmost tension. They fought a good fight, and the laurels were not alone with the victor. As they neared the distance stand it was evident a great battle was imminent, and the occupants of the grandstand rose en masse, and with eager eyes and bated breath anxiously awaited the result. As they neared the wire a sound was heard which, commencing in a gentle murmur, like the rippling waters of a brook or the rustling of leaves among the trees, gradually grew in volume, when with an electric finish they swept under the wire, then the great audience with one accord gave vent to their pent up feelings in one loud, prolonged storm of rapturous applause, which grew until it sounded like the noise of the rushing waters of Niagara.

In the third heat, where Arrow had the pole and Gossip was second as they went away head and head; it was evident there was to be a great contest. The interest was almost painful, and in all that amphitheatre scarcely a word was spoken. With every eye strained, the people watched with breathless interest the magnificent struggle, and when it was evident the Californian had it safe, a sigh of relief could be heard, and spectators were absolutely weary and worn with the intensity of feeling and excitement.

The 2:30 pacing race was won by Budd Doble after a struggle which took six heats to bring to a close, the last being the fastest. He is thus described in the Horseman:

Budd Doble is a rangy bay gelding, by Indianapolis, 2:21, dam by Stocking Chief. He is five years old, and was bred at Abdallah Park by W. H. Wilson. Until he was four years old he trotted, showing better than a 2:30 gait. He developed a sudden inclination to pace, and was this spring given to Budd Doble, his namesake, to train.

This conveys a wrong impression, however, as he paced four races last year and was a close second to Frank Champ in 2:17½. Until Arrow made 2:14 at the same age this was thought to be about the top-notch for a four-year-old pacer.

Whitestocking is another from a dam of "unknown" blood to gain renown. In the summary his sire is given as Bob Stewart, though we have seen it stated that his sire was also in the unknown class. The closing paragraphs are copied in order to give our readers the impressions of a looker-on. Notices have appeared in some of the papers that the meeting was a failure. While it was a hard battle, in which the elements were in opposition, still the victory must rest with the association, although in all probability with pecuniary loss. The summaries are appended.

The second great Blue Ribbon meeting is over and has already passed into history. Like all public events, it will be subject to criticism. We imagine that in almost every instance it will be of a kindly and friendly nature. It will be noted for the efficient and painstaking management of its officers and their employees. The attention to details was unusual and very commendable, and the dignity with which the misfortune of two days' rain was received, and the cheerful manner in which the association gave $2,000 races to only two starters was the object of admiration.

It was of course, their duty, but it was done without a murmur or complaint. Drivers and owners seemed desirous to co-operate with the officers in making a good meeting, and there was a dignity about it which augurs well for the turf. Messrs. Bride and Armstrong had the pool privileges, and they were conducted efficiently and in a spirit of fairness which gave universal satisfaction.

Lem Ullman programmed the meeting in an acceptable manner. His caps and jackets were fresh, and the colors well chosen.

As the fourth heat in the great appeal was concluded the night was coming on apace and long gray shadows were stealing over the track. There was almost feverish anxiety manifested by the audience as to whether the grand contest could be concluded. It was a great turf battle, and the people desired to see it fought to a finish. Mr. Campan rang the bell and said: "I have instructed the drivers to appear on time. It is all that I can do," and in the gray, cold light of the evening the audience waited patiently for the horses to appear and welcomed them with cheers and demonstrations of delight.

It has been to your scribe a long, hard day. To watch during eight hours of continuous trotting the details of twenty heats is hard and trying work, but we are happy in having witnessed a day of superb sport of the kind we so dearly love.

As we conclude our report the great tower clock slowly tolls the hour of midnight. The day is done and is already fading into the past, and as the last strokes of the clock around the knell of the departing day, we "wrap the drapery of our couch about us," and lie down to pleasant dreams, saying to our friends and all the world, good-night.

Hippophagy in Paris.

It is not very probable that in India Englishmen will take to Hippophagy unless the whirligig of time brings them into subjection to a new Hindoo dynasty, which shall prohibit the slaughter of kine and make it impossible to procure beef. But it is to be observed that in Paris there is a rapid increase in the consumption of horseflesh; and though it is said that it is chiefly among the poorer classes, there is reason to fear that the flesh of the noble animal finds its way more than is quite desirable into the cuisine of cheap restaurants. Who is there among us who in traveling through Paris to or from India has not been invited by some economical friend to go and have a splendid dinner for almost a nominal cost at some gorgeous but cheap restaurant? Seeing the number and variety of dishes presented to the customer's choice under appetizing names, the question at once suggests itself—"How can they afford to do it at the price?" and the answer is pleasantly—or unpleasantly—augmented in the suspicion that the surreptitious use of cheap horseflesh is the secret of successful management. It is alleged that in Paris there are 150 horse butchers who openly practice their calling, besides the hawkers and other itinerant vendors who visit the suburbs. The increase in the number of horses slaughtered for food is portentous. In 1886 only 862 animals were killed, but in 1887 the number had increased to 15,000, which is said to represent 8,000,000 pounds of eatable meat. The Parisians try to persuade themselves that all this is consumed by the poorer classes; but those who have good means of getting correct information are not able to satisfy themselves on this point. There are some people who profess to believe that the meat of a succulent filly is hardly distinguishable from beef; but unfortunately that is not the sort of animal slaughtered; it is the old and tough that are usually brought to market, and still worse if the horrible suggestion that many of them are suffering from disease.—Asian.

Entrance fee, ten per cent. of purse to accompany nomination.
In all trotting and pacing races, three moneys, viz., 60, 30 and 10 per cent, except Trotting Stake Races, Nos. 5 and 9, in which money to be divided, and races trotted according to published conditions.

All races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.
American Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and no added money.

A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third money.

In all trotting and pacing races, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare a race off when there are less than three to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries.
When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money only, divided 66% and 33%.

Races to commence each day at 2 p. m.
Our track has had a thorough coating of loam, and is now the best and fastest track in the State.
Entries close August 1, 1888.

E. TOPHAM, President.
G. H. BRAGG, Secretary.

to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and no added money.

A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third money.

In all races, entries not declared on by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any district race that has not been owned in the district six months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the American Association and rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association, and expulsion from this Association.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.
National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein otherwise specified.
The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entry and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races.

If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

The Stockton track is one of the fastest in the world.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp. Stables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the one and two-year-old trot, unless otherwise specified. Five to enter and three to start in all the above races. But the Board reserves the right in all the races in the above programme to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee ten per cent. of purse to accompany nomination. Purse of four moneys divided at the rate of fifty per cent. to the first horse, twenty-five per cent. to second, fifteen per cent. to third, and ten per cent. to fourth.

National Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

In case any named race for a certain day does not fill, the Board reserves the right to change the date of any other event on the programme if deemed necessary, the notice being given to the parties interested at any time previous to August 15th.

If in the opinion of the judges, before starting a race that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the fair, it may be continued or declared off, at the option of the judges.

In all races entries not declared off by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named at 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

The rules of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association will govern running races.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entries to all of the above races to close with the Secretary on Wednesday, August 1, 1887.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nominations. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 60 per cent to the first horse, 30 per cent to the second and 10 per cent to the third.

American Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money to be divided as follows, 66 2/3 to the first and 33 1/3 to the second.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named at 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over, except as otherwise specified. Running races will be conducted under the rules of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association.

Non-starters in running races will be held for an entrance, under Rule 3. Racing colors to be named in entries. In trotting races, drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary on Wednesday, August 14th, 1888.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary.

The district embraces all the territory north of the Bay of San Francisco and west of the Sacramento River. District horses must have been owned in the district six months prior to closing of entries.

JNO. N. BAILHACHE, President.
GEORGE A. TUPPER, Sec'y.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90-class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

The National Association.

The following description of the workings of the Secretary's office of the great National Trotting Association is given by a writer from Hartford, Conn., in the Kentucky Stock Farm:

"To the mass of people interested in the trotting turf of the National Trotting Association is a mysterious and vague name. That it exists, and that it exercises a powerful control over many incidents of the turf is, indeed, known to most horsemen, but comparatively few realize its power, its work or its methods, or have ever learned to regard it as a strong, separate entity, very beneficial in its character to those who will follow honest courses, and a terror to evil-doers.

It was founded nearly twenty years ago, in the days when comparatively few gentlemen were willing to be known as trotting horsemen, and when a trotting race track was regarded as a less respectable place to attend than is now a cheap show on the Bowery or a third rate prize fight at Long Island City. But in the last two decadestimes have changed greatly in this respect. The breeding and the speeding of trotters, whether for the road or track, has achieved high respectability, and has become an amusement and a source of profit for all classes, including clergymen, scholars, statesmen, financiers and mighty merchants. It is no longer limited to livery stable keepers and the proprietors of country taverns. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been invested in it, and has it as grown the National Association has grown with it, until to-day it has attained rank and honor among the great American institutions. To-day trotting men all over the land think and speak of Hartford much as the blanketed Indians do of Washington, which is their expression for a supreme being, unseen, but of unlimited and awful power.

For many years the business of the Association was principally guided by its secretary, Thomas F. Vail, and to his commanding ability and tireless devotion very much of the success of the Association is due. Last year, through circumstances which are fresh in the memory of all horsemen, Mr. Vail resigned and was succeeded by Mr. M. M. Morse, an experienced horseman and clear-headed gentleman, who is now the guiding genius and guardian of its affairs:

The offices of the Association are, as they have been for many years, at the corner of Main and Pratt streets, Hartford, Conn. Here are kept all the records of the business affairs of the Association as well as the judges' books, from which the statistics of the trotting and pacing races are obtained. Under Mr. Vail's administration the care of the books and documents and the large correspondence of the affair were systematized in a very wonderful way, and the methods of the office remain unchanged in the main under his successor.

The offices performed by the National Association are various. It is, to begin with, as its name implies, a business union of many tracks for mutual support and protection. Its principal occupation in this direction is in the collection of unpaid entrance money. In theory entrance money is paid when the entry is made, but in practice this is rarely done until a race is about to be started. But the making of the entry holds the nominator, whether the horse starts or not, and disqualification arising from non-payment of entrance money follows both horse and owner. Almost always after a meeting the track notifies the National Association of some horses and owners that have not paid entrance, and such charges are promptly and accurately placed on the books at Hartford. The delinquents thereafter are carefully watched, and wherever or whenever they attempt to start on tracks in membership they are confronted by the olim, and are ineligible to start until it is settled. A similar course is followed in relation to fines or penalties imposed by any member, so that the two hundred tracks that make up the association can act as one in the collection of money, and in the enforcement of the trotting rules and their penalties.

Another, and a very important part of the work of the association, is in the detection and punishment of ringers and other enemies to turf morality. For these two first named objects constant vigilance and highly trained intelligence are required. Trifling clues, that would escape most people, must serve here, and it is very interesting to observe how ingeniously the evidences of fraud are pieced together from the bald data supplied by summaries and entry lists.

A third, and a very troublesome, though most important part of the work, is the collection and payment of money, and the care of the innumerable amounts rendered necessary by the volume of the business. All of this is done by one clerk, and it is quite within bounds to say that any New York merchant or financier would employ three good men to handle the same number of accounts involving the same amount of money. But the revenue of the association is very limited, and, though the work is severe, it is carefully and safely done, though by a wonderfully small force.

A visit to the offices of the association is sure to be interesting and instructive to any one who has dealings with the association. The personnel of the office has changed but little since Mr. Vail's resignation.

A subject of Interest.

What shall we do to make our trotting meetings more attractive, is undoubtedly the question that agitates the mind of every intelligent Secretary of a trotting association. There is a strong feeling that the old three in five heat contests lack the requisite excitement to attract the masses of the people, and that it is absolutely necessary to add other attractions in order to insure the attendance of the multitude. Hence we see on our trotting programmes, chariot races by running horses, equestrienne races by running horses, trick horse exhibitions, and various other entertainments which pertain more to the circus than to the genuine arena of the race-course. The question may very properly be asked, why cannot the trotting and pacing horse, if given a fair opportunity, be equally attractive. We think he can. If it is no disgrace for a thoroughbred to be known as only good for one fast mile, or a faction thereof, why should his trotting brother be consigned to obscurity because he cannot live through a contest of three, or possibly six heats. We know that we shall be met with the statement that long contests are necessary to maintain the stamina of our trotters. But why should we be deprived of the exhibitions of extreme speed by horses known to possess it, which are not capable of maintaining their own in regular contests. We regard the three in five heat contests as the leading features of a trotting programme, but we think that trotting and pacing races, under other and shorter conditions, would be popular, and add vastly to the excitement of our meetings. On this subject one of the most able and popular turf writers of the day, and a thoroughly practical trainer and driver, writes us as follows:

Most of the free-for-all candidates are badly off. Harry Wilkes has "a leg." Oliver K. shows lameness after sharp work. Mambrino Sparkle has done nothing to indicate that she is in good form. Guy will probably figure in the stake races, and is liable to make a disastrous break in a free-for-all company. Belle Hamlin and her owner seem to be in favor of shorter heat races or dashes, which virtually leaves Prince and Rosaline Wilkes as the mainstays. They cannot electrify the audience or fill the air with acclamations, as the Maid, Rarus, Hopeful, St. Julien, Maud S. and Jay-Eye-See used to do. The situation affords a capital opportunity to introduce the dash system of racing. Take the free-for-all appropriations and divide the money between two classes of speedy sprinters. There is a growing feeling in favor of dash races, with all kinds of betting facilities. Heat races should be started early in the afternoon, and so avoid the bane of postponement. The pool seller, like the bookmaker at the running meeting, should be required to settle immediately after the judges' decision. He should not be granted the sole control of auction, French and booking privileges. Away with monopoly! The stereotyped race of mile heats, best three in five, has grown monotonous and is no longer considered the alpha and omega of trotting sport, nor does it conserve all interests. True, the breeding and development of the American trotting-horse is a prosperous industry. Stock farms, small and great, are in a tive operation all over the country. The great fall fairs are attended by vast assemblages, and the speed ring is of paramount importance and interest in their eyes. But in the large cities the masses do not flock to the trotting park as formerly, unless when the great flyers meet, or some special attraction is on the programme. There is a leading to further fame for Belle Hamlin. Let her endeavor to equal or surpass Maud S.'s record of 2:13½ at Fleetwood during the New York Club's Grand Circuit meeting in September next. Then the queen might be permitted to enter the lists, merely for the object of recording a faster heat for a cap, as she did before. Such rivalry would draw a multitude of race goers to the scene of action.

In this communication there is a considerable food for thought. The practical question will at once occur, is it not better for the interests of trotting sport to give purses for mile dashes to fast trotters and pacers than to ignore them and supply the necessary excitement by a couple of out-classed runners, which could not earn their oats at any good running meeting. In the old days of running meetings four-mile heat races were the order of the day, and one race was sufficient for the day's entertainment. The racing meetings would not draw their thousands if the managers still relied upon the programmes of their forefathers. Instead of introducing foreign elements of attraction at our trotting meetings, all our managers have to do to insure popular support is to give the trotting and pacing-horse a full opportunity to show how fast he can go at all distances, and above all things to avoid the apathy which must result from prolonged contests which often take two days to decide.—Chicago Horseman.

Trotting Track Requisites.

A varied programme.
Larger purses for all classes.
A two-in-three mile heat race, under the saddle, free for all pacers.
A two-in-three mile heat race for double teams.
A purse for trotters or pacers with running mates, mile heats, two in three.
A special for three or more horses with the lowest records.
A starting judge to be employed through the big circuit.
Mounted patrol judges to be placed in the field.
The judges' stand to be placed on the track opposite the poie.
Drivers to wear a neat jacket and cap of the same color.
No delays from unnecessary scoring.
A full band of music, without a half-hour's rest after each tune.
The grand stand cleaned each day, so that ladies may not soil their dresses.
No other persons than the judges and timers to be admitted to their respective stands.
The judges to call the races promptly at the time advertised.
The judges to call the horses for the next race as soon as the heats have been finished.
The time to be hung out after each heat, in plain figures, with the name of the winner, and the names of the other horses placed.
No particular driver to have more privileges than others who are not so well known.
No driver to be taken out for any cause until he shall have begun to score for the heat.
No tapping of a drum to start the horses. The word "Go" from the judge's mouth is the safest.
The track to be sprinkled in order to lay the dust.
The races called on time, so that they may be finished on the day named.—Wallace's Monthly.

Racing judges are not like poets and musicians. They are made, not born. It takes years of experience to make a judge thoroughly competent. He must be a man who lives only by seconds, and able to split that short division of time if necessary, without any trammels of memory as to the past, and free from all shades of anticipation as to the future. He must ignore all favorites among horses, and be dead to every impulse of friendship for drivers or jockeys. He should never harbor a foregone conclusion as to which horse should win, or anticipate by a breathing the possibility of any horse's defeat.

His work begins the instant a race starts, and from that second until the finish he should have but one sense in active service—sight. He should be all eyes, and take in like a camera every movement of horse and rider, or driver, in the struggle from the first step or stride to the last. His duty is to see that the noble horse is not worsted by the ignoble man on his back, or behind him.

It is no child's play, but rather the task of a Hercules. Such men are hard to find, but when they come to the front they should have the most absolute recognition. The office is a noble one, and when nobly filled should be rewarded by the highest pay. If the judging of racing were left to one man, and he paid amply for his services, there would soon be a restoration of confidence and interest in trotting and pacing races. His pay should be high enough to keep him independent of any business entanglements, for a man who is under an obligation to a horse-owner or expects a favor from some one interested in the race will certainly have some bias toward both.

With one judge absolutely competent and with an independent income to make the circuit of the fairs of the State and decide the result of every race, a new era would dawn upon the sport that would be hailed with acclamation by every lover of the noble horse and supporter of the legitimate speculation and the results of the race.—Wallace's Monthly.

Send the Entries.

The secretaries of the associations will be remiss in their duties if they fail to send copies of the entry list as soon as it is possible for them to do so. This is especially necessary with the fairs which are held at the earliest dates. We desire to notice them fully, "but cannot do so without knowing what the entries are."

Horses in St. Petersburg.

One can find poor horses in Russia I suppose, but very few in Petersburg or the other large cities. They are tall, long-legged animals, with slender bodies and limbs, long silken manes and tails, the latter nearly always reaching to the ground, small heads, small feet, large intelligent eyes, and neck arched like the chargers one sees in pictures of the Bedouins in the desert. I always thought that such horses were the creation of the artists, but Russia is full of them. The Ishvoshtnik is always proud of his horse, if he is a good one. Nearly all the time he is disengaged he is either petting or rubbing his horse, and at intervals he brings out a little nose bag from under the seat, to feed him oats or meal. The harness of the horse is as light as leather can be made, none of the straps being more than half an inch in width, and most of them are round, not larger than a lead pencil. There is no breechen because there are no grades in Petersburg; the country is perfectly level. There are no blinders on the bridle, and the horse fears nothing; he will walk up to a locomotive with as much indifference as his master. He never shies, never gets rattled, never runs away, but is perfectly obedient to the voice of his master. I did not see a whip during my entire stay in Petersburg, but the Ishvoshtnik keeps up a continual one-sided conversation with his fleet-footed partner. The effect of the driver's voice is peculiar, and an observant rider will be interested in studying this odd relationship.—WM. CURTIS, in Chicago News.

That famous host and genial horseman, Mr. J. R. Dickey, advertises elsewhere that his noted resort at 16th and D street, by the Bay District Track, is open for the reception of all who can appreciate the best service and unexceptionable eatables and drinkables. Prominent horsemen may be found by scores in the comfortable home during driving hours every day and evening.

The State Fair.

The Directors of the State Agricultural Society held the meeting usually set for this season of the year on Saturday, August 4th, for the consideration of the entries to races to be held during the State Fair, and other arrangements incidental to the opening of the fair.

The malcontents, and those who are struggling for patronage more than for the interest or welfare of the Society, made their usual fight about the pooling privileges, which seems to be the only weapon obtainable by those who fail to obtain recognition, for reasons which to a majority of the Board seem just. The attacks made upon the Board by rival pool-sellers are in the main not true. They charge that the Board met in secret session and let this privilege. This is not so, as a representative of this paper was present when the contract was let, and it was done in open meeting, at an adjourned meeting at that, and the one at which this business is usually considered, as the records will show, for the past seven years, viz.: In 1881 this meeting was held on June 20th and the privilege let; in 1882 May 4th, same action; in 1883 April 9th, same action; 1884 March 12th, same action; 1885 April 6th, same action; 1886 March 4th, same action; 1887 March 11th, ordered to be advertised; 1888 March 22d, let to Mr. Killip. In 1887 the Board was prevailed upon to advertise for bids, as opposing firms assured the Directors that they would give an amount that would make them open their eyes, and they further assured the Board that if Mr. Killip was permitted to make a cash bid that his would be so insignificant that the Board would surely overthrow their faithful servant.

What was the result? When the bids were opened the opposing forces offered $6,600, for which the Board had received $9,250 the previous year upon a percentage basis of 65 per cent. Mr. Killip's bid was $10,787—more, everyone knew, than it was worth. But rather than see the Society lose, he made this sacrifice. The Board well understood what the pooling is worth, and a sad plight they would be in did they not, after fifteen or twenty years of experience that many of the directors have had.

The majority of the Board think the laborer worthy of his hire, and knowing that this business had been heretofore properly conducted, made a contract—partly in a feeling of reciprocity—with Mr. Killip to do this business for them this season at a price that will enable the pool seller to receive fair remuneration for his labor and risk of handling, $400,000 to $500,000.

"Why," one of the directors asks, "is all this vituperation poured out by Mr. Rose, when his own home society, which draws from the State State sustenance, lets this same privilege without advertising? Mr. Killip was not asked to give figures for Los Angeles. This fact in itself smacks of selfishness on the part of some one. The beam before the mote may work well in this instance."

The Petaluma and Santa Rosa Societies awarded their privileges to Whitehead & Co., and when Mr. Killip offered figures he was informed that the contract had been awarded to Whitehead. This satisfied Mr. Killip and no more was id.

But the directors of the State Fair must follow a rule that suits only when in favor of those who are doing all in their power to injure the institution.

The pooling at race meetings is something more than any ordinary business transaction. It devolves great risk on the directors or managers, who are morally, if not legally, responsible for the acts of those conducting this business. And when they have tried, and have full confidence in a concern with whom they have transacted business for twenty-five years, they do not feel like making a change, and they accord the same privilege to any other society or association without criticism in any way. That the business of the society is managed successfully and conscientiously the public has but to look on the past and note the increase of receipts and disbursements of the society. But it is clearly apparent that the public understand this question, and only a lot of pool-sellers and their immediate confederates are the "kickers."

It is seldom this privilege is advertised by any association. It is considered by many of them as the merchant considers his banking business, who bases his decision upon security, integrity and faithfulness first, then financial returns in connection with these qualifications.

AN EPISTLE FROM ROSE.

At the evening session Mr. Shippee handed the secretary the following letter from Director Rose, which was read:

L. U. Shippee, President State Board Agricultural Society.

Dear Sir: By your kind permission I send you this letter, which you kindly promised you would have read at your next meeting. I should have much preferred to attend in person, but our president of this, the Los Angeles district, being absent, I have consented to take his place, and you understand that it will be impossible for me to get away on the 4th, as on the 6th our fair opens. That I consider the subject matter of this letter very important to the State Agricultural Society is evident.

The matter I allude to is the letting of pool privileges, in which there were some mistakes made I would like to see righted. There is an abundance of time, in fact it was usual in former years to let these privileges after the entries were in, for then more intelligent bets could be made. The mistakes and wrongs which have been done to our society are: First, in letting the pool privilege so early; second, in not advertising that such letting privilege would take place, thus debarring all competition; third, the giving of 35 per cent. commission received on pools sold, where equally responsible parties, who would do the same work equally as well, would have taken it at 10 per cent., thus giving us 90 per cent. instead of 55, and making a difference to our society which may safely be estimated at $4,000. This is the whole matter in a nutshell, and perhaps nothing more need be added, and I can't see how any director can fail to believe that the former action of the Board was hasty and should be reconsidered. It cannot be claimed that Killip & Co., to whom the contract was awarded, are the only firm that can do this business. I know they will do it well. On the other hand, I know of parties, like Whitehead & Co. and Schwartz & Co., who can do it equally as well, as it is evidenced that when it is open competition both these firms get a fair proportion of business.

The giving of 20 per cent. is no new feature, either, as Whitehead & Co. gave that percentage to the Blood-Horse Association at their meeting, and that, too, in the face of and in competition with book betting. Nor was this matter spite work growing out of undue competition for after giving the 90 per cent there was a fair profit to the pool-sellers. This,

I think, I know. But were it otherwise, were it true that owing to sharp competition, or even ruinous competition, causing various pool-sellers to do business at a loss, it would be no concern of ours as long as we can have an honest accounting; and this we can have with either party, for we have, I take it, or should have, some one delegated to settle every night with pool-sellers and to watch the pool-sellers by day.

As far as ability is concerned Sam Whitehead has no equal on this Coast as auctioneer in selling pools, and few equals anywhere. I have no feeling in this matter. Mr. Chase is a very efficient and good director, and to me has been more than kind and obliging, and it would be a pleasure to do him a kindness at any time.

As regards the other gentlemen outside the Board with whom we have differences, I have no special sympathy, only in so far as to give all a courteous and fair hearing. Charges and fault-findings when there is no ground for them will do us no injury, but when such very plain facts are on their side, as in this matter, then it is time to reconsider, it is time to place ourselves right, for if we refuse to do our duty to the public who furnish the money to make our State institution possible in so plain a case as this, then the public may be excused for believing that all the other charges made against us are equally true, and refuse to furnish any more appropriations.

Yours respectfully,

L. J. Rose.

Mr. Green moved that the letter be placed on file.

Mr. LaRue said he had promised certain parties, Mr. Rose among others, that he would move a reconsideration of the vote whereby the pool selling was let to Mr. Killip. He disclaimed any feeling in the matter, and said that it was his intention to be present at the meeting, but failed to receive notice, although he did not doubt but that the secretary sent it, but as he was traveling from place to place about that time, he failed to receive it.

He was asked by one of the Directors if it was so that he had a bid of 90 per cent. for the pooling.

He replied that about a year ago Whitehead spoke to him about this matter and gave him a bid, but he could not recall what it was. He thought under the circumstances the votes should be reconsidered.

Director Boggs took the floor and said he understood what prompted this whole business. It was simply a fight of the "outs against the ins." A kind of a fight between rival pool sellers. He had been regularly notified of the meeting and had spoken to Rose about it. He favored letting all public contracts by advertising, but in this particular business the Board deemed it proper to let to parties in whom they had confidence, and he for one would certainly vote to sanction their action. He fully understood that the instigators of all this trouble were not friends of the society, and their interests do not harmonize with ours.

Mr. Shippee said two days before the meeting at which the bids were let was held it was announced to all the directors that the adjourned meeting was to be held. He saw Rose in San Francisco and told him of the meeting. If Rose and LaRue were not present it was their own fault. This was an adjourned meeting, the date being set at a previous meeting, and no one should have any excuse for not being present. It was no uncommon thing to let bids for pool-selling in March. The records of the Secretary show that the same thing has been done for years. Last year Killip & Co. bid $10,000 for the privileges and Whitehead bid $6,000. This year the only bid was by Killip for 65 per cent. of the gross commissions, and if subsequently Henry Schwartz and Whitehead came in and offered 90 per cent., it was wholly unknown to him; that he, for one, would not favor letting this privilege to any one for 90 per cent., as he was educated up to the belief by Whitehead himself when the latter was a member of Killip & Co. that the business could not be honestly conducted for less than 65 per cent. Shippee defended Killip as a fair man, who lived up to his contract, and declared that the Society was always satisfied with him. In Stockton he had tried, but in vain, to get more than 60 per cent. for pool privileges.

Mr. Hancock, in reply to Mr. LaRue's assertion that he had received no notice had this to say: The meeting was an adjourned meeting, and he received his notice as he usually does. Notwithstanding this, he and Mr. LaRue were in the office the week previous to which the meeting was held, and had consulted together with reference to park improvements. Mr. LaRue at that time reminded the Secretary about the plans and specifications, and for him to request the Engineer to have everything ready for the meeting next week.

Jesse D. Carr defended the action of the Board and said that he came to the meeting referred to expecting the customary business to come up. He denied that there was any secrecy about its call in any shape or manner. He believed that the Board had done what in their judgement was for best interest of the Society.

Director Cox said that last season he favored the plan of advertising for bids, and he must say that it was a great surprise to him when those who had boasted of giving the largest amount of money ever given for the privileges should come in with an amount $4,000 less than that of Mr. Killip and $3,000 less than the percentage returns of Mr. Killip for the previous season. The matter was fully discussed at the meeting, and he understood the question thoroughly that he voted upon then and he would still vote the same way. That no snap judgment was taken nor was there any desire to head anybody off.

Mr. Green was sure that no wrong had been done, and was positive that the Society had sustained no loss by this action.

On a vote being taken to reconsider the question, Mr. LaRue's was the only vote in the affirmative.

During this discussion Mr. Chase remained silent until after the vote was taken. He then arose, and said that he did not understand why Mr. Rose had used his name in his letter. That while he had been a director of the Agricultural Society he had importuned no member to vote him any privileges. He would be equally justifiable in charging Mr. Rose as having used his position in the society to further his (Rose's) personal interests. Mr. Rose is a gentleman who raises horses, and races them at the State Fair for the purses hung up by the society, and he, Chase, could truthfully say that during his connection with it he had not drawn one cent from the society, but for fifteen years preceding this time he had paid thousands of dollars into its treasury. He fully understood Mr. Rose's position, and believed he was influenced by an ambition instigated by a few pot-house politicians. He said Secretary Smith had been accused of stealing a lot of old wood, and the Board had been assailed with the most vicious charges. The Legislature had investigated the matter, and the result was the society's appropriation was raised from $15,000 to $17,500. Thieves, gamblers and pool-sellers must not be allowed to conduct the business of the Board. Last year Henry Schwartz had no idea that Killip would put up his cash when it came to bidding, but Killip did so. Killip had lost money last year on his contract.

Mr. Shippee reiterated that the society, notwithstanding these charges and counter charges, was progressive, and that they had cleared up some $16,000 or $17,000 over all expenses last year, which evidenced the fact that the affairs of the society were well managed.

After the debate upon this subject, which has become a mossback chestnut, was finished, the Board proceeded to business.

The Building Committee reported progress at the park, and was of the opinion that the improvements would be finished in about ten days.

Plans were submitted and adopted for a new judges' stand of two stories in height. The lower floor to be twelve feet square six feet above the ground with an eight-foot ceiling, to be occupied as the timers' stand. The upper story will be eight feet high and be used by the judges. The structure will be pagoda shape and surmounted with a bell-shaped roof, capped with an iron railing decorated with fancy cut shingles, fancy painted, surmounted by a flag staff. The eaves over both stories will project five feet and gives protection from the sun during the entire afternoon. The cost of the structure will be about $600.

Killip & Co. were made the official auctioneers of all live stock at the Park on the motion of Mr. LaRue.

It was ordered that no stock except those on exhibition should be sold by auction within the grounds.

All other licensed auctioneers will be permitted to sell when requested to do so by the owners of the stock themselves.

The Board passed an order directing the Building Committee to erect a 20,000 gallon tank upon the upper turn of the race track, and to ask the city to extend its main from Eighteenth to Twentieth on B and C streets.

Hon John P. Irish, upon motion of Dava Perkins, was invited to deliver the annual address.

A Word About Heredity.

Mr. Darwin in his interesting and instructive work on "Animals and Plants Under Domestication," says: "Some writers, who have not attended a natural history, have attempted to show that the force of inheritance has been much exaggerated. The breeders of animals would smile at such simplicity." We may perhaps dissent somewhat from the conclusions which the learned scientists reached in some of the speculations in which he indulged, but we must grant that as an investigator of Nature and a studious collector of facts concerning the phenomena of the animal and vegetable kingdoms he has had few equals. The scientist wisely sees in the great army of practical breeders a host of careful observers whose observations and experience are worthy to rank with his own. The breeders of cattle and other domesticated animals, then, were really the pioneers in the field of research. While this is so, and on the testimony of the wide spread acceptance of this idea of the influence of the power of inheritance among "breeders of animals"—to wit: among us, good fellow breeders—it may not be unprofitable to take the time once in a while to examine even so well accepted a theory, if only to satisfy ourselves that it is so well established. However high the hill and however strong the walls of the lofty stone-ramparted fortress, the daily rounds of inspection go on to see that no breach has opened in the impregnable walls through which some unknown but possible foe might enter. And so I am going to take a brief glance at this good old field which is always interesting.

Says M. Ribot, the noted French writer on the subject of heredity: "Heredity is that biological law by which all beings endowed with life tend to repeat themselves in their descendants; it is for the species what personal identity is for the individual. By it a ground work remains unchanged amid incessant variation; by it Nature ever copies and imitates herself. Ideally considered, heredity would simply be the reproduction of like by like. But this conception is purely theoretical, for the phenomena of life do not lend themselves to such mathematical precision; the conditions of their occurrence grow more and more complex in proportion as we ascend from the vegetable world to the higher animals, and thence to man." This extended definition or statement of the law, namely, that "like produces like," has much to commend it. It has brevity, that essential to a good definition—to stamp it as good coin; and then the very fact that it is the highest expression of the law, "the ideal," if you please, is hardly against it. If the conditions under which the law operated could be made single and kept free from the interference of outside and distracting conditions, the results would conform almost certainly to this form of the rule. Of course we must have it clearly before our minds that Nature never tends to lose the individual in the class. This M. Ribot evidently wished to accentuate. Every species is distinctly and unmistakably to the trained eye differentiated from every other; so, too, the individual. We might add that the same is true of every wider classification on up through general groups, to kingdoms. Thus we recognize the marks which differentiate the bull we own from every other Short-horn, and at the same time that we mark this individual character we no less note that he is a Short-horn, a bull, a ruminant, an animal. Many people cannot tell one sort of sheep from another, or one animal in a flock from the rest; but it is only because their eyes are not trained to distinguish the individualizing marks. A close observer may even trace family lines among a flock. So far does this individualization go that it is scarcely possible to find two leaves upon a tree of the largest size and most luxuriant foliage that are identical. I do not know that this has ever been done. At the same time the lines of each class are plainly marked, and the law of inheritance operates in the most regular and broad way. To quote M. Ribot once more: "Heredity extends over all the elements and functions of the organism; to its external and internal structure, its maladies, its special characteristics, and its acquired modifications."

Who is there who has not noticed the oft-recurring resemblances of parent and child? Among horses this is very often to be observed in a most striking way. The Patchens and Hambletonians among trotters have wonderfully well-fixed on them the appearance, character, and gait of their sires. The great sire of racers, old Lexington, produced countless racers and mothers of racers upon whom he had his own nature so indelibly marked that the inheritance is constantly blessing them to the fourth generation despite the utmost vicissitudes of intermediate bad breeding. I have been particularly struck by an instance of transmission of a mere trick or habit by a stallion, which was recently communicated to me by Major B. G. Thomas. His celebrated horse King Ban had a peculiar way of standing with his fore legs crossed, and every year quite a number of his colts would do the same, almost from the time that they were foaled. This is a very fine illustration of how far the operation of the law extends. A similar case is cited by an old authority of a man who slept with his legs crossed transmitting it to his child.

Every physician is familiar with cases of the occurrence of more than five fingers and toes and of the recurrence of this peculiarity in the same family again and again. This inheritance is of an abnormal peculiarity is of course less likely to occur than that of a normal feature. They are generally more striking, however, and more likely to be recorded. Perhaps there are a few stock breeders who have not noticed how a white spot in the flank in otherwise red cattle will pass from generation to generation. My old stock bull, Baron Butterfly rarely fails to thus relieve the monotony of a solid red. So also a blazed face in horses and a Roman nose in men may be traced through many generations. Thus the Valois nose of the family of that name who ruled over France in the sixteenth century was not only remarkable, seeming to spring as it did out of the middle of the brow, but also remarkably persistent.

Very notable are the observed cases of inherited leucidity and the reverse of this, i. e., infertility, although tending rapidly to destroy itself by stopping production, is scarcely less notable. We find a good example of fecundity in imp. Young Mary, who bred to the age of twenty-one and produced no less than sixteen heifer calves, besides several bulls. From these heifer calves sprang a most numerous progeny, and the family has widened and widened under the impulse of the old cow's fecund blood till the Young Mary's are perhaps the largest family of Short-horns in America. On the other hand some families are so infertile that, while of fashionable blood and every device of human ingenuity has been used to secure all the produce from them that was possible, they have yet dragged along generation by generation breeding a few calves at best and then becoming absolutely barren, while many of the females have proved non-breeders from the start, and some of the bulls impotent or nearly so. These cattle have in some cases passed their infertility over into even fecund stocks. This is upon a well-recognized subdivision of the practical working of this law, which may be summarized as follows:

In every animal there is the general animal nature, and there is besides the distinct sex character. Besides the primary characteristics there are secondary sex characteristics, such as the hackles, and comb, and spur of the cock; the horns of the ram in some breeds of sheep; the milking qualities of the cow and other females, etc. Now it is perfectly well established that a cow that is a fine milker will transmit the tendency to her male produce, in which it will remain latent till it is handed on to his female get, when it will again appear. Cross a game bantam cock on a Sebright bantam hen (the cocks of which variety have no tail plumes or hackles), and from the hens of the cross bred back to a Sebright cock, cockerels with tail plumes and hackles will be bred in a good proportion of cases. This in the simple case of an alternate generation is the transmission of a secondary sex quality latent in the intermediate generation of the opposite sex. If extended to a longer scale it would be atavism, or reversion to a remote ancestor. Now we see that bulls sprung of very infertile families, even when fairly regular breeders themselves often produce females which inherit the female infertility of the sire's dam. Hence it is important in selecting a bull to learn whether he comes of a fecund family or not, no less than it is in choosing the females for the herd. There is a strong tendency in families to the same term of life and to the same term of breeding which is logically closely connected with the question just now before us from the breeder's standpoint. Some families, too, show a tendency to die young without any sign of transmitted disease. In them there was an inheritance of short life, and when the end of the period came the organism just seemed to give away. Nor is this contrary to human experience. I have known families characterized by both long and short lives; and more than one instance of families in which there seemed a double period, so that if the members survived the fatal lustrum next immediately following their fortieth year, fatal alike to men and women, they were like to live to extreme old age.

But I am prolonging this paper beyond what I intended. I will not venture to say even a word of such special cases as those of "atavism" and "prepotency," in which heredity asserts itself with special vigor on one side, or of the exception contained in the operations classes under "atrophy" and "variation," but shall content myself with these desultory words upon a broad and rich subject. They are indeed too fragmentary to do more than suggest the great field from which they are taken, being like a vial of water brought from the great ocean, or a daisy plucked from a sunny hill slope, and no more capable of giving an idea of all the wonders of heredity than the little vial of water of the tumultuous surges of the sea, or tiny flower of the green slope starred with white and gold and agleam with the first rays of the morning sun.

Alameda County Club.

The last meeting for 1888 was held on Saturday last at Bird's Point, nine members taking part. The special prize to go to the one who scored 60 out of 72 or better still remains in the club, no member reaching the requisite score, although Mr. Brown had 65 to his credit and Mr. A. F. Adams 64. The average was very high even for the Crack Club. A table showing the season's work is appended.

At 12 birds, Hurlingham. Dr. Knowles 12; Schroeder 6; A. F. Adams 10; S. I. Kellogg 11; T. J. Knowles 12; Beck 10; W. L. Brown 12; Norton 10; Randall 8.

Riverside Sportsman's Club.

The recently organized, but very strong club at Riverside, Los Angeles County, held its regular meeting on Saturday last. Blue Rock targets were used, but because of some misunderstanding about the working of the traps many of them were broken and others were so softened by the heat as to permit the shot to pierce them without breaking.

At 20 Blue Rock targets, National rules. S. Squire, 11; P. Klinefelter, 10; T. Cundiff, 10; L. A. Chamblin, 9; A. H. H. 9; J. S. Castleman, 9; B. W. Handy, 9; Frank Patton, 7; J. E. Beamer, 7; R. P. Cundiff, 6; C. B. Hall, 6; J. Rule, 3; E. J. Davis, 0.

After the main match a team shoot was had, the result being as follows:

At 10 Blue Rocks, National rules. Losing team to pay for birds.

Fanning Tournament.

The tournament projected by Mr. Fanning at the Six Mile House on Sunday last did not fill because of lack of birds, and the day was spent in pool shooting at clay pigeons, Messrs. Kent, Crean and Ferguson winning most of the pools.

A few members of the Lincoln Gun Club met at Alameda Point on Sunday last for practice at Blue Rock targets, preparatory to the regular monthly match of the club to-morrow.

This afternoon at Adams' Point the team match for a trophy presented by the Selby Smelting and Lead Company occurs, there being entries from the Lincoln, Oakland, Alameda and Blue Rock Clubs.

Our correspondent, Mr. W. T. Irwin, of Salina, Kan., recently engaged in a match at live birds at Galva, Kan., the scores of which were extraordinary. It was a Hurlingham race, at 30 birds, with five entries; Irwin killing 29, Abercrombie 29, Hauna 29, Robb 29 and Hill 28, an average of which we do not recall the equal.

Major S. I. Kellogg informs us that the match for the Central California Standard Challenge Medal has been postponed from 18th inst. to Saturday, September 8th, and the winner of medal four times is to take 50 per cent. of entrance money of first match; the balance 30 and 20 per cents. to be added to medal as second and third prizes respectively in first match. This will probably prove more satisfactory all round.

There was a fine exhibition of pigeon shooting at the Wild West Show in Gloucester, Mass., on July 31st, when Annie Oakley killed forty nine out of fifty birds. The shooting was done according to Hurlingham rules, the birds being released from five traps at twenty-five yards' rise. Kleintz, the champion shot of Pennsylvania, acted as referee, and Miles L. Johnson released the birds.

Justice of the Peace Richard W. Kerswell, of Camden, was the official scorer, and his tally-sheets showed that Miss Oakley had killed thirty-one birds without a miss. The thirty-second was the only one which escaped. Thirty-nine birds were killed at the first fire, but the other ten required the second barrel before they were brought down.

President T. E. Walker, of the Los Angeles Rod and Gun Club, writes us that the second tournament for the "Standard" medal will take place at Los Angeles on August 18th and 19th. On the first day there will be three matches, at 15, 25, 9 singles and 5 pairs, of Blue Rock targets. In the first the entrance will be $2.50, in the second the price of the birds only, but five valuable special prizes have been added, including choice of a Parker or Spencer shot-gun by the Tufts-Lyons Arms Company. In the third match entrance is $3.00. On the second day the "Standard" match will be shot, at 50 single and 25 pairs of Blue Rock targets. Entrance $5. Ten prizes go with the match, the first being the "Standard" medal, value $100, and 50 per cent. of entrance, second and third are 30 and 20 per cent. of entrance. The others are special donated by leading citizens of Los Angeles. The tournament will be managed by Mr. Walker, whose popularity and activity cannot fail to make it a great success.

An East Indian writer tells an interesting story of a fight with a leopard. In company with a friend he left his camp one morning and soon came upon a pair of leopards with young, a shot killed the male, and the hunters separated to look for the other. The narrator says: I went to the right, and Little John to the left. When we met again the condition of things was much changed. My search was fruitless. After an hour I retraced my steps, and on arriving at the "divide" I followed on up the branch taken by my companion. For some distance I walked on, but no sign of Little John. I had heard no shot fired, and was beginning to speculate as to where he could have got to when I noticed an overhanging branch on the bank of the kloof looking very much as if recently broken. Closer examination showed that the earth had been newly turned, then I saw a piece of rag, and knew that someone wearing cloths had passed that way. I clambered up and found myself in a bit of densely wooded scrub. A little farther on, and—yes, there was Little John stretched prone and apparently lifeless on the ground. I rushed forward to his assistance, but judge of my surprise to find beside his seemingly lifeless body, the undoubtedly dead carcass of the leopard, the chief object of our hunt. And now exercise your credulity. That leopard had met his death by strangulation, and strangulation by the hand of Little John. There was no doubting it, for I found the long fingers of his sinewy hand still closed in their vice-like grip about the animals throat. The eyes of the brute were started out of their sockets, and its tongue dark and swollen. Little John had strangled that leopard, but at what a cost. The flesh and sinews of that mighty arm of his were rent and torn into ribbons from wrist to shoulder, and the clothes which covered John's right side were in tatters, stained deeply in blood, which welled in streams from the lacerations in his arm and side. We got Little John home somehow, and gave him the best of amateur surgery, but he never was the same man again; his right arm became all but useless. His explanation was that he came suddenly upon the brute, which lay crouched upon the right arm of a fallen tree; that after leaving me at "the divide" he became so wrapt up in the spooring of the beast, that he forgot to reload his rifle, that as soon as the beast saw him attempt to handle his weapon, it came straight at him, and it was by the merest fluke in life that he gripped the animal as he did, but "having once got him there, I knew it was my only chance to hold on, and you can bet I did.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

California Kennel Club.

The California Kennel Club held its monthly meeting Aug. 8th, at 539 California street. J. B. Lewis presided and W. G. Cne acted as Secretary.

The Executive Committee reported that it had met and would recommend a field trial for the members of the club, to be held in December, either in Marin or Sonoma County.

The club decided that no member shall participate at the field meeting unless he has been on the roll ninety days previous to the trials, and that no dogs shall be run unless owned by a member of the club, the rules adopted by the club to govern the same.

This committee reported that the President, Mr. Flournoy Jr., and A. B. Truman has been appointed to visit some of the counties where birds are said to be plentiful and report at a future meeting, to the best of their judgment, the most suitable place for a field trial contest.

Dr. A. E. Buzard, the veterinary surgeon of the club, delivered a very interesting essay on the dog, especially with respect to his intelligence and general management; also on the importance of health in both sire and dam for breeding purposes. The doctor dwelt particularly on diseases of an hereditary character.

There was a difference of opinion among the members relative to the prizes which should be given for competition. Mr. Martin favored cash prizes. Other members, especially Mr. Truman, thought that gold medals would be more appropriate if not preferable to all. The club, after considerable discussion, decided to allow that matter to go over until the next meeting. The club will have a reduction in railroad rates to and from whatever place the trial will be held.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I have noticed in the various sporting papers a letter written by Dr. Perry, President of the National Dog Club of America, which is in substance an attempt to explain away the impression which the Buffalo International Fair Association has given out through its secretary that a "fight had begun" between the National Dog Club of America and the American Kennel Club. Dr. Perry endeavored to impress his readers that such is not the case, and that the same harmony is prevailing as was indicated would exist when he addressed his club upon its formation.

The time has come when the American Kennel Club should take a stand against the misrepresentations which are constantly circulating respecting its aims and methods, and also to make clear to all breeders and exhibitors the fact that it has good reason to believe, and does believe, and will in course of time prove, that the National Dog Club of America from the beginning contained among its principal promoters men who had no other object than a still-hunt against the American Kennel Club. The American Kennel Club accepted Dr. Perry's inaugural address, forecasting good will and harmony, and entertained for the National Dog Club of America the kindest feelings; but in view of its recent adoption of rules governing dog shows, its assumption of authority over dog matters, through a constitution which cannot fail, and is really intended, to bring them in conflict with the American Kennel Club, the latter has now concluded to declare that it does not consider the object of the National Dog Club of America in any other light but antagonism, and will so treat it. It further prefers to have the open enmity of the National Dog Club of America rather than the incessant secret plottings which are being conducted against the American Kennel Club through the National Dog Club of America by the disgruntled associates of the Hornellsville Club, the Forest and Stream, and the embittered individuals and kennel clubs who ineffectually resisted the enforcement of the compulsory registration rule.

Nobody denies the right of clubs to exist and organize independently of the American Kennel Club, but it is neither proper nor to be permitted that a club should enter the field, intrusted to the American Kennel Club by an immense majority of the dog interests of the country, under false pretenses and with objects so utterly at variance with those avowed by its promoters. Discord is not what the breeders and exhibitors nor the public want, yet in reality that is all the National Dog Club of America can hope to offer its members.

We thus warn the breeders and exhibitors of the country against what they are invited to support in the National Dog Club of America.

The Music of Fishes.

When Sir Emerson Tennant visited Batticaloa, in the northern forests of Ceylon, about twenty years ago, he made inquiries relative to a story which had reached him of musical sounds said to be heard issuing from the bottom of a lake at several places, both above and below the ferry opposite the old Dutch Fort. The sounds were said to be heard at night, and more distinctly when the moon was at the full. They were described to him as resembling the faint sweet notes of an Aeolian harp. On conversing with the fishermen of the lake, they confirmed these statements, and expressed their belief that they proceeded from a shell known by the Tamil name of oorie coolooroo crado, or the crying shell. The specimens shown to him were identified as those of the Cerithium palustre and Littorina lavis. One moonlight evening, when not a breath of air was stirring, and not a ripple was to be seen on the water except that caused by the dip of the oars, Sir Emerson Tennant accompanied the fishermen to the spot. On arriving at the point mentioned, he avers that he distinctly heard the sounds rising up from the lake, like the gentle thrills of a musical chord, or the faint vibration of a wine-glass when its rim is rubbed by a wet finger. He says, it was not one sustained note, but a multitude of tiny sounds, each clear and distinct in itself; the sweetest treble mingling with the lowest bass. On applying the ear to the wood work of the boat, the vibration was greatly increased in volume by conduction. The sounds varied considerably at different points as we moved across the lake, as if the number of the animals from which they proceeded was greatest in particular spots; and occasionally we rowed out of hearing of them altogether, until on returning to the original locality the sounds were at once renewed. Sir Emerson Tennant was induced to conclude from all the facts, that the sounds were really produced by shell-fish. They came, evidently and sensibly, from the depth of the lake, and there was nothing in the surrounding circumstances to support a conjecture that they could be the reverberation of noises made by insects on the shore conveyed along the surface of the water, for they were loudest and most direct at those points where the nature of the land, and the intervention of the fort and its buildings, forbade the possibility of this kind of conduction. In fact, similar sounds have been heard issuing from the sea in the harbour of Bombay, and near the landing place at Caldera in Chili. In the last mentioned locality they rise and fall as much as four notes. We may add the well-known fact that some fishes grunt when disturbed, and even oysters have an acoustic apparatus, though it does not rise to the dignity of an ear.

When Sir Emerson Tennant first communicated his observations at Batticaloa to the Edinburgh Philosophical Society, Dr. Grant experimented with some specimens of a mollusc Tritonia by placing them in a glass filled with seawater. This vessel was placed on the central table of the Wernerian Natural History Society of Edinburgh, around which many members were sitting. During the whole time of the meeting, a clink, as of a steel wire struck on the side of a jar, was heard at intervals, and so distinctly that it extended to the distance of twelve feet.

Death of J. M. Hotz.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—It is with extreme regret that I write to inform you of the death of John M. Hotz in this city on the first day of this month, at the age of forty-seven. It could be truly said that John Hotz was an "odd" man. Of a very retiring disposition, and modest to a marked degree, he yet had great fixedness of opinion, and the full courage of his convictions. He was a man of scrupulous honesty, great industry and marked sobriety. He was as true to friendship as the needle to the pole. He was a true sportsman and a charter member of the Forrester Gun Club of this city, under whose auspices he was buried, and the manly eulogy that fell from the lips of Mr. John W. Todd, Past President of the Forresters at the graveside, brought tears to the eyes of every one present.

The greatest encomium that can be passed upon his memory is to state the fact that those that knew him best loved him most. May great mother nature, whom he, like all true sportsmen, loved so well, cradle him tenderly in her bosom.

Webber Lake and its Trout.

Not many California sportsmen care to exhaust adjectives writing encomiums on lake fishing, the majority being agreed that it is tame sport, requiring little skill and less knowledge. But I, while perfectly willing to concede the superior charms of a rushing stream and loving, drooping boughs, and dark, uncertain pools with all my heart, must yet enter a plea for sunny, gravel-bedded shallows, thoughtful pines, and a rare, clear atmosphere. To the wiry, athletic fellow who delights in tramping, and in fishing against the current of a leaping river, it must seem intolerably stupid to sit for hours in a boat guided by a merry knight of the oars, and knowing nothing of care or weariness except such as comes from casting a long line and keeping a firm hand on stubborn trout that love to tangle line leaders with the stems of coarse weeds. Wiry, athletic fellows, though—fortunately for the rest of creation—are sometimes wrong, at least they have not been granted a monopoly of the sensations that go to the making up of enjoyment; and the contemplative man has just as good a time in his boat as though no devotee of "rest through hard work" had ever spoken derisively of "pond" fishing.

The world, after all, is arranged on a good, broad plan. It is never absolutely necessary to fall in with anybody's idea unless it suits, and altogether the happiest mortal is the one who can listen patiently to all theories, and gather nourishment from every man's fancies. If the mere fact of pulling in fish were the whole of fishing, then a seat on the wharf, a heavy line, dyspeptic sinker, good, strong rod and some rather antique shrimps would tell the whole story. But it is not so; surroundings have their weight—surroundings and the game qualities of the fish. No one will dispute for an instant that trout in a current make a better fight than trout in quiet water; but the struggle necessary to get to the current is sometimes more than a tired man cares for. The athlete, on the contrary, likes a climb among granite crags; the wildness of the scene agrees with the rapid leaping of his blood, and he can not easily overtax muscles hardened by constant use. But a man whose one form of exercise during eleven months of the year is a walk to and from his office, does as well to begin with lake fishing, and tone his muscles by degrees; casting with the left as well as the right hand, and claiming rowing privileges on occasion.

As for surroundings, surely one must be deaf, dumb and blind who remains indifferent to the charms of such a lake as Webber. No morning have I ever gone out on it and not felt strange little thrills of delight as the tiny waves made gay by early sunbeams came rippling against the boatside, full of messages from the cool inlet that has its source far in the heart of the mountains. Even the quaint-looking mosses and weeds at the bottom of the lake take on new shades of green and gold with every passing hour, and have wonderful tales for all who will listen. The pretty clump of green willows at the lower end smile gaily beneath the dark tamaracks of the mountain like a band of merry maidens grieved by the gloomy fates. And, oh, the joy of skirting around the edges where sancy, white blooms offer a premium for indiscreet attempts at pincking! And the indescribable pleasure, on a sultry morning, when the ripple is still a thing to be hoped for, of stealing carefully past the rocks in the outlet and getting a draught from a clear spring that nestles under the bank as if coquetting with the wistful stream that may not possess it!

Such a morning is now foremost in my mind. The ripple had just announced itself after an hour's dead calm, and our boatmen was making careful way over the choicest casting ground near the outlet, but nothing rewarded our efforts until we reached the shallows bordering a broad meadow, and in close proximity to a severely practical dairy, where disagreeable odors are given to the traveling public free of cost. This stretch of water has always held a deep charm for me; looked at carefully it has the appearance of transparent amber, and on the clean gravel bottom Sir Salmo takes his siesta or makes merry with his friends. No sooner had we reached it on the morning in question, than a daring trout made a dart for the sedate governor occupying the place of honor on my cast.

"Didn't strike soon enough, eh?" queried my companion, who was casting diligently from the bow of the boat.

"No," I answered, a trifle ruefully, but with some secret satisfaction in Salmo's escape. This satisfaction, it is perhaps needless to say, was not shared by my companion—one of the best and kindest of men, but too keen an angler to appreciate even philosophical admiration for the cleverness of an escaped trout.

I was duly punished for my treason, though no more rises disturbing our equanimity until we had gone well on toward deep water. Then came a sudden "Ha! Sheldon! here's our big fellow at last!" which made the boatman turn his head, and drew my attention to the graceful line that went out with such unerring precision from the bow. It was taut now, and struggling to make his escape from a deceitful grouse hackle dropper, was a goodly trout. In the water he seemed a monster, and I watched the light four-ounce rod and line drawn gut leader with considerable apprehension, particularly after we had begun to drift among the tall weeds. Nature will forgive me if, in my secret soul, I hoped this was not a clever trout. Yet I had not much confidence in my own hope, and we were all rather nervously awaiting his first run.

One of the same kind, three or four evenings previous, had given an angler good sport by making two 50-yard runs, a high spring out of water and varied proceedings between whiles by sundry jerks and twists as entertaining to spectators as interesting to the fisherman. But if there is one riddle more difficult of guessing than another it is whether the trout you have hooked will adopt the particular method of your friend's in his struggle for freedom. The one my companion had impaled was not imitative, or frisky or reckless. I fancy his disposition was not of the best for he sulked and pulled, sulked and pulled until we fancied everything strained beyond redemption, when suddenly, with what Robert Burns would have called "a total lack of gin-horse prudence," he made a determined rush forward and found himself in the landing net.

"This ain't his first scrimmage, don't you forget," said the boatman, showing how the trout's mouth was scarred.

"No, no," answered the successful fisherman, lighting his pipe. "He's theascal that carried off my leader last week. Pull a turn on your left and we'll try for another. How is he?"

"Fine. One pound and seven-eighths, full weight; 18 inches long. Not exactly perfect."

Perhaps not as the triplicate ratio of solids goes, but to my mind a grand creature.

No long, lean characteristics about him. Altogether plump and jolly looking, with a neat head and good breadth of back. In color he was a picture—constantly bringing to my mind sunlight on a bed of gravel, with just a touch of dark, green shadow and graceful bits of white sea-f foam. His back was an olive, almost invisible from its depth of tint; his sides resembled nothing so much as the heart of a sea-shell, except that the center band of rich salmon pink was too firm and decided, and on the under side pale yellow and white gave him the necessary delicacy of hue. The spots on the back and sides were dark and large, those on the back especially so, nearly round in form and extending to the tip of the nose. From gill to tail right through the centre of the side ran a straight, dark line and the gills themselves were a bright reddish color.

A further examination showed this in relation to the fins:

Dorsal.....	11 spines.
Pectoral.....	12 spines.
Ventral.....	8 spines.
Caudal.....	20 spines.
Anal.....	11 spines.

Though we caught several fish this morning, he dwarfed them all and we obeyed the midday horn with unusual alacrity that he might come under the inspection of other fishermen. On every side his beauty was conceded, and later in the day when he made his second appearance served with an appetizing sauce, there was no dissenting voice as to his excellence. Baked, the flesh was of a pale shrimp pink color, and fat creamed up among the flaky tid-bits with a delicate richness that would have made the shade of Dame Juliana pale with envy of the jolly fishermen who were permitted such a dish.

In choosing my companion's prize capture as a specimen, I mean nothing derogatory to his finny brethren. Even the beautiful Greeks had an Adonis and trout should be willing to have one of their number described, however imperfectly, instead of all being classed in a bunch as "speckled beauties." In truth all Webber trout are princely creatures, even the little fellows, running about three to the pound, which insist on taking your fly and making a plucky little fight merely to give you the annoyance of throwing them back in the water, have a soft, silvery beauty that makes one think of childhood. Nothing grieves me more deeply than when one of these daring little imps gets wound up and dies before he can be extricated. I feel as I always do after plucking some tender half-blown flower.

The trout most often taken in Webber weighs from three quarters to one pound, is as pretty in his way as our beauty and makes a very gallant fight for liberty. A good angler fishing Webber every day for a week or two soon gets rid of the idea that all well-struck fish are his. Care in handling and playing obviates loss to a certain extent, but when a trout gets possession of 50 or 60 yards of line where weeds are plenty, it is not well to be too sure of him. The chances are he will get back to his feeding ground with half your leader as a trophy. And strange as it may seem this my uncertainty is an added charm to angling. Man, in everything, seems to love the chase as much as the capture and the angler rarely finds a trout so desirable as the one he loses.

There is no doubt but the high degree of excellence attained by Webber trout is due to almost perfect spawning and feeding grounds. In addition to its clear, pure mountain source, the inlet makes quite an extended curve through open meadow land upon which the sunlight pours its warmest rays from morning until evening. Here on a bed of gleaming gravel trout are safe to bask in light and add warmth to their coloring. Farther up, where the stream comes through a wooded meadow, the soft bed is full of caddis and the surface literally swarming with small and tempting-looking flies. Still higher, where it springs forth from the mountain, its waters are as clear and pure as only snow can make them, and never stream leaped more gallantly over the boulders of its bed. Touching the lake itself as a home for trout, every verdict must needs be favorable.

Where else shall we find such depths and shoals, such purple clearness and such tender shade? Guarded by winter snow and warmed by summer sun, it rests in the bosom of the mountains—a drop of purple blood nourishing the tall pines of the heights.

From actual knowledge I can say that trout from Independence, Fordyce, Truckee River and Lake Tahoe are in no way comparable to the Webber fish for delicacy and richness of flavor; and should it ever come to a question of restocking this lake, it is the general opinion of anglers that none but the same trout should be used. To turn less gamey or more gross fish into such a bit of bonnie water would be an outrage nature could never pardon.

PATRONELLA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15, 1888.

The lengthening days of autumn and suggestions of severity in the winds are bringing the army of anglers to the city from the resorts where they have spent so many weeks in royal sport. In so far as can be learned at present writing the season has been a very peculiar one. Aversing the catches, about as great weight of fish has been taken as in other seasons, but in numbers the kills have been much smaller than in former summers. A very observant fisherman related his experience at Webber and Independence to us the other day. He had fished those lakes for several years and invariably with marked success. This year he did fairly well, but under conditions dissimilar to any previously noted. At Webber especially, the latter part of June usually brings black and red ants in myriads, together with duns of a dozen varieties, and black flies in millions. Toward evening the drowned flies lie on the lake almost in windrows, and the water fairly boils with greedy feeding trout. This year few or no ants were there. The duns were absent and about all of the flies common to that lovely body of water. There was a little greyish midge on the lake in limited numbers, but until the flies had fallen into the water and become soaked, the fish did not take them. The old standards in the way of tackle were comparatively valueless. The dun spiders and other duns of which the Webber anglers had secured scores of dozens were rejected. For a little time the Francis seemed to be the proper thing, but that fancy was soon dispelled. Governors, red spinners, the various pheasant hackles, grouse and woodcock winged flies, and other standard colors were taken or unnoticed in most capricious fashion. The most careful comparison of notes did not determine any one fly as superior to others, until chance put one with bright yellow body on a cast. The yellow seemed the thing and was thereafter used by all who had them or could borrow from more fortunate brethren. But even with the prevailing color there was manifest a most surprising lack of keenness on the part of the trout. At intervals they were taken freely, sometimes for an hour or two, and would then refuse anything thrown to them. Nor was luck better when the spoon was used. Webber has always yielded good catches to the spoon and some decent trout were of course hooked, but a dozen fish weighing from three-quarters to a pound and a quarter about exhausted the patience of the trollers this year. A singular fact was that such as were taken were lusty, fat and unusually strong.

Some rather startling incidents are related of certain parties of noted anglers while in the mountains. An impromptu excursion from Webber to Fordyce was recently made by a jolly party, well known to San Francisco. If styled Wilson, Willard, Jack and Maddox, none but friends can identify them. Maddox and son took horses, the others traveled by wagon to the summit overlooking Fordyce. Reaching the spot where foot travel had perforce to begin, a consultation was had, with looks askance first one of the party and then another, showed disinclination to face the roughnesses and perils of the rugged granite mountain sides which shut Fordyce in like prison walls. A few minutes chat determined Willard and Jack. They would stay with the wagon and go back to Webber. Wilson and his attendant boatman decided to finish the trip as per schedule, and levied upon the others for all luncheon supplies, potted meats, delicacies, and drinkables. Starting down the bald granite, dotted here and there by clumps of spruce and fir, and often stumbling at imminent danger to impediments carried. Wilson had descended about half way, and halted in the edge of a little meadow encircled by a close fringe of small firs. The boatman a little before had taken another course which brought him to the opposite edge of the clearing. Before resting long Wilson noticed a low, rumbling sound which seemed to proceed from some animal near at hand, and looking round saw a red-eyed, wild mountain bull just in the act of charging upon him. To drop his basket, bags and tackle was the work of a moment, and to climb upon the trunk of a fallen tree of another. The bull made vigorous demonstrations. The angler was unarmed, except that he had a pocket pistol and a box of shot cartridges to fit it. To call the boatman was anything but safe for the latter functionary, and the angler stood on that tree-trunk while the lagging moments passed, in dread suspense lest the bull should confine him to the unused platform indefinitely. Finally the pistol was brought forth, and many of the peepery shot-cartridges discharged at short range into the bull, but only to enrage him the more.

Disheartened at last Wilson gave vent to a whoop of mingled rage and despair. The yell did what force and pain could not, and the bull ran off inconsequently. The angler resumed his luggage and reached Fordyce in safety to find Maddox installed in Roning's charming cabin, with a mess of biggish trout sizzling for supper.

Bloody Run, a streamlet near by, was full of fish, black and lean, having just finished spawning. The party had no luck in the evening, but with bait and the fish taken were not discomfited. On the next day a trip was made to the head of the lake where Meadow Lake Creek enters it. There plenty of clean fish were taken, but not with the fly. Only the spoon or bait could be used.

Fordyce and Roning's Cottage have entertained some lively parties. The place was known to but a few until four years ago when Mr. J. M. Bassford Jr., Henry Bassford and a friend chanced upon it while fishing the river below the lake. The river afforded such sport that the lake was neglected at that time, but in the following year the same persons went to Fordyce with proper introductions, and had such sport as is vouchsafed only to those who can depart cheerfully from beaten paths and go trustfully into by-ways with only a piece of bacon, a sufficient firing-pan, tackle enough, and trust in that Providence which tempers all severities to anglers and other good people. The Fordyce trout that year were keen. The following year splendid sport was had there, and large boxes of superb fish were sent to friends. Last year even better luck than before rewarded the same persons, and those who received fish united in pronouncing them unexceptionable. The general singularity of the season may account for the comparative paucity of the recent visit referred to elsewhere.

"Plebian Pacers."

The lateral motion fellows are showing that the stigma of plebian can no longer be attached to them. The dams of Arrow and Bessemer by thoroughbreds, and these of high cast, the sire of Budd Doble with a strong dash of blood, and the granddam of Balsara Wilkes a mare of high breeding. Arrow and Bessemer are by far the best two juvenile pacers which have ever appeared. Arrow with a four-year-old record of 2:14, Bessemer at the same age only a second behind. The dam of Arrow by a son of Glencoe, and plenty more crosses of high strains. Concord, the sire of the dam of Bessemer, was by Lexington, and his dam Bellamira by imp. Monarch. Then the sire of Bessemer is a son of Tattler, the dam of which was the thoroughbred mare Tell Tale having a double strain of Medoc. The sire of Budd Doble, Indianapolis, was three-quarters of the same blood as Voltaire, both from dams by Mambrino Chief.

The races which these junior sidewheelers won at Cleveland were remarkable. Bessemer in a field of eleven won in straight heats, 2:18, 2:16½, 2:15; Arrow with seven competitors repeated the straight work in 2:15½, 2:14½, 2:13½. At Buffalo the Californian had a close call. Making a bad break in the first heat it was all that Doble could do to save his distance, and in the second the prevailing opinion was that Gossip Jr. beat him, though the judges awarded it to both in 2:13½. After the dead heat Arrow had it all his own way, the report stating: "For the third, fourth and fifth heats Arrow was much too fast for the others." There was where the racing blood asserted its superiority.

Golden Gate Stallion Trot.

Should the trio of stallions keep in good shape, their race on the opening day of the Golden Gate Fair will be a grand affair. That two of them are in prime order so far as can be told by ocularity, we are ready to vouch for. Guy Wilkes is not only looking well, but moving with more precision than usual. Stamboul, to the eye, could not appear better, and as he jogged around the track Thursday morning he went with such a buoyant air as if he realized that the garland of championship encircled his neck. Holly is not apt to make a mistake in ordering his horses, and it is safe to expect that Woodnut will be in like good condition. Stamboul having demonstrated that great improvement is likely to follow after the mouth is full, it must not be forgotten that the son of Nutwood stands on the same ground. He showed that he was coming all the time in his races of last year. At San Jose, August 18 h, he won the first and third heats in 2:21½, 2:21, having won at Petaluma, August 6th, in 2:23½, 2:24½, 2:23. Jane L. beat him at San Jose, but at Sacramento, September 22d, he defeated her and a numbers of others, a straight heat victory in 2:21½, 2:23½, 2:22½. On August 10th he won on the Bay District course a hard race of five heats, but his best performance was at Stockton, when on September 28th he beat Conde, Black Diamond, Jane L. and Longfellow. The first heat was won by Conde in 2:20, the second, third and fourth by Woodnut in 2:27½, 2:19½, 2:20. Thus during the grand circuit he kept lowering his figures, and now there is no telling the mark he can make.

We felt confident that the association made a wise move in offering the stallion purse; from the present outlook it seems to have been an inspiration. Ten thousand people is none to many to calculate upon, and arrangements should be made whereby a still larger assemblage can be provided for.

Chico Fair.

From the list of entries published it will be seen that the fair which opens at Chico next Thursday, 21st inst., promises capital sport. Coming at the same time as Petaluma there were apprehensions of short entry lists, though as was predicted in this paper, there are so many horses in training in California that such fears were unwarranted. The result proves that the ground was tenable. In all of the important races the entries are as many as can be handled satisfactorily, and so far as our knowledge extends the horses in the various classes are so closely matched that interesting contests will be the rule. Take the 2:27 class which is a fair illustration: Wallace G. 2:26½, Jim L. 2:37, Hazel Kirk, 2:30, Barbaro 2:30, Eros 2:29½, Ha Ha 2:31, Ed 2:26½, Jim Blaine, 2:39½. Victor 2:30½, Artist 2:26½. If Jim Blaine is the black gelding formerly owned by Mr. Fletcher, he has a record of 2:26½, and as the above are taken from the Year Book there may have been a lowering since the first of January. At all events there is little hazard in predicting a good race, and the more study that is given the entries in all the classes, the stronger will be the impression that the races will be as exciting as a person could desire.

There is no question in regard to the attendance. This being the first of the up country fairs the charm of novelty will be a potent auxiliary. That section of the country never fails to make a crop, some years, perhaps, more favorable than others, but invariably a good return. That means settled prosperity, and when a majority of people are doing well that is a guarantee that the attractions of the fair will not be overlooked.

Our two visits to Chico awakens pleasant recollections. Pleasant reminiscences of the people, the country, everything in fact, we saw, met or heard. A grand country well worth a trip from the bay, or from across the mountains to visit. The northern citrus belt, the centre of a fruit region which cannot be surpassed, the home of all the cereals, thousands of acres in vines, ten of thousands in wheat. A grand country for stock, clear streams which rise in the higher altitude, springs breaking from the foothills. Our first visit was in springtime, or rather at the season when spring comes in the Eastern States. The first night there was a thunderstorm, and the peals, the flashes, and the heavy rain-drops beating on the roof was music that reminded of "back home." The wheat was in bloom, and a drive from the town to the place then owned by Harmon Bay, through the rancho of Mr. Reavis, to the Sacramento River was an enjoyable trip. Between Mr. Reavis' house and the river were fields of grain, hundreds of acres in each, and not a spot where there was the least indication of failure, the bearded heads all of a height. Grand old oaks in the pasture fields and herds of sleek cattle and colts which carried the marks of high lineage in their graceful forms.

Could we leave home there would be a strong temptation to revisit Chico. Petaluma would pull strongly in that direction, and to make a choice be somewhat troublesome. There will be plenty of enjoyment at either place, and plenty of people to cheer the victor.

Late Arrivals at the Oakland Trotting Park

Saturday last John A. Goldsmith arrived at the Oakland track with his stable of horses, and Tuesday of this week the Rosemeade string took up their quarters there. Under Mr. Goldsmith's charge are William Corbitt's Guy Wilkes, Sable Wilkes, Grandee, a two-year-old sister to Sable Wilkes and Mamie Comet. L. J. Rose's contingent are Stamboul, Alcazar, Dubec and Visalia, Walter Maybern having charge. All are looking well. We saw Guy Wilkes and Grandee worked on Tuesday, and so far as we are able to judge from the exhibition these two are in capital shape. Guy certainly looks better than he did in 1886, and appears to have more "snap" than he ever had. Speed too, judging from the way he came down the stretch at the conclusion of the mile, and to our eye with easier action. Grandee has always been a prime favorite of ours. We watched him closely in his exercise last year and came to the conclusion that he was one of the phenomenal trotters. He has grown more than we expected, and though not as well "furnished" as some of our California three-year-olds, he has gained substance to an extent that augurs plenty of power when fully matured. As he will trot in Petaluma next week we will omit what we think of his present speed. The watch was not called upon, and the eye is not entirely trustworthy. This much we can say that he was moving with his old-time easy action, and with more power. Sable Wilkes is looking well, having gained in length since his vacation commenced. His sister is of an entirely different build, more of what is usually called pacing form, though sidewheelers vary in shape as well as other horses.

The only one of the Rosemeade string we have seen at the time of writing is Visalia. She is one of the handsomest fillies we ever saw and judging from seeing her in harness, jogging Rathbone by her side, her form is cast in a high mold. The double strain of The Moor is backed by a son of Langford, so that it is not surprising that she should show a "close approximation to the form of a racehorse." We use the words marked with quotation marks with a good deal of satisfaction, as in one of our first controversies, the man who took the other side rang all manner of changes on the use of them claiming that racing form and trotting shape were entirely different and attempted to show that they were antagonistic. Now that the fastest trotters are approaching the model of a majority of the magnates of the turf, and a large majority of breeders are beginning to recognize the advantages of "high form," the mountain built of ridicule and sneers is fast sinking to the plain of common sense. Much as has been written about Stamboul, he is well worthy of still more attention, and if we can possibly manage to spare the time will give him a close examination and be prepared to publish an exact description in the paper of next week.

Sonoma and Marin.

Two grand counties are those which bear the above titles. Marin from bay to ocean, Sonoma one of the most fertile shires in this land of fertility. Fortunate in location and climate, still more fortunate in the intelligence of the people who dwell there. Small farms prevail, and there are few ranches extending over leagues of country. There is a diversity of pursuits, and consequently a variety of interests. Nearly all, however, are dependent on stock raising, agriculture or horticulture, and consequently the annual fairs are given a hearty support.

There are few counties in any country which would sustain two such exhibitions as that which is now under way at Santa Rosa, and which will be followed the coming week by that at Petaluma. Marin, of course, is an important factor in the second exhibition, though the bulk of support comes from Sonoma.

Since the new grounds were obtained, the new track built and the other adjuncts completed, Petaluma is not outranked by any of the California fairs, and from those who have trained horses there this summer, we learn that the track is as nearly perfect as can be looked for. It is unquestionably a fast track. So nearly a "dead level" that the eye fails to detect inequalities, with soil admirably adapted for the purpose, kept in the careful manner it is, it could scarcely fail to be fast. That it is also safe is the verdict of all. The best evidence of that being the freedom of ailments among the large number of horses which have been trained there. The management is excellent. J. H. White, the President, has had a great deal of experience in all things pertaining to an agricultural exhibition. One of the most prominent breeders of Holstein cattle in the State, he is thoroughly posted in the cattle interests. The best proof of his knowledge of bovines is the opinion of competent judges, who say that his herd of the famous breed which he gives particular attention cannot be excelled.

Horses have been given a full share of attention, and from the time we landed in California until the present

Los Angeles Fair.

THIRD DAY—AUGUST 8TH.

The attendance on the third day was very large, the grand stand being crowded to its utmost capacity, even the stairs and approaches finding individuals glad to pay the extra charge for an exalted position where a good view of the course could be obtained. The racing was very fine, the contests being close and the time good.

The first race on the programme, a three-quarter mile dash, had four starters, W. L. Appleby's chestnut filly Carmen being a hot favorite. This filly was as fit as hands could make her, and she won easily by five lengths. There was a short delay at the starting post, owing to the fractionsness of Welcome, and when the flag fell Carmen was in front, and made the running with Serpolette and Welcome in close attendance. The second favorite, Heliotrope, was slow at getting off. At the half mile Carmen was half a length in front, Welcome second and Serpolette third, with Heliotrope some two lengths behind. This order was unchanged at the three-quarter, where O'Neil and Heliotrope began to move up, taking at the seven-eighths second position. In the stretch Carmen was still in the lead, winning in a canter by five lengths, Heliotrope second, a length in front of Serpolette. The time, 1:15½, is very good, and shows the daughter of Wild Idle to be an excellent filly.

AUGUST 8—RUNNING RACE.

For 3-year-olds. Purse $100; $260 to first, $100 to second, $40 to third; ¾ mile dash.

Mr. W. L. Appleby's ch f Carmen by Wildidle, dam Nettie Brown, 113 lbs., Hitchcock 1
Mrs. S. B. Wolfkill's f Heliotrope by Joe Hooker, dam Yolone, by Norfolk, 113 lbs., O'Neil 2
Owen Bros.' ch f Serpolette, by Norfolk, dam Mattie Glen, 113 lbs., Howson 3
Also ran Welcome (Cook).

Won by five lengths; length between second and third; time 1:15½.

Pools sold—Carmen $55, Heliotrope $35, field $9.

INCIDENTS.

A complaint was made to the judges that Wicks, the rider of John Treat, had struck Hitchcock, the rider of Laura Gardner, over the head with his whip, when entering the stretch. On this being proved the judges imposed a fine of $50 and debarred him from riding till the fine was paid. When in the stretch, Moses B, swerving from side to side in distress, collided with and injured a spectator, George Howson, who, in excitement, had run into the track to see the finish. The injury is not serious.

There were eleven entries in the second race, a ¼ mile dash. Four starters came to the post, Idalene Cotton, Moses B, Laura Gardner and John Treat. The first three were in the mile dash on the previous Monday, which race Laura won in 1:13¾, with Moses second and Idalene third. In this race, therefore, Laura Gardner was a hot favorite. She proved herself again a thorough racehorse, running a splendid race in most creditable time. But Idalene Cotton showed up magnificently, being beaten by a short neck only. They got away on the third attempt, John Treat leading, Idalene Cotton being second and the favorite third.

Passing the stand, John Treat, for his part, led, Laura Gardner a length behind, and they held their positions to the quarter pole, when Cotton began to move up, taking at the half a length, from her to the side of the favorite, were racing a ¼ mile, and then quarter pole the filly took a half length. John Treat's chestnut colt led at the half of the race, Idalene Cotton being second, and Laura Gardner third. The time, 1:15½, is very good, and shows the daughter of Wild Idle to be an excellent filly.

AUGUST 8—TROTTER.

For 3-year-olds. Purse $100; $260 to first, $100 to second, $40 to third; ¾ mile dash.

W. L. Appleby's ch f Carmen by Wildidle, dam Nettie Brown, 113 lbs., Hitchcock 1
Mrs. S. B. Wolfkill's f Heliotrope by Joe Hooker, dam Yolone, by Norfolk, 113 lbs., O'Neil 2
Owen Bros.' ch f Serpolette, by Norfolk, dam Mattie Glen, 113 lbs., Howson 3
Also ran Welcome (Cook).

Won by a short neck. Lengths between second and third. Time, 2:17½.

Pools sold—Carmen $55, Heliotrope $35, field $9.

In the three-year-old race there were but two starters, Direct and Gossiper. Direct won in straight heats.

TROTTER.

Three-year-old stake, foals of 1885; $50 entrance, $25 to accompany nomination, $25 July 31; $250 added. Mile heats, 3 in 5:

Pleasanton Stock Farm, b c Direct, by Director, dam Echors, by Echo, McDowell 1 1 1
C. A. Durfee, b c Gossiper, by Simons, dam Lady Bryan, by Smuggler, Durfee 2 2 2
Time, 2:38, 2:29½, 2:30½.
No pools sold.

The fourth race of the programme was the event of the day—indeed, the event of the meeting. The free-for-all trot had three entries: O. A. Hickok's Arab, record 2:16¾, the winner of 82 heats below 2:30; Palo Alto's Manzanita, possessor of the champion four-year-old record, 2:16, winner of 20 heats below 2:30, most of which were in the teens; and L. J. Rose's Stamboul, record 2:17½, winner of 27 heats below 2:30. Arab is ten years old; Manzanita and Stamboul were both foaled in 1882.

The public expected this to be a race worth seeing, and speculation as to the result ran high. The enforced withdrawal of Manzanita was a disappointment to many. Her irrevocable breakdown is much to be regretted.

Arab is (s. to b.) by Arthurton, dam Lady Hamilton, untraced.

Stamboul is by Sultan record 2:24, dam Fleetwing, who also threw to Sultan's cover Ruhy, 2:19¾. Fleetwing was by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of a daughter of George M. Patehen, record 2:23¾; next dam by Old Abdallah.

Before the race Arab was the favorite, selling $100 against $40 for Stamboul. Both horses came to the score in fine condition. On the third attempt they got away, Arab leading by a half length. But before reaching the eighth pole Stamboul was nose and nose with the gelding, and the two animals went like a team until just before reaching the quarter pole, where Stamboul had the lead by half a length. Time, 32½ seconds. The second quarter of a mile was covered in 31½, with no change in their positions. Time for the half, 1:04. This is the fastest half recorded for a stallion. With Stamboul still in the lead, the pair sped on to the three-quarter post. Time, 1:39½. They swept into the stretch, places unchanged, but while Hickok was urging Arab on, Mabon was holding back the eager stallion. Down the stretch they flew, Stamboul first. Twice Hickok called on his gallant gelding to do his best, but it was useless. They passed the wire, Stamboul leading by a length, in 2:15, the fastest time ever made by a California stallion.

The spectators were intensely excited by the splendid contest they saw, but when the blackboard announced the wonderful record, they went fairly wild. Mr. Rose was overwhelmed with congratulations. The pools were now sold at $100 for Stamboul and $10 for Arab. Those who put their money on the fleet-footed stallion before the race were now happy.

The second heat was a contest as good as the first. They got off on the second score, Arab in the lead by half a head. A hundred yards away Stamboul pushed to the front, leading to the quarter by half a length in 33 seconds. At the half the time was 1:07, the stallion being a length in front of his competitor.

In this order they reached the three-quarter pole, in 1:42, when Stamboul began to let in more daylight, and at the head of the stretch was five lengths in advance of Arab. Arab's efforts made no change in these positions. Mabon was pulling hard on the stallion's bit all down the home stretch, and Stamboul came in, an easy winner, in 2:17½.

The result of the race was now a foregone conclusion. In the pools Stamboul sold for $200, while very few wanted Arab at $10.

In the start for the third heat Stamboul had the advantage by half a head. All round the track they kept the same position, almost neck-and-neck, Arab fighting hard for the victory, but not able to match Stamboul. At the seven-eighths pole Stamboul drew away, and won easily, in 2:16¾.

Stamboul's performance has been a great surprise to every one, and it is one in which California's horsemen may well take pride. Only three stallions have ever surpassed the record, 2:15—these are Maxey Cobb, Patron and Phallas.

Maxey Cobb, in 1884, at nine years of age, made his record of 2:13¾ against time. Phallas, in the same year, aged seven, made 2:13¾; and Patron, in 1887, at five years old, marked up 2:14¾ for five-year-old stallions to equal. The nearest to this was Stamboul's record of last year, 2:17½.

SUMMARIES.

Trotting Purse $1,200 free for all; $500 to first, $300 to second, $180 to third, $120 to fourth. Mile heats, beat 3 in 5.
L. J. Rose, Los Angeles, Cal., b s Stamboul, by Sultan, dam Fleetwing by Hambletonian—Mabon 1 1 1
O. A. Hickok, San Francisco, Cal., b s Arab, by Arthurton, dam Lady Hamilton—Hickok 2 2 2

Pools sold. Arab $60, Stamboul $20. After first heat, Stamboul $60, Arab $30.

FOURTH DAY.

The races arranged for to-day were four in number, the McGinnis two-year-old stakes and an all ages purse, and two trotting races, the Sunny Slope for two-year-olds and the 2:30 class.

For the first of these three starters appeared: Wild Oats, Fandango and Four Aces. Each of these colts had enthusiastic friends and betting was brisk. Wild Oats sold in the pools at $35, Fandango at $25 and Four Aces at $24. They got away on the second attempt, Wild Oats a length in the lead. At the quarter pole Fandango had moved from third place and was even with Wild Oats and Four Aces on their quarters. Gravelly he drew up and the three were neck-and-neck. Entering the stretch Fandango led for an instant, but then he was swept down by the other two. It was a very close race, and the winner was not decided until the finish. Wild Oats won by a short neck. Time, 1:17½.

For the second of these three starters appeared: Wild Oats, Fandango and Four Aces. Each of these colts had enthusiastic friends and betting was brisk. at once went to the front; at the quarter she was 10 lengths ahead, which lead she kept until she passed under the wire in 2:46.

No. 14. The Sunny Slope Trotting Stake—For two-year-olds, foals of 1886; $50 entrance; $25 forfeit, or only $10 if declared January 1, 1887; $200 added. Mile and repeat. Value of stake computed and divided as all other purses.

Time, 2:46, 2:5.

The event of the day was the fourth race—2:30 class, which was a trotting purse of $1,000, mile heats, best three in five. The entries were: C. A. Duffee's blk. g. Don Tomas, Duffee driving; O. A. Hickok's b. e. Elector, Hickok driving; Charles Davis & Co's blk. g. Franklin, Donahau, driving and the Palo Alto Stock Farm's b. g. Express, Marvin driving. Franklin had a slight advantage in the start, Express Elector and Don Tomas in a bunch close up. Elector broke, the clip being too fast, and at the quarter he was 10 lengths behind. Don Tomas was next the leader, Express was third, Franklin led all the way by about five lengths. The other three fought hard for second place. Elector came home running, Don Tomas made a short break just before the wire.

The judges announced: Franklin first, Don Tomas and Express dead heat for second place, and Elector fourth. Before the heat Franklin sold for $50; Elector, $29; Don Tomas and Express, $10.

In the second heat Elector got away first. He and Franklin trotted head and head nearly to the three-quarter pole. Franklin broke and the other two contested hotly all the way home, Elector finishing first, Don Tomas half a length behind, and ten lengths in front of Franklin, Express fourth. Time, 2:21. The pooling before this heat was: Franklin $100, Elector $40, Don Tomas and Express $12. After it Franklin sold for $170, Elector $82, and the field for $10.

The third heat was a close and exciting one. Elector got off ahead in advance of Franklin, Don Tomas and Express being even. At the quarter pole Elector and Franklin were exactly even, while Don Tomas was a close third, with Express at his heels. Express worked up to third place before the half was reached and Don Tomas went back behind five lengths. Elector and Franklin were neck and neck until the three-quarter pole was reached, when Franklin pulled a head a half a length, with Express third, five lengths, Don Tomas fourth, ten lengths behind. Into the stretch they came, Elector and Franklin so close together that it was impossible to tell which led. Coming fast and hard, the two animals strove to win, and Franklin managed to stick his nose out ahead just sufficient for the judges to see it. The crowd thought it was a dead heat. Don Tomas appeared to have fagged out, for he and Express came down slow fully twenty lengths behind the leaders. Time, 2:22.

The pooling was: Franklin $100, and the field $20.

The Fourth Heat.—The horses got off on the second attempt, Franklin first, Elector second, Don Tomas third and Express fourth. At the quarter Franklin led by a nose, Elector second, Don Tomas and Express third. Express broke badly and lost ten lengths. At the half they stood: Franklin a half length ahead, Elector second, Don Tomas third, three lengths, and Express fourth, five lengths. At the three-quarter pole Franklin led by half a length, Elector second, Don Tomas third, Express fourth. Coming down the stretch Elector and Franklin were again side by side, and it seemed that this would surely be a dead heat. Don Tomas and Express followed a little in the rear. Nearer and nearer the wire they came, and the leaders neck and neck, and the excitement of the crowd rose to fever heat.

Less than a hundred feet from the wire Franklin broke and Elector won in 2:23.

Fifth Heat.—The start was good. At the quarter Franklin was leading, Elector close up, Don Tomas but half a length behind. At the half mile post he had passed Elector and was scarce a length behind the leader. The positions remained the same till they reached the head of the stretch. They fought a hard battle for first place, but Franklin continued to lead, winning the heat and race. Time, 2:25. Elector a good second, Don Tomas third.

Trotting purse—$1,000; 2:30 class; $500 to first, $250 to second, $150 to third, $100 to fourth horse. Mile heats, best 3 in 5.

FIFTH DAY, FRIDAY, August 10.

The first race for this day was the Los Angeles Derby, one and one-half mile dash. Two three-year-olds faced the starter. These were Origin and Ed McGinnis. The pool sold at first McGinnis $25, Origin $5, but just before the start they sold even. McGinnis soon led by twenty lengths. At the seven-eighths Origin was still farther behind, and he could not "come on," although at the mile and a quarter McGinnis was forced to come down to a slow gallop. Time, 2:50.

Summary.—The Los Angeles Derby—Stake for three-year-olds, foals of 1885; $50 entrance; $25 forfeit, or only $15 if declared on January 1, 1887; $300 added. One and one-half miles. Stakes computed and divided 60, 30 and 10 per cent.

Pacific Stables' b. e. Ed McGinnis, 118 pounds, Al Cook riding 1
H. H. Field's b. e. Origin, 118 pounds, Frisco 2
Time, 2:50.

The second race was a three-quarter mile dash, all ages purse of $400. The entries were: Shinner's ch m Sprey 113 pounds, Carrillo up; the Maltese Villa stables' ch m Idaleene Cotton, 113 pounds, Al Cook up; Mrs. S. B. Wolfskill's b. f. Heliotrope, 109 pounds, Ed O'Neil up; Morino's b. f. Carmalita, 113 pounds, Wicks up; Appleby's ch f Carmen, 106 pounds, Appleby up; George W. Howson's g. g. Johnny Grey, 115 pounds, Howson up.

Johnny Grey led from the start, Heliotrope and Carmen a length behind, the rest closely bunched. At the half Grey was two lengths in front of Heliotrope, Carmen was trying hard for second place. She caught and passed her, and at the three-quarter pole was leading Grey by half a length, Heliotrope a close third.

Carmalita, Idaleene Cotton and Sprey were close together in the order named. As they dashed into the stretch Heliotrope came even with Johnny Grey, Carmen leading by a length. The three foremost nearing the wire had a hard tussle for the lead, and finished Carmen, Heliotrope and Johnny Grey in the order named, Carmalita fourth, Idaleene Cotton fifth, Sprey sixth.

Summary.—Three-quarter mile dash, all ages; purse $400, of which $260 to first, $100 to second, $40 to third horse, Three-quarters of a mile.

Time, 1:15.

Pools: Carmen, $50; Cotton, $30; field, $15.

The third race was a five-eighth mile dash for two-year-olds. Futurity, Naicho B. and Pandango were the starters. They got off on the trial, an exactly even start. The positions during the whole race varied but a few inches, and the consequence was a dead heat between Futurity and Naicho B. Pandango losing by only a short head. Time, 1:04.

The owners of Naicho B. and Futurity decided to run another heat instead of dividing the purse. In this contest Futurity lead until nearly at the three-quarter pole, the two were neck to neck on entering the stretch. Naicho B. passed under the wire a head in the lead. Time, 1:05.

Pools sold before the heat, Futurity $50, Naicho B. $35. Five-eighths of a mile dash. Two-year-olds.

For the four-year-old trotting purse only Dubec and Ella appeared. The mare led to the quarter pole but broke and fell back ten yards. But she recovered the loss and on entering the home stretch they were neck and neck. Half way home Dubec opened a length between them, winning the heat in 2:28.

In the second heat Ella led nearly to the quarter pole, but from there home Dubec led by a length. Time, 2:28. The start for the third heat was exactly even, and at the quarter Dubec led by a length. In the next furlong Ella caught him and they made a close race to the half. Both broke, and Dubec catching himself first opened a gap of five lengths. Before the three-quarter pole was reached Ella's nose was at the gelding's shoulder, and at the head of the stretch they were again on even terms. But as before Dubec passed the wire a length in advance. Time, 2:28.

Trotting—Four-year-old stake, foals of 1884; $25 entry; $25 July 31st; $250 added; same terms as No. 10; mile heats 3 in 5. Opened by consent. See conditions.

The fifth race for this day, the 2:20 class, had three starters: J. H. Kelly's b. g. Valentine, Kelly driving; the Pleasant Stock Farm's ch m Maid of Oaks, Andy McDowell driving; and W. H. Seales' b. g. Alfred S., M. McManue driving. On the second score Maid of Oaks and Alfred S. got off in the lead, Valentine a length behind. Beyond the half mile pole the Maid broke and fell back to third place, Alfred S. getting a lead of two lengths. On the stretch the three were together. The finish was: Alfred S. first, a length ahead; Maid of Oaks second, two lengths in advance; Valentine third. Time, 2:22.

On the third score for the second heat the horses got away, the two geldings on even terms, the mare a little behind. She made a losing break and lost a length. On the back stretch she followed hard upon the others. Rounding the last turn the three were abreast. Valentine lost ten yards by a break, and the other two raced home, Alfred S. winning by a nose in 2:22. In the third heat Alfred S. led off with the maid second and Valentine third. These positions were unchanged all round and Alfred S. finished ten lengths in front of the mare who was the same distance ahead of Valentine. Time 2:21.

220 Class.—Purse $1,000; $500 to first, $250 to second, $150 to third, $100 to fourth horse. Mile heats, best three in five: W. H. Seales' b. g. Alfred S., Elmo, dam Nora Marshall, (M. McManue) 1 1 1

Time, 2:22, 2:22, 2:22.

The sixth race was the 2-year-old trotting stake, 2:20 class, mile and repeat. The entries were: The Palo Alto Stock Farm's b. f. Sunol, Marvin, driver, and L. J. Rose's h. f. Visalia, Maben, driver. They got off at the first attempt. At the quarter Sunol led by a nose, from the three eighths pole to the head of the home-stretch they were neck and neck. Here Sunol gained half a length, but Visalia came on, and they were like a team as they came home, exactly even. Just before reaching the wire, Sunol broke and won the heat by a nose in 2:32. In the next heat they were sent away on the third score. Sunol led Visalia by about a length, increased this lead on the home-stretch, winning the heat and race in 2:25. Visalia was separately turned in 2:26. The best two-year-old record to date is Wild-flower's 2:21, made seven years ago. Sunol has now tied the second best, Shamrock, by Buccaneer, who two years ago made 2:25.

SIXTH DAY.

The sixth and last day of the month fair of the Sixth District Association was the most successful of the meeting. Fully 3,000 people attended, and the day's sport was finished without hitch or unpleasantness. In the first race the favorite, Sleepy Dick won out of hand in fairly good time. The Consolation started a field of six and was one of the best races ever run on the track.

The first race was half mile heats, running, and in the first heat a poor start was made, Typesetter having the worst of it by two or three lengths. Sleepy Dick made the running and cantered in under a pull. In the second heat the horses were again sent from a bad start, but the heat was made more exciting by a hard fight between Adam and Johnny Grey.

The second race at one mile, for beaten horses, saw an excellent start, Carmelita taking up the running with Elwood close up. Along the back stretch the horses ran head and head, and might have been covered by a blanket. Positions were held around the turn and into the straight, at which time it was anybody's race. John Treat was pushed to the front, Elwood crowding him. Toward the stretch the Warwick filly Welcome was sent ahead, and took the race by a neck, John Treat beating Idaleene Cotton for second by a nose, Carmelita a short head behind Idaleene.

The third race saw considerable scoring in the first heat, a good send off being finally effected. Longfellow led to the quarter, Maggie E. and Jim Blaine well up. On the turn Express went into the air and lost a dozen lengths. After the half Maggie E. broke and fell behind, leaving Jim Blaine to crowd Longfellow down the stretch, the latter taking the heat by a length. Maggie E. took the second heat easily, Express just beating Longfellow out. The third heat also went to Maggie E., Longfellow second and Express third. Express broke badly at the half, losing a dozen lengths, but trotting the heat out square and fast thereafter. The final heat Maggie E. off with a good lead, Blaine second. Blaine soon broke and let Longfellow in for a place. Along the stretch the horses were well strung out, Maggie E. first in the race, Longfellow second and Blaine third.

LAST RACE.

The last race of the meeting for the three-minute class, brought three starters to the wire, the first heat going to Albion after a sharp struggle with Pink. The second heat was like the first, except that Dick Richmond was sent, but the pace was too strong, Pink taking the heat. In the third heat Richmond was better and finished second, Pink winning the heat. The final heat was a pretty race between the trio, Richmond leading to the quarter end then leaving his feet. Together again at the three-quarters, Pink drew away and won the heat and race, Dick Richmond finishing second, but second money was given to Albion as the stallion had finished first in one heat.

Santa Rosa.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

Aug. 14.—The tenth annual meeting of the Sonoma County Agricultural Park Association opened to-day.

The stables are well filled with race horses. Trotters, pacers and runners and the racing outlook is excellent; but the exhibition department is sadly neglected and not enough animals are on the grounds to make even the semblance of a parade. This unsatisfactory feature is not new to the Association, but has never before been quite so conspicuous by its emptiness. As there is so little to justify the expense and labor consequent on a premium list and other contingencies of a stock exhibit, the society is seriously considering the proposition of abandoning that department hereafter and making the annual meeting a matter of racing with possibly a pavilion exhibit in addition. The pavilion building cost the society $4 500, is all paid for and may be utilized to advantage, but as it has never yet yielded a profit or even paid its way, the society feels indifferent about it. This year the pavilion looks very well, but lacks a great deal of being up to previous fairs here, with nothing to attract them the attending public were anxious for the races. The card of the day contained four events and they were all finished, although it took the time into the edge of the night. Mr. H. M. Larue presided in the stand with his usual combination of poise and firmness and everything moved along smoothly. The first race had only Jack Pot and Joe Hoge for starter and the first named was so palpably the best, that it took the edge off the interest, but the second scamp was a good one. Daisy D was a strong favorite and finally won, but Al Farrow ran a dead heat with her and was beaten in the run off, through lack of condition. Farrow is the first son of Conner to appear in this section. His dam, Della Walker, was by Rifleman, but beyond her the pedigree is shrouded in mystery. For a short tread home he runs well and will prove a winner ere long.

A big pot was upset in the third race, the 2:30 trotters, where Rosie Mc heat Franklin. Franklin had done so well at Lee Angeles, that, notwithstanding his long railroad journey his party thought him good enough to win, and backed him to the last, even when it seemed manifest that he was a beaten horse. The winner, Rosie Mc, is a fine looking bay mare, fast game and exceptionally level headed and bandy. She was bred by Mr. G. W. Woodward of Yolo county, who trains and drives her himself and as her sire. Alex Button was a whilom pet of Sonoma county, the winner was very popular as well as profitable.

In the fourth race Gold Leaf added to her laurels by winning again in straight heats reducing her record to 2:20. The contending horse at the finish was San Diego and he is a good one too. He will be heard from later. Details:

Daisy D rushed to the front when the flag fell and led to the half before Farrow caught her, and at the three quarters they were head and head and fighting hard. They drove the whole quarter and came under the wire a dead lock, Kildare two lengths back, Futurity and Fusilade's Last several lengths away. Time, 1:15 1/4.

In the run off they ran together for half a mile, but in the stretch Farrow gave it up and Daisy drew away easily beating the colt two lengths in a canter. Time, 1:18.

The third was the 2:30 trotters; Judge, Franklin, Bonanza and Rosie Mc, coming up in position, in the order written. The betting was heavy on the race, the friends of Franklin backing him freely, while Rosie Mc was well supported on shorter figures. Judge and Bonanza did not figure in the betting, as it was conceded they could do nothing with either of the other two.

First Heat—At the tap of the gong Franklin broke, Rosie Mc and Bonanza following suit soon after. Judge led to the quarter, Rosie Mc second, then Franklin and Bonanza. Near the quarter Judge broke and Rosie Mc took the first place. On the back stretch Franklin went very fast and at the half he cleared a gap of four lengths. He went to her head on the turn and at the head of the stretch they squared away for home exactly even. It seemed a very open matter most of the way, but at the distance the pace got too strong for the favorite and he broke, allowing Rosie to win by three lengths; Bonanza third, Judge fourth, both way back. Time, 2:25 1/4.

Second Heat—The betting opened strongly. 30 for Franklin to 15 for the field was the rate; but the short and steadily rose and at the start it was even money. They went away with a rush, Franklin and Rosie head and head, which position they held to the three quarter pole, where the mare left her feet; she got down immediately, but the brown horse had opened a gap that could not be closed, as he won by three lengths. Rome McLean, Judge third; Bonanza fourth. Time, 2:24.

Third Heat—Pools: Franklin $30; Field, $7; Rosie showed the way around the turn; Franklin going to a break in his efforts to overtake her and at this quarter, she was ten lengths ahead of him. On the back stretch he closed some of the space but broke again. On the turn he settled and came on very strong and determined for a quarter of a mile, finishing two lengths behind the mare who took it easily in 2:27 1/4.

Fourth Heat—Pools, Franklin, $20; Field, $10. At the outset it was plain that Franklin was done up. The mare outwitted him everywhere, winning the heat and race by two lengths, making her friends happy and her backers richer in pocket. Bonanza beat Judge for third place and got that part of the money. Time, 2:28.

Six pacers showed for the fourth race a forlorn hope of beating the peerless Gold Leaf by a five to one combination inducing them to start; there was not a pool sold as everybody wanted to see a heat before they speculated. After they had seen it, they observed that the matter was settled. At the start Damiana yoked the filly for a quarter, but she carried him at a rate that took him into a tumbling break that made him see the red house. At the finish Gold Leaf skimmed the ground like a bird. The quarter in 35 1/2, half in 1:10 1/2, three quarter in 1:46 1/2, mile in 2:20 1/4. All well within herself. Prussian Boy, Damiana and Racquet all got the flag in the first mile. In the succeeding heats the filly took matters easy, San Diego pacing well to secure second money and Little Hope following for the third division.

It was nothing but an exhibition, but an interesting one to all present.

Aug. 15th.—The first race was one mile and a quarter, for three-year-olds, and in it a good thing came off. Carmen was a hot favorite, but she suffered from the effects of the trip to Los Angeles, and Leon beat her easily. Leon ran a good colt, and is coming into form.

The trot for District three-year-olds was a hard game for the pool buyers. After the first heat they were kept busy hedging, and the box reaped a harvest. The betting was heavy. The winner, Ben Davis, is a chestnut gelding bred in that combination of pacing and thoroughbred blood that has produced many good race-horses. His sire, Great Tom, was a pacer, by Pathfinder, his dam by Magna Charta Davis, dam Lena by Report; second dam Linda Peyton by Ringmaster. Report by Revolver, dam Christina by Vandal. The colt was a little rank at the start, but outstayed the party, and held his speed to the end.

The District three-minute race was one-sided. After giving the first heat to Burton, Economy went on, and won as she liked. Details:

Time, 2:11 1/4.

Pools: Carmen $25, field $10. Mutuels paid $11.50.

The start was excellent. Leon and Kildare came to the front together, Carmen third, Welcome and Nabeau head and head behind; they passed the stand in that order. At the quarter Leon moved away from Kildare a length, and so they ran to the half, Leon under a strong pull. On the lower turn Carmen made a run and lapped Leon, but in the stretch he left her, and won well by two lengths, Welcome third by a length and a half. Welcome made a fine run in the stretch, and headed Carmen once but swerved, and had to be taken back, Kildare fourth, Nabeau last.

The second race was a trot for District three-year-olds, with Alfred G., Redwood, Anti-Coolie and Ben Davis as starters, the first three being sons of Anteo. Speculation was very active. Alfred G. had the call, the average odds before the start being Alfred $25, Redwood $22, field $22. After some scoring they got away with a fair start, Alfred taking the lead at once, Redwood second, Davis third, Anti-Coolie breaking up and falling back fifty yards. On the backstretch Davis and Redwood closed with Alfred, and the three went the third eighth square abreast. Redwood soon broke and fell out, Davis following at the half. Alfred led around the lower turn by three lengths. In the stretch Davis came again, and made a good effort, but the pace was too much for him, and he broke badly, Alfred running easily, Davis second, Redwood third, Anti-Coolie a poor fourth. Time, 2:31.

Second heat—Pools: Alfred G. $25, Redwood $14, field $12. Alfred G. led off as before, but broke on the turn, and Davis strung them out at a great rate, Redwood was second, six lengths behind Davis, when they passed the quarter, Alfred three lengths further back. Down the backstretch Redwood and Alfred G. both closed rapidly, and at the half had Davis headed and in a break. At the three-quarters Redwood was so far ahead that it looked as though he would win in a jog. He did win, but Alfred G. came up in fine style, and was only beaten a neck, Davis running half a length behind. Time, 2:33 1/4.

Third heat—Pools: Redwood $25, Alfred G. $12, field $5. Alfred G. led from start to finish. Redwood made two bad breaks, and dropped under the flag satisfied. Davis slipped a boot and ran half a mile, but in consideration of the accident was placed fourth. Time, 2:34 1/4.

Fourth heat—Pools: Alfred G. $80, field $20. Dick Havey, who had thus far driven Redwood with skill and judgment, retired. After much tedious scoring they got off, Alfred G. leading to the quarter, Davis second, Redwood breaking and going last. On the backstretch Davis pranced Alfred to a break, and beat him fifty yards to the wire, Redwood and Anti-Coolie distanced. Time, 2:33 1/4.

Fifth heat—No betting. They went off level, but Alfred could not hold the pace with Davis, and made three bad breaks in the mile, Davis won by three lengths. Time, 2:35 1/4.

Sixth heat—Pools: Davis $40, Alfred G. $14. Alfred G. led off, but Davis soon gathered him in, and for the last three-quarters led by five lengths, and won in a jog in 2:44.

Trotting at Rochester.

There was a vast throng present on Tuesday last the opening day of the Rochester Grand Circuit Meeting. The great event of the day was the $10,000 stake for the 2:30 trot. The betting was heavy and the track was a few seconds slow owing to recent rains. Guy sold a hot favorite in the pools before the start, at $80 to $100 for the field. Guy got away badly in the first heat, Geneva S. winning. Guy winning the second heat made him a greater favorite than ever, but Jack, driven by the veteran Budd Doble, won the next heat handily, as he also did the fourth and fifth heats and race.

In the last heat, Guy shot to the front on the first turn, leading the entire party to the head of the homestretch. Jack had been uncomfortably close, after the half-mile post was passed and gradually gained on the black gelding and beat him away off on the homestretch, Guy coming in no better than fourth, but the judges allowed him second place on account of the driver of Geneva S. running into him on the first turn.

The excitement at the close of the race was intense, as Guy had been counted a sure winner on account of his recent victory in defeating Prince Wilkes at Cleveland last week, and scoring a record of 2:14 1/4.

The track did not seem to suit Guy, being too soft. He behaved well considering his erratic disposition, and that there were eighteen starters in the race. Geneva S. was declared distanced in the last heat for foul driving by her driver.

The 2:22 trot was easily won by T. T. S., after losing the first heat to Glean Smith, and the pacing race had to be carried over till the next day on account of the darkness.

The feature of the second day was the free-for-all, won by the California pacer Arrow, in fast time. The track was much faster than the preceeding day. Arrow was an immense favorite in the pools.

The 2:27 trot was very exciting, Frank Buford winning after a close contest with J. B. Richardson and Protection. Beauty Bright won the first heat, but was nowhere in the race afterward. Buford won the last heat by a length.

It looked very much as though the play between the drivers was for Protection to help Richardson win, but he was not quite fast enough to prevent Buford from winning. Richardson remained a strong favorite in the betting, even after Buford had two heats won.

The 2:25 pace was easily won by Bessemer, who out-classed his field several seconds.

The last heat of the free-for-all pace was so close between Jewett and Arrow that it looked like a dead heat, but the judge declared Arrow first.

Thornless won the first heat after a sharp finish with Rare Ripe. The latter led the entire mile till near the wire, when he broke. The second heat was close between the whole field. Thornless finished first, running under the wire, but the heat was given to Rare Ripe, and Thornless set back third. Spofford was finishing fast at the head of the stretch, but broke badly.

The race was postponed until the next day, when the grand special for $5,000 between Prince Wilkes and Rosaline Wilkes takes place. The following are the summaries:

late, there have always been celebrities in his stable. Urbane and untiring he has the qualities to make a model officer, and with the support of the directors, everyone of which we are acquainted with, being well qualified for the place, it would be strange, indeed if the management was not satisfactory.

That the races will be good is a "fixed fact." The horses engaged is a positive assurance of that, and what gaps there are will be filled with what is likely to prove the most attractive features of the programme.

So short a trip from San Francisco, and so pleasant an "outing" cannot fail to entice large delegations from this section.

Stamboul.

It is safe to assert that the victory of Stamboul at Los Angeles has caused a greater excitement in trotting circles in California than any occurrence of late years. Since the return of those who saw the performance, the interest has been intensified, and the fortunate eye-witnesses have been subjected to questions innumerable. All unite in extolling the horse and agree that it might have been faster. It is also stated that there is not the least doubt of the timing being correct, and that the fractions were accurately measured. All that is required to establish the fame of this great young horse beyond all others is to verify the measurements. We have not the least doubt of the track being the proper length, but at the same time are under the impression that the quarter and half-mile posts are not correctly set. That Stamboul could trot a mile in 2:15, was a reasonable expectation from his races of last year, that he can trot the "first quarter" in 31½ seconds is beyond what could be looked for in him or any other horse which has yet appeared. Maud S., when she made her record of 2:08½, passed the first quarter 32½ seconds, the half in 1:04½, three-quarters 1:35½, second quarter 31½, third 31, fourth 33½ seconds. The time of a third quarter, when taken from the stand, is not to be relied upon. Partly guesswork at the half, it is decidedly so at the three-quarter post. The first quarter can be taken with as much accuracy as the mile, and hence if the post which marks it is in the right place, and the timer has a split-second watch and knows how to manipulate it the presumption is that the record is correct. Analyzing the record of Maud S. we find so great a difference between the third and fourth quarters, 2½ seconds, that it is nearly certain that the time of the third was erroneously taken. This could easily come without the three-quarter pole being misplaced, the angle of vision making it impossible to decide when the mare had completed three-quarters of the heat.

The fractions in the case of Stamboul were 31½ seconds for the first, 33 seconds for the second, 35 seconds for the third, and 35½ seconds for the fourth. Thirty-three seconds for a second quarter after a first a second and a half below the mark might not be called a great discrepancy provided both were made under similar conditions, but when one is a semicircle and the other a tangent, horses in condition to trot three such heats as were made in that race should not have fallen away so much.

The first suspicions regarding the whole length of the track, were aroused by the 2:07½ of Laura Gardner with Idalene Cotton practically in the same notch, but that is accounted for by the failure to drop the timing flag at the right time. That Stamboul was likely to trot a mile in 2:15, was foreshadowed by his races of last year. In his first race he trotted in 2:19½, and if our recollection be correct, went to the half in 1:07. At Stockton he trotted a second heat in 2:17½, a fourth in 2:20½, and at Los Angeles in 2:18½. A five-year-old with that amount of speed, sound in every way, level-headed, and in good hands, could reasonably be expected to improve that much. While two and a half seconds is a large discount from 2:17½, it is not insurmountable when the animal was only five years old when the record was reached. At that age Guy Wilkes had no record and Anteeo lowered his best mark (a trial at that), four seconds, the result of a year's improvement. When writing of the National Stallion Stake before the entries were made, we claimed that the records of Patron and Phallas would not prove an obstacle, and that if they accepted the chance offered of participating, owners of California stallions would not lose confidence. But the fractional speed shown by Stamboul is beyond what there were reasons to expect, especially that claimed for the first quarter. The driver of Stamboul informed us that he had the inside and he beat Arab to the quarter mark a neck. At the half mile he had increased the gap to three parts of a length, and he felt that he had him beaten. The quarter of a mile, if the horses started on an equality, must have been made by Arab a shade inside of 31½ seconds, as the closest he could be to the inside of the track he must have been trotted fully twenty feet further than Stamboul. For the inside horse to trot within three feet of the pole a great risk must be taken of striking the fence, and for the second horse to trot that close to the leader is an impossibility. An ordinary sulky is nearly five feet from point to point of hub band. If the hubs were touching the second horse would be five feet further out on the semicircle, so that twenty feet additional distance is not too much to allow for the position.

A quarter of a mile in 31½ seconds gives about 42 feet to the second, so that practically Arab went a quarter of a mile in 31 seconds, and his half mile rather faster than that of Stamboul. When two horses make a performance which to the best of our recollection has never been equalled in an actual race there are additional causes for doubt, and that was the point raised by the objector to the fast mile and a quarter made by Laura Gardner and Idalene Cotton.

St. Julien when he trotted in 2:12½ on the Oakland track was 33 seconds "going round the turn," 1:05½ to the half, and 1:40 to the three-quarter pole. The latter was partly guess though there were several split-second watches held by competent men, and was "called" when the horse was opposite the mark. As will be seen from the above the only quarter which St. Julien fell behind was the first, and three-quarters of a second back at the half, and half a second at the three-quarters he made that up and 2½ seconds more in the last 440 yards.

But there were different conditions. The driver of Stamboul had a visible antagonist. Arab was in plain view up to the time that he "felt he had him beat" and from that point home there was nothing to stimulate him to push his horse to his utmost limit. The driver of St. Julien was driving against a competitor which gave no indication of where he was. The task was to perform what no trotter had done up to that time, and whether victory or defeat was unknown until the jury brought in a verdict. Therefore it is a far inference that Hickok did his best from start to finish, although there were differences again which might change the tactics in the first part of the battle. St. Julien must be kept at a rate which would ensure success and not take any risk of "pumping him out" on the first quarter. Stamboul must not permit Arab to take the track if he could stop him, the policy of Arab to drive the young horse to his utmost "break his heart" at the outset.

All of these speculations, however, have little weight in comparison with testimony which is easily obtained. If Mr. Rose, or the Secretary, Mr. DeCamp will employ an engineer, a few hours will put the question of distance at rest. We feel that it is long odds that the course is a full mile, but are not so sure that the quarter, half and three-quarters are correct. A mistake may have been made in setting the quarter pole, and by measuring from the same, errors prevail at half and three-quarters, which would make the fourth quarter too long. If that were the case then it was nearly impossible for Laura Gardner to run in the time she did, but as we have since learned that the timing flag did not fall until the horses were a long way past it, that is accounted for after granting that the last quarter has an overplus.

We trust that these points will be settled at once. Although the rules do not require that the mile should be divided accurately, until the measurements are made there will be doubts of the correctness of the fractions. Walter Maybern informs us that some timers made the first quarter 32 seconds, although the officials and other experts with the watch agreed on 31½. The time of 31½ seconds we deem is fully established, if carefully made measurements show that the first quarter-post is 1,320 yards from the starting point, Stamboul will be fairly entitled to credit of having made quarter and half at a rate of speed which places him in the very foremost rank of all fast trotters regardless of sex.

Firenzi's Great Victory.

The defeat of the Bard by Mr. Haggin's great filly will make amends for a good deal of the bad luck which has been encountered since the stable went East. Now there seems to be a change, however, and the turn in the lane at last made its appearance. Although the first race for the season was a win, it was unimportant, and in the Suburban she was behind Elkwood and Terra Cotta. Four more defeats and then came the second victory, in which she turned the tables on Elkwood. She won the Harvest Handicap, and though beaten in the Navesink Handicap, it was held to be owing to the start, which was all in favor of Connemara. Her vanquisher had 21 pounds the best of the weights, though so little was thought of her chances that the odds were 20 to 1 against her winning.

The Bard had won seven races in succession and it was not at all surprising that he was thought to be invincible when in proper condition. So strong was the impression that two of the races were walk-overs, none willing to take the hazard. Five to two on was the price he brought two to one against Firenzi. It can scarcely be thought that she won easily, when the price was so fast as to tie the record, though that it was a handy victory is shown by the following account copied from the Sporting World.

The pair got off at the first attempt, Firenzi being quickest away. Hayward, however, took the Bard to the front at once and endeavored to apply his old tactics of getting away from his opponent, and by maintaining a high rate of speed kill off all opposition. Garrison, however, would not permit him to get too far away and lay within two lengths of him throughout. The filly moved wonderfully well and in any part of the race looked as if she could run all over the Bard. On the far turn, after passing the half mile pole, Hayward dug in the spurs and tried to come away, but Firenzi went as fast as he did. Nearing the turn for home Firenzi began to creep up on him, and there was a breathless silence as the daylight between the two began to diminish steadily. Still, Garrison waited. A furlong from home, however, he gave the filly her head and like a flash she was alongside of The Bard. A moment later Hayward's whip was seen to go up, and then one prolonged yell went up from the stand, "The Bard is beaten!" Hayward worked like a beaver, but Garrison sat perfectly still alongside of him looking at him. In the last few strides Firenzi jumped out and won in hand by two lengths.

From the same paper we learn that Mr. B. A. Haggin backed the filly to the amount of $1,200, but it is more than probable had his father been at Monmouth enough would have gone on to make quite a figure on the credit side of the account.

The stable has won a number of minor events lately and Firenzi again proved victorious last Saturday in the Champion Stakes. These two successful races have put Firenzi in the front rank it not entitling her to the first place in it. In the Champion Stakes she beat Kingston with the greatest ease and he had been brought from Saratoga with the expectation that he would prove equal to the occasion. He won the California Stakes at Saratoga, beating Climax, Volante, Wary and others. Firenzi beat him so easily that there were six lengths between them and in this race it was evident that she could have lowered the record had it been so ordered.

Reno and Carson.

Monday next the entries close for the Nevada State Fair, and that which follows at Carson. Judging from the entries we have seen, there are a number of horses which can make profitable engagements in Nevada. There are valuable prizes to be won and the journey is not so long as to be an obstacle. As has been stated before there are no pleasanter places to visit, and when pleasure and profit can be joined even an unreasonable man cannot ask for more.

It is unnecessary to say more about the programme than to call attention to the advertisements. There are plenty of chances, and room for all.

A Slip of the Pen.

Last week we closed an article on Stamboul with a mistake which only mislead those who have no knowledge of pedigrees. In calling him the son of Sultan and Ruby, in place of Sultan and Fleetwing, little harm is done, though nevertheless a big blunder. The intention was to mention his sister Ruby, and in the hurry of writing the slip was made. Fleetwing is one of those mares which have two offspring which have beaten 2:20. With a daughter marking 2:19½, and a son 2:15, she is worthy a prominent place in the equine temple of fame.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—In reply to your open inquiry as to Los Angeles Track, the official rule measurement on file in both offices—the National and American Trotting Associations—is one mile, actually 36 inches over. Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, our course is in prime condition, is fast, and Stamboul could have covered the distance in 2:13½ had he been pushed. In every heat he went away like a machine and kept an even gait to the finish.

Respectfully, E. A. DeCamp, Secretary.
LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 13, 1888.

SALE OF TROTTING STOCK.—W. H. Wilson, of Abdallah Park, Cynthia Ky., on August 7th sold to X. W. Culbertson, Covington, Ky., a bay gelding by Socrates 2:34½, dam Maroca, record 2:32, by Young Morrill.

The Kentucky Breeding Farm, Cynthia Ky., sold to Look & Smith, of Louisville Ky., on Aug. 9, Bay Stallion Mid Vale Prince by Red Wilkes, first dam Belle Brino by Hambrino, record 2:21 1-4.

Col. Younger's Sale.

The announced sale of Col. Younger's famous Forest Home Herd of Short Horns occurred on the 14th inst. The attendance, whilst not as large as the importance of the sale should have commanded, was fair. Buyers were much more prominent than spectators, and the bidding was spirited and lively—upward of $6,000 being realized at the sale, and one or two sales occurring immediately afterward. Mr. Kilip delivered the oration, and succeeded in reaching the utmost limits. A fine lunch was spread by Col. Younger, and both purchaser and seller express general satisfaction with results.

In the list of entries of Golden Gate Fair, printed in our columns last week, several errors occurred. These will be found corrected on page 108 of this number.

Only an Old Gray Mare.

The sun beat fiercely on her head,
While urged at speed once more to tread
O'er new-made track, that hung like lead
To aged and weary feet.
The heat was like a furnace blast;
Accursed Friday, 'twas the last
In leafy June that's now just past,
That death old Happy beat.
I know a man who should shed tears
When this sad tidings greets his ears;
Whose conscience ought to feel some fears
At Happy's cruel fate.
Diamonds and dust, of both full store,
On far Pacific's wave-washed shore,
In good game races by the score,
She won at race-horse gait.
By Utah's salty inland lake,
Near Mississippi's fen and brake,
On far-off plain, near cow-boy's stake,
She trotted free and fast.
She richly earned a peaceful death,
Soothed by the gentle evening's breath,
When life should softly leave by stealth,
Cheating grim death at last.
Her life was not the all she gave—
Another life lies in her grave;
A life she would have died to save,
Proving a mother's love.
Who says, "I was nothing but a brute?"
From the same stem all life doth shoot.
Was not your life and her's the fruit
Of the same great God above?

Happy, gray mare, foaled 1870, record 2:27. Dropped dead in her work, on the track at Chatfield, Minn., the hottest day of the year. She was with foal. Cause of death announced "hypertrophy of the heart."—M. T. G., in the Horseman.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Bard's time in the Ocean Stakes at Monmouth Park, 1:55, is the fastest on record for that event. S. S. Brown's Tronbador won it in 1:56½ last year, which is the next best time. In 1883 Lorillard's Pizarro did the trick in 1:56½.

The proverbial ill-luck of the prince of Wales with his race horse still continues. He recently leased a two-year-old colt. "Huntingtower." In a trial at Kingsclere the colt proved himself to be of no use as a race horse and has been returned to his breeder.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Jockey Club, New York City, on Tuesday last, it was decided to throw out the French mutual machines and take back the book-makers at the fall meeting. The meeting will begin on October 2d and conclude on October 15th.

Abans, the Arab colt which E. W. Cottrell brought from Arabia for Senator Palmer's farm, in Michigan, died recently of distemper. He was the only colt the Arabs would part with to Mr. Cottrell, although he hunted for another one far and wide. His body will be mounted by a taxidermist.

Here is the Arab test of a good horse, which every farmer can apply. It is simply to observe your horse when he is drinking out of a brook. If, in brining down his head, he remains square without bending his limbs, he possesses sterling qualities, and all parts of his body are built asymmetrically.

One of the latest phenomena in Kentucky is a filly that will not be two years old until fall, sired by Red Wilkes, out of the dam of Ellerslie Wilkes. Although scarcely broken to harness, she recently paced a half in 1:19 and can show a 2:30 gait. She is owned by A. A. Kitzmiller, Lexington, Ky.

Mr. Lnke Brodhead, the manager of Woodburn stud, is authority for the statement that the gets of Maud S.'s brother, the young stallion Lord Russell, which have been sold at that place, have averaged $2,569. Taking those belonging to outside people which have passed into other hands, the average price for all the colts sold which have been sired by him is in the neighborhood of $1,500.

It is the opinion of Professor Brewer of Yale—and the most valuable opinions are sometimes of those who from the outside, view a question unbiassed—that we are now establishing a breed in which the trot shall be the fastest natural gait, and that the next century will see this breed established with two-minute trotters as common as 1:50 runners are now.

The pacing stallion Roy Wilkes, whose record of 2:17½ was made this season, has been sold to C. Davis of Chicago for the reported price of $10,000. This looks like a big price for a pacing stallion whose dam's breeding is not given in the trotting record, even though his sire be a brother to Mike Wilkes and Ira Wilkes, both of whom have gone fast on the pace and the trot.

Villette, 2:22½, that was quite a star in her class three years ago foaled a bay filly by Jerome Eddy, 2:16½, not long ago, and the owner, who ought to know better, being a driver, has named the little one Jeannette, which name has already been given to a score of animals that have trotted and made records, and at least one of them, owned by the Caton stock farm, Joliet, Ill., has beaten 2:30.

Browa Prince, the sire of Shillelagh, winner of the Royal Hunt Cup, new mile, at Ascot, Eng., was bred at Woodburn farm, Kentucky, sired by Lexington, out of imp. Britannia 4th by Flying Dutchman. He was bought as a yearling by the late M. H. Sanford and taken to England. He was a winner at three years old in England and ran second to Chamant for the Two Thousand Guineas, but his career was cut short by becoming a roarer; and he went to the County of Meath, Ireland, for service in the stud. Capt. Macell and his friends are said to have won $125,000 by the victory of Shillelagh in the Royal Hunt Cup.

There is talk in the East about giving purses for dash races among the trotters—or, at least, giving the plan a trial, the men who advocate it saying that in this way a number of races can be disposed of in one afternoon, and that as the scheme would put trotting on the same basis as running it would work well in large cities like New York and Chicago, where running has been a great success. This may be so, but it is also true that outside of the two cities mentioned the plan would not work, as the dash race idea is valuable only where the racing depends for its success almost wholly on the gambling in the books and pools, and trotting has had a hard enough struggle to get out of the mire of betting. It is now on a basis which insures its steady growth irrespective of the betting interest, and it should by all means be left right where it is. This market for well-bred light harness horses is at present in a more healthy state than for many years, and by dint of intelligent selection the breeders of the country have made the breeding of fast road horse a matter of certainty, even though the animal be not speedy enough for track purposes, and they are not disposed to look with favor upon any scheme that seeks to make racing a mere gamble and the horses that take part in it the tools with which the gambling is done.—Breeders' Gazette.

Curious Wagers.

In an old seventeenth century book there is an account of a great Kentish eater named Nicholas Wood. He made a light meal of thirty dozen pigeons; and, on another occasion, found a whole sheep an agreeable snack. Once, at the Earl of Dorset's house at Knowl, he ate fourteen green geese at one meal. He met with defeat at last at the hands of a man who undertook for a wager to fill him with half a crown's worth of victuals. The wager was won by making Nicholas eat twelve white, new penny loaves, and drink six quarts of strong ale. Such bets sometimes led to tragic results. In 1736 two men, for the trifling amount of a crown a-side, competed at gin drinking at a spirit shop near Redcross Street in Southwark. The winner imbibed three quarts, and, says the historian, "walked off pretty well, but died next morning." A few years later a man who worked at the Armory Mills, near Lewisham, backed himself to eat a leg of mutton, weighing six pounds, and a quarter loaf at a sitting. He consumed the provender, but digestion failed him, and he died on the following morning. Death from "suffocation" might fairly have been the verdict in this case.

On September 4, 1770, a country boy, sixteen years of age, won a small wager at a Cambridge public-house by eating a leg of mutton weighing nearly eight pounds, besides a large quantity of bread and vegetables. A few years later an Enfield man won a bet of this kind by a trick. He offered to bet ten guineas that he and another would eat a bushel of tripe in less than an hour. The bet was taken, and at the appointed time he appeared and ate a small quantity, and then introduced the "other" in the shape of a large hungry boar, who soon finished the bushel. Occasionally the gormandizer failed in his task. An Oxford Street pot-boy, about twenty years of age, once undertook, for a wager, to eat a leg of pork, of ten pounds weight, and four pounds of potatoes within three hours. The youthful hero commenced operations at six o'clock in the evening by eating about four pounds of pork and one of potatoes. He then drank a glass of brandy and took a walk for half an hour, after which he returned to business. At the expiration of the three hours, however, he had only eaten seven pounds of the pork, and two of the potatoes, washed down by moderate drafts of "Adam's ale." "Those who knew him," says the old newspaper from which this account is taken, "declared that had the pork and potatoes been boiled instead of baked, he certainly would have eaten them. Another failure is recorded in the case of a hair-dresser. This "tousorial operator" backed himself heavily to eat a bushel of sprats. The sprats were duly cooked, but the capillary artist had to give in when not more than two-thirds of the bushel were consumed.

But comparatively frequent as these gormandising feasts have been, wagers on eccentric walking and driving events have been in still greater favor. Races between strangely-matched animals have also made many a pound change hands. At sporting meetings in India races of this kind are highly appreciated. At Whitsuntide, 1724, a race was run at Northampton between two bulls, four cows, and a calf. The stakes amounted to the magnificent sum of five guineas. The bulls and cows were ridden by men, and the calf by a boy. All the cows split their jockeys, while the calf and his rider bit the dust together. In the end the race was won by one of the bulls. In December, 1756, five geese were backed against five turkeys to walk from Norwich to London. A fair start was accomplished on Monday, and on the following Saturday, about three o'clock in the afternoon, the turkeys passed Mile-end turnpike, winning easily, as the geese, not being good stayers, were fairly knocked up about forty miles from London.

In 1831 a remarkable journey was performed by Mr. Huddy, the postmaster of Lismore in Ireland, then in his ninety-seventh year. The venerable sportsman travelled for a wager from Lismore to Fermoy in a Dungarvon oyster-barrel. This commodious conveyance was drawn by a pig, a badger, two cats, a goose and a hedgehog. The driver wore on his head a large red night-cap, in one hand he carried a pig-driver's whip, and in the other a cow's horn, whose blast served to encourage his strangely assorted team. In the newspapers of May, 1753, it was stated that a lady had betted two hundred guineas that she would travel in her chariot and pair, backing all the way, with two servants on horseback, also going backwards, from Coventry to London, a distance of ninety-three miles in fourteen days. This enterprising female issued an appeal entreating that "no carriages will run against her or her footmen, which neither herself or they can be supposed to foresee." In 1766 a tailor undertook for a wager of five guineas, to walk fourteen times round St. Paul's Churchyard in an hour, and won the bet with seven minutes to spare. Sir Charles Bunbury, in the same year, ran a hundred yards at Newmarket for a thousand guineas, against another "knight of the shears," who had to carry forty pounds weight of "cabbage." The year before this remarkable handicap a waterman named Cave laid a wager that he and his dog would both jump into the river from the centre arch of Westminster Bridge and land at Lambeth within a minute of each other. The waterman, however, had not taken into account the faithful nature of the animal, for when Cave took the leap, the dog immediately followed, but, imagining that his master was in danger, seized him by the neck and dragged him to the shore, to the great amusement of the spectators, but to the no small indignation and loss of the baffled sportsman.—Licensed Victualler's Exchange.

The Preacher's Horse.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, has been complimented by having a good horse named after him. He is a Kentucky-bred bay gelding, by Messenger Chief (sire of Maud Messenger, 2:16½), dam by Mambrino Pilot Jr. He is owned by A. A. Bonner, of New York City, and is said to have shown 2:29½ over Fleetwood to a top wagon. If he develops as much speed as the traditional country parson's nag and as much pluck as the evangelist, it is good betting that Sam Jones will be first at the wire in the concluding heat of the final race.

All of which is very nice, and we have "more to follow." M. H. H. writing to the Horseman from Springfield, Ills., closes his letter after this fashion:

Besides these there are various private turnouts that I see going down the block at a 2:40 clip, and more are coming. There is a clergyman here who owns a nice pair of chestnuts and he does not allow his broadcloth to take all the dust, and why should he? The good book does not ignore the horse; on the contrary, it refers to them in glowing terms fifty-nine times, and to the horseman forty times. Should not a minister then be allowed to hold the ribbons over a few of the good ones? When horsemen get nearer the church and the church nearer the horsemen, the world will be the better for it.—Rural World.

Sport in 1793.

The Sporting Magazine, an English journal published in 1793, gives some interesting items about the prevailing habits and tastes of the sportsmen of that day. Drinking was exalted into a fine art, and a man who sipped "Bibo" writes in mock heroics, "Every sportsman is a lover of his bottle, provided it be not an empty one," and adds, "my abilities in that line are but mediocre. I never flinch upon (sic) duty, so long as I can keep my post, but six or seven bottles to my own share generally does me up. I begin to be mellow towards the conclusion of the second bottle, during the continuance of the third I am always gay, and occasionally brilliant. I am frequently much damaged before I have exhausted the contents of the fourth. Before I have completed my fifth I stare and look as sagacious as an owl. The sixth or seventh bottle renders my seat untenable, and I yield obedience to the potent god by sinking under the scene of action." A P. S. follows:—"I'll lay fifty guineas to ten that I produce a man who shall drink with anyone you shall name, and give him two bottles." The editor adds to the author of this effusion, "We drank his health a few evenings ago in the genuine juice of Burgundy."

It is curious to find that in 1793 cricket was played seven against seven, and nine against nine, and that for 500 guineas. This was a match between the evergreen Marylebone Club and the County of Middlesex, wherein the County proved itself the stronger. The game was settling down, however, into the normal eleven on each side which this century knows so well, for on May the 21st and the following day a game was played between two select elevens of gentlemen and picked men, Lord Winchelsea and the Honorable E. Bligh heading them, for 1,000 guineas, at Lord's. Lord Winchelsea's side won. It would be interesting to know when this baneful practice of betting on, or playing cricket for money arose, and still more how and when it ceased. It seems nothing short of profanation to think of our finest game becoming the victim of touts and blacklegs. Cards, the pedigree of racers, wrestling, and sporting law cases (as in most of the sporting papers at present), laws of sporting and lotteries, occupied the attention of our forefathers. The celebrated Colonel Thornton, of Thornville Royal, wrote on Hawking. Pigeon shooting was then fashionable, it seems, in Bucks, Beds, Hants and Surrey, "gentlemen of the first fortunes constantly attend," and much claret and madeira were drunk.

Even the ladies gambled and played, not exactly with such passionate devotion though, as in China, where one lady, we are told, will play with another until she has stripped her, article after article, of all her clothes, "the winner thus marching off in a double suit of tinery, the loser shrinking behind in the primitive simplicity of nature." A red deer furnished the object for a royal chase at Windsor. Ten minutes' law was allowed. The deer for this "diversion" were principally bred in the paddocks at Swinley Lodge. A good story is told of a bagged fox. "The fashionable custom of hunting aniseed has been much improved by hunting a bagged fox. Alas! Reynard upon being turned out of his bag, so far from being the least alarmed, seemed to respect every individual as an old acquaintance." Angling obtains a leading place, giving chapter by chapter of particulars of the chief English fish, with hints for catching them. A long history of a fox chase is given, much as it might appear at present in a sporting paper—how "we met at No Man's Wood, rode without a check to Barwell, were again thrown out just at the Spinrad," etc. We all fancy the kind of article it is, but it possesses considerable interest as being evidently the precursor of the article which we all know so well, for it ends: "If you admit this you may expect a further communication from a person who professes himself—A Foxhunter." Visiting an execution was quite in accordance with the temper of the times. One Hubbard was hanged at Newgate, 13th Feb. 1793, who had pretended to be the Duke of Ormond, while eight other convicts perished with him. "After the bodies were suspended, a child was brought under the gallows to which the convulsed hand of Hubbard was applied under the idea of its curing a wen." What would be thought of such credulity nowadays? The same criminal cheated the tailor who lived opposite Newgate for a suit of clothes in which to be hanged. He tried them on and refused either to pay or to give them up, but told the man he knew that he was in the custom of letting his window for sixpence a head to see an execution, in this case he might charge 2s. 6d. each, and thus easily clear off his debt. If that would not do, he might have his clothes again after the execution, but they fitted so well he was determined to be hanged in them.

Racing naturally was a sport of the first magnitude then as now. Probably very few of the numberless spectators of the lower and middle classes who now, thanks to improved locomotion, go to race courses went then. Racee partook far more than they do at present of the nature of matches. Naturally very little betting, save in the case of some national favorite, went on off the race course with others than the owners and aristocratic society. The names of the horses are very unfamiliar to readers at present, other at least than those which have studied the stud book. Who knows much of Diomed, Highflyer, Assassin, Nerissa and Pot 8 o's? The Racing Calendar, of course, was in being, and the jockey club was then, as now, the dernier resort with regard to all matters connected with the turf. Miscellaneous articles on sporting subjects were always welcome. Thus the reader is taught how to tell the age of a horse by inspection of his teeth, hoofs, and eyes. A good many cases of Whist Hands are also given and treated much as "Cavendish" does now. A paper on Moose Shooting is succeeded by another on Lion Hunting. The famous Philidor on March 3d was playing chess, two games out of three blindfolded. Walking wagers are often named, and picking up stones within a given time, so that the time of our ancestors did not hang so heavy on their hands as we often fancy it did.

Jockeys on the English turf are certainly to be envied if a chance of earning a fat income constitutes happiness. Like their brethren in America, immense sums are sometimes paid to secure the services of a crack, and, even at a very moderate estimate, it is quite possible for a really good rider, if of a useful weight, to make from four thousand to five thousand pounds a year, by legitimate work. Outside of this there are countless perquisites, presents, etc., to help line the jock's pockets. By the rules of the Jockey Club, if no special agreement is made, the fee for a winning mount is five guineas, and, as two jockeys in England, last season, rode over five hundred races each, their legitimate incomes at the lowest possible rating must have exceeded two thousand pounds each. In addition to this, the clubs allow for traveling expenses, and also a guinea a day for living, and the jocks don't have to trouble about collecting their moneys, as an owner must pay them long with his stakes for a race to the clerk of the course.—Canadian Sportsman.

Headquarters for all Latest Improved Dairy Machinery, Apparatus and Supplies.

The DeLAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR.

Extracts all the cream from milk, fresh and sweet, as it comes from the cow, without settling or holding. Is not effected by extremes of climate. Increases the yield and improves the quality of butter, greatly adding to the profits in dairying. Over 100 of these most valuable machines are in constant use on this coast alone, many thousands in the United States, and all are proving so profitable that many dairies are using two or more.

It is now a well established fact that the Separator increases the yield of butter from 15 to 20 per cent., and even more in some parts of this State, while the quality in many instances has been greatly improved as is shown by comparison of market returns before and after the introduction of the Separator.

Four sizes and styles of De Laval now in use: "Standard Power," "Standard," "Increased Capacity," and "Steam Turbine" Separators. Steam, Water and Horse Power suitable for driving. Complete Outfits furnished and fully guaranteed.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the first day of August, 1888. Entries for the purses must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p.m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by consent of the Judge.

All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada or California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race.

Entries to all trotting races will close August 20, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association Rules to govern running races, except as above.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats.

A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p.m. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p.m. the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors which must be named in their entries.

Each day's races will commence promptly at one o'clock p.m.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Entrance fee, ten per cent of purse to accompany nominations.

In all trotting and pacing races, three moneys, viz.: 60, 30 and 10 per cent, except Trotting Stake Races, Nos. 5 and 9, in which money to be divided, and races trotted according to published conditions.

All races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

American Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of two and two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats, also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

In all races, entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any district race that has not been owned in the district six months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the American Association and rules of the Pacific Blood Horse Association, and expulsion from this Association.

If, in the opinion of the judges, any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the fair, it may be continued or declared off, at the option of the judges.

In all races noted above, five or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start.

The Petaluma track is one of the fastest and safest in the world.

Trotting and running colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp. Stables hay and straw free to competitors.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the two-year-old, unless otherwise specified, five to enter, and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 5 per cent to first horse, 25 per cent to second, 15 per cent to third, and 10 per cent to fourth.

The National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66 2/3 to the first, and 33 1/3 to the second.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that in the above stakes declarations are permitted for a small fortnight.

In all race entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running races, except when conditions are named otherwise.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Entries in all, except otherwise stated, to close with the Secretary, Wednesday, August 1, 1888.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS.

National Trotting Association rules to govern all trotting races. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all running. Five to enter and four to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than four to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, ten per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting, pacing and running premiums to be divided at the rate of fifty per cent for the first horse, twenty-five per cent to the second, fifteen per cent to the third, and ten per cent to the fourth.

All horses entered for trotting, pacing or running races, for which entrance has been paid and who go in the race designated, and fall to win any part of the purse, will have their entrance money returned to them after decision by the Judges.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary. For a walk-over a horse is only entitled to its entrance fee and one-half of the entrance retained by the Society from the other entries for said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race, entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field then to first and fourth moneys.

Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in by 8 o'clock p. m., or they shall be required to start or forfeit the entrance money.

All purses or premiums paid as soon as a decision is rendered.

Entries to the races, except No. 8, will close with the Secretary August 10, 1888.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp. The Association is a member of the National Trotting Association. The Board of Directors will have charge of the grounds during the week of races, and will see that the Rules are strictly enforced. Address all communications to the Secretary.

Admission to Fair Grounds, 50 cents; Children under 12 years, 25 cents. To the Pavilion, 25 cents; Children under 12 years, 15 cents.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE to those well-known Watering Places,

APTOS, SOQUEL AND SANTA CRUZ.

IS VIA THE NORTHERN DIVISION.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC ROUTE,

(Broad Gauge)

The Northern Division runs through the counties of San Mateo, Santa Clara, San Benito, Santa Cruz, and Monterey, each of which abounds in game in great variety.

Notably Quail, Pigeon, Snipe, Duck, Geese, Deer and Bear.

Lakes PILARCITOS and SAN ANDREAS are reached by this line. Stages connect with trains daily at San Mateo for those well-known Retreats, PURISIMA, SAN GREGORIO and PESCADERO.

We would particularly call attention to the unlimited extent of range at and about SAN BRUNO and McMAHON'S for RIFLE PRACTICE.

These resorts are but a short distance from San Francisco and offer special inducements to the lovers of this manly sport.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class, from the 1st, 2nd and 4th money; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

A Son of Almont.

We give this week a picture of a fast, well-made and well-bred son of one of the greatest trotting sires that ever lived—Almont. His name is Jester D., 5696. He was foaled in 1877, bred by Col. R. West, of Lexington, Kentucky, who sold him to Mr. J. B. Prather, of Maryville, Missouri. Mr. Prather brought the horse to California in the fall of 1887, and sold him to his present owner, Gilbert Tompkins, proprietor of the Souther Farm, San Leandro.

The Souther Farm lies a mile and a half from the pleasant little town of San Leandro, eight miles from Oakland, and lies partly in the Alameda Valley and partly on the low foot-hills that lie between Contra Costa and Alameda counties. It comprises over 300 acres, about one-fourth of which is in fruit. Parts of the foot-hills are covered with wild-oats—that variety of California horse food that has probably done as much as the climate in bringing the trotting stock of this State to its present general excellence. Any quantity of water is furnished from springs, and also from the mains of the Contra Costa Water Company, which go through the property. The farm is well provided with barns, paddocks and box stalls. A half-mile track will be built during the coming winter on a piece of level ground sheltered by orchards and locust trees on one side and on the other by foot-hills, from which there is a beautiful view of San Leandro, the surrounding country, the bay of San Francisco and the city itself in the distance.

Here is the pedigree in full: Jester D., 5696, dark chestnut stallion; feather in face; near hind foot and ankle white; 16 hands high, weight about 1,200 pounds; by Almont, 33, dam Hortense by Messenger Duroc, 106; grandam Nelly McDonald, thoroughbred daughter of Colossus, son of imp. Sovereign.

In tabular form:

JESTER D., 5696.	Alexander's Abdallah, 15. Sire of 6 in 2:30 list.	Hambletonian, 10. Sire of 41 in 2:30 list.
	Katy Darling.
	Sally Anderson..... Sire of 6 in 2:30 list.	Mambrino Chief, 11. Sire of 6 in 2:30 list.
	Kate, by Pilot Jr., 12. Sire of 9 in 2:30 list.
Hortense.....	Messenger Duroc, 106..... Sire of 15 in 2:30 list; also sire of Elaine, dam of Nor- laine, yearling rec. 2:31½.	Hambletonian, 10. Sire of 41 in 2:30 list.
	Nelly McDonald..... (See Bruce's American Stud Book.)	Satinet, by Roe's Ab- dallah Chief, son of Abdallah, 1.
	Colossus, son of imp. Sovereign.

In this table the number of 2:30 performers sired by each well-known stallion is printed under the name. The following table shows how these horses have bred on:

	No. of sires of 2:30 trot- ters.	No. of Pro- ducers of 2:30 trot- ters.	No. of Pro- ducers of 2:30 trot- ters.	No. of Pro- ducers of 2:30 trot- ters.
Rysdyk's Hambletonian, 10.....	103	42	30	45
Alexander's Abdallah, 15.....	12	86	19	20
Almont, 33.....	27	47	9	10
Mambrino Chief, 11.....	23	75	15	19
Pilot Jr., 12.....	7	15	13	26
Messenger Duroc, 106.....	5	9	4	6
Abdallah, 1.....	1	41	7	7
Colossus, thoroughbred.....	1	1	—	—
	189	766	106	138

One hundred and eighty-nine sons of horses represented in this pedigree have produced seven hundred and sixty-six 2:30 trotters; one hundred and six daughters have produced 133 trotters in 2:30. There can surely be little fault found with the breeding of a horse which combines the blood of such producers of trotters. From the latter table it can be seen that Almont, the sire of Jester D., produced twenty-seven sons who sired 2:30 trotters, not to mention three other sons who have produced 2:30 pacers. In this respect Almont is next to the head in a large class. His own grandsire, the great Rysdyk's Hambletonian, comes first in the number of producing sons. The sire of Almont, Alexander's Abdallah—the grandsire of Jester D.—not only produced the greatest campaigner the world has ever seen, Goldsmith Maid, but he also sired twelve sons who produced eighty-six 2:30 trotters, an average of over seven performers to each producing son. This is the highest average on record for any horse who has had more than one or two producing sons.

So much for the paternal blood lines of Jester D.; Almont, the most prepotent son of Alexander's Abdallah, the most prepotent son of the great Rysdyk's Hambletonian; great representatives of a great family, backed up by the invaluable blood of Mambrino Chief and Pilot Jr. (See the above table for what these last two have done.) Turning to the other side, more Hambletonian blood is in the dam of Jester D.—

Hortense, by a son of the great Hambletonian, Messenger Duroc, who is at present best known on this Coast as the sire of Senator Stanford's great mare Elaine, record 2:20, the dam of poor little Norlaine, who broke the world's record for yearlings by trotting a mile in 2:31½, and was fatally burned in the fire at Palo Alto last spring.

The second dam of Jester D. belonged to one of the stoutest of the great old four-mile racing families of this country—the Sovereigns. Wherever this blood of imp. Sovereign is found, one can always find staying qualities, lung power, courage and strength. What makes this blood all the more valuable in the present instance is the fact that Colossus, the son of imp. Sovereign who sired Nelly McDonald, Jester D.'s second dam, proved the adaptability of the family to assimilate with trotting strains by siring Colossus Mambrino, 2173, the sire of St. Louis, 2:25.

Unlimited quantities of the best Hambletonian blood, strengthened by the great brood mare crosses of Mambrino Chief and Pilot Jr., and backed up by good old-fashioned four-mile blood—that could trot if it had to, and is found in many trotting pedigrees—Jester D.'s pedigree ought to satisfy almost anyone. He shows the effect of the long distance blood when on the road, where he is seemingly tireless. He has a fine turn of speed, but has never had any proper training; nor has he had any fair opportunity to produce trotters, as there were practically no trotting drivers, mares or tracks in the part of Missouri where he was kept. What colts he sired from trotting mares are now being developed, and are very promising, if the prices asked by their owners are any sign of what is promising; one four-year-old filly was priced to Mr. J. B. Prather by her owner in Missouri, last fall for $1,500.

The horse is now getting light work, and is doing so well that another year will probably see him on the track. His owner wishes to add a fast record to the list of premiums Jester D. has taken in the show ring, where he has never been beaten. This is easily understood when the horse is seen; sixteen hands high, a rich chestnut in color, though like many of the Almonts, his produce are largely solid-colored bays, and almost invariably have the size, style and earriage of this great family. A well-shaped brainy head, with arching nostrils and eyes that truly show the perfect disposition of the horse; a good neck, perfect withers—another trait of the Almonts—a broad chest, heavily muscled shoulders, fine barrel; powerful quarters—plenty of driving power there—all on top of a magnificent set of legs and feet, entirely free from blemishes.

His appearance when in motion, is superb. There is no waste of energy, his action is smooth and frictionless.

He is good all over, but his disposition and legs are perfect. A kinder stallion never lived, and this is no small advantage. The Souther Farm may well be proud of such a splendid specimen of the American Trotting Horse.

There are none of Jester D.'s colts in this part of the country, as he only came into the possession of Mr. Tompkins last winter. The young stock now on the farm are sired by the stable companion of Jester D., Figaro, whose portrait, with a further account of the Souther Farm, will appear in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN in near the future.

Stamboul, Dexter, St. Julien, Lecompte.— Comparison of Measurements.

Measurements of horses are not to be depended upon as an infallible guide when speed and endurance are to be determined, and even as a test of form are not wholly trustworthy. Were the usual measurements given of a single horse, about the only idea presented would be size, but when others of well-known qualities accompany the illustration, there is a chance for comparison.

The intention was to couple Stamboul and Dexter, only submitting the measurements of the latter, but at the suggestion of John A. Goldsmith, the full description of the old-time "King of the Tracks" is also incorporated. Mr. Goldsmith thought that it would interest the present admirers of trotting horses, and though it is rather longer than present available space will warrant, the advice is followed. The description formed a supplementary chapter to Horse Portraiture, and was not published in any other form, and as it is the most minute portrayal of that famous horse which has ever been printed, the reproduction is not out of place. Furthermore it may be considered as explanatory of the table of measurements, and does away with the necessity of repeating them in the case of Stamboul.

In the original table the corresponding measurements of American Eclipse, imported Leviathan, Lecompte and Doubloon were given, the only one retained in this being Lecompte in order that one thoroughbred weight be incorporated to extend the comparison, and St. Julien added for the same reason. The remarks in relation to Dexter are also applicable to Stamboul, and like conclusions are justified. Although of different conformation from either Dexter or St. Julien, Stamboul resembles them in many respects. Fully as "blood-like" as either, his "substance" misleads those whose erroneous knowledge, or rather want of knowledge, leads them to associate that characteristic with slenderness of proportion. That notion is obtained from seeing two and three-year-olds in training and in races, when all the grosser particles have been removed, and every hindrance to speed eliminated. Our best thoroughbreds are the reverse of the fragile creature which are said to be blood-like, though there is plenty of quality with ponderosity of muscle. There are few of the fast trotters which excel Stamboul in quality. Although his head is longer than either of the examples given, it is cleanly cut, and without coarseness in any of its features. The head is "set on the neck" after the blood-horse pattern, and as will be seen from the measurements that has the proper taper. The coat is fine; the hairs in the mane and tail silky; when warmed up the veins show, and pasterns and hoofs are tokens of good blood.

He is a large horse for his height, not only in girth as he is "longer" than St. Julien even and with quarters which denote strength. A very handsome horse all over, color which cannot be excelled, too dark for a bay and scarcely a brown. Rosewood is the hue, with changing shades, darker in one place, lighter in another, a more pleasing effect than if the whole coating were uniform. He is a "taking" horse from every point of view. A side view gives small chance for adverse criticism; from behind there is the muscular quarters dropping down in full conformation, with broad stifles and swelling gaskins. Standing in front there is the intelligent head, prominent hazel eye and fine pointed ears. He forks beautifully, resembling Dexter in this point very closely, and though the shoulder points are a trifle wider the space between is better filled with muscle, as is evident from the increased size of the arm. "From elbow to ground" is the same as Dexter, three-quarters of an inch more than St. Julien or Lecompte. This measurement cannot be made with absolute exactness, the difficulty being in determining the same place in the elbow. Then the shoe may vary it, or the heel of one higher than the other, so that the difference does not figure. In both Dexter and Stamboul the extra length comes from the humerus being more nearly level and an increased length from elbow to knee. "From point of hip to point of hook" is another difficult place to gauge with nice fidelity, though it can be very closely got at. Stamboul has a good deal the best of Dexter, and without using the tape that would have been our impression from the vivid recollection of Dexter's form even after the lapse of so many years. "Length of hip" shows a wonderful conformity one-quarter of an inch in favor of Stamboul. Dexter the smallest in girth though he was a good deal lower in flesh than Stamboul or St. Julien, and as Lecompte was taken from a published account which did not give any information in regard to his condition, it is not far from right when Stamboul is accorded with being the equal of any of them in this important point. A good deal can be said in favor of a hip which slopes at quite an angle from the level, though as a nearer approach to horizontal is more in accordance with beauty of form, if equally long and as well clothed with masculine tissue it is equally favorable for speed. Still we would prefer quite a slope in the hip to that which is so nearly horizontal as to appear to be level, though something of the pattern shown by Stamboul is our first choice. Having entered into such a thorough analysis in the case of

The Two Champions.

The following account of the Champion and Junior Champion is copied from the N. Y. World. Mr. Haggin's filly was marked to win, but the victory of Proctor Knott was a surprise. It places his sire, Luke Blackburn, in a prominent position, and insures a good "average" for the next annual sale at Belle Meade:

On the second Saturday in August, 1885, the Monmouth Park Association paid respect to the memory of Gen. Grant by postponing its Champion Day to the following Monday, the funeral taking place in this city. Yesterday, again the second Saturday in August and again the Champion Day, the association's flags hung at half mast, out of respect to the memory of Gen. Phil. Sheridan, President of the Washington Park Club, of Chicago, a racing association that the great cavalry commander took interest in from its very inception in 1853, and at whose meetings he was invariably present until the one that ended a few weeks ago.

As to the racing at Monmouth Park yesterday, it was like the weather—about as good as it could well be. The track was in superior condition, and the attendance just about as large as could well be accommodated at the track, or carried to and from it by the combined railroad companies. It was also a good day for backers, they winning on Telle Die and Little Minch straight and place for the first race. For the Junior Champion, many who lost backing Oregon or Fresno to win saved a little by having the Faverdale colt for a place. Hypocrite was a good second favorite for the handicap at a mile and a furlong, while for the Champion Firenze was a money-on favorite. For the Welter-Weight Handicap Garrison's great win with Rupert did the backers a good turn, and as many followed Barnes' mount on Lottie Wall in the selling race they had a good winning day; while as to the steeplechase, the success of Father Bill Daly's Jim McGowan took considerable money out of the ring.

Of the two champion events the Junior for two-year-olds commanded the most attention. The winner, Sam Bryant's Proctor Knott, was practically unknown to a big majority of the crowd that "piayed the races." The colt, however, did not lack support. There was a strong contingent from the West who had seen him win at Nashville, Lexington, Latonia and Chicago. They knew his trainer-owner, Sam Bryant, had him in fine condition and they simply won thousands of dollars. The majority of the public played the horses running under the colors of Mr. Haggin, Mr. Withers, Mr. Belmont, Capt. Brown and the Dwyer Brothers. Oregon, the representative of the Brothers, was really the favorite, and made so on the strength of reports of fast time he had done in his work at Saratoga, much of which the Messrs. Dwyer pronounced false, saying that the best time Oregon showed them at Saratoga was 1:16½. He certainly ran a very poor race and was out-paced from the start. Of the others, Lady Margaret made no kind of a show. Capt. Brown's Reporter was left at the post through Blaylock's carelessness. Green Morris's Tipstaff was, like Oregon, out-paced, as were, in fact, all the others except Mr. Withers's Faverdale colt and the Haggin pair, of which Fresno finished third. He and his stable companion, Salvador, will no doubt be seen to better advantage before long. They ran a good race, but were probably not quite on edge. The Faverdale colt was the disappointment, especially so to Mr. Withers, who expected Hayward to ride the colt; but Mr. Pierre Lorillard, Jr.'s, claim on Hayward's services stood in the way and William had to ride Eric. Fitzpatrick had the mount on the Faverdale. He did badly. His orders were to wait and not "bustle" the colt, and to make his running in the last quarter, instead of which he joined the leaders at the start, and when the supreme effort was wanted in the last hundred yards the "all black" could only get second. Thus the result of the Junior Champion was unsatisfactory, and it will take another meeting between the Faverdale colt and Proctor Knott to decide which is really the best. In fact, it is not altogether uncertain that Mr. Withers would refuse to make a match if asked. But whatever may come of the matter, it is to be hoped that Proctor Knott will have a longer career than some of the previous winners of the Junior Champion Stakes. King Fish died, Tremont never ran again, while Ban Fox only won the Coney Island Derby.

If the result of the Junior Champion was unsatisfactory, that of the Champion was not. Firenze won it, beating Kingston so easily that many who thought her defeat of The Bard for the Freehold was a "fluke" are not so certain of that. She is now a great filly, and it will take The Bard or any other four-year-old in the best condition to beat the daughter of Glenelg and Florida, with Garrison "up" for "The Snapper" covered himself with glory yesterday, as did in fact that tough piece of ebony, Barnea, who, like Garrison rode three winners.

PROCTOR KNOTT'S JUNIOR CHAMPION.

Fifth running of the Junior Champion Stakes for two-year-olds at $250 each, half forfeit, only $100 if declared by Jan. 1; $25 if by June 25 or $50 if by July 25, 1888, with $10,000 added, of which $2,000 to the second and $1,000 to the third; closed Aug. 15, 1887, with 242 subscribers, of which 36 paid $10, 70 paid $25; 55 paid $50, 2 were void by death. Stables—3 to 1

Haggin to win, even money for a place; Withers 5 to 1 to win and 6 to 5 for a place.

With the dial set at 3.20 p. m. for the race and the jockeys' names hoisted nearly half an hour before that time, the crowd had ample time to study and watch the horses as they galloped past the stand in their warming-up gallops. Almost the first to show were the Haggin pair, followed by Verdeur, Oregon and the Withers pair, all looking remarkably well. At 3.15 p. m. Bugler Heckler sounded "To the post," when in quick succession Reporter, Eric, Caliente, Diablo, the Faverdale colt, Cyclone and Salvador filed out of the paddock as named and cantered to the post, where they were joined by Oregon and Lady Margaret, who had been saddled at their own stables. Starter Caldwell soon had the horses in position, and at the second break would have had a splendid start but that Garrison refused to move up with Fresno; after which there was a long delay and many breaks, for which Tipstaff, Sorento and Reporter were much at fault. Finally, after about twenty minutes' delay, they got the flag to an excellent start with all in good shape except Reporter, who was left.

The Race—Oregon, with Lady Margaret, was the first to show, breaking away in the middle of the track, attended by Tipstaff, Salvador, the Cyclone colt, Diablo, Fresno, Proctor Knott, with the others well up. Before they had run fifty yards the Faverdale colt, with Diablo and Proctor Knott, was in front and forcing the pace, with Tipstaff and the Cyclone colt leading the others, of which Oregon and Lady Margaret were already outpaced. At the end of the first furlong the Faverdale colt led by a length, but he soon gave place to Proctor Knott, who was the first at the half, lapped by the Faverdale colt, Diablo, Tipstaff and the Haggin pair, with the Cyclone colt close up, the seven running in a close bunch, with all under a drive except Proctor Knott. Barnes took matters easy, and yet at the beginning of the last half he led by a length, with the Faverdale and Cyclone colts in front of the others, led by the Haggin pair. There was but little change at the three-quarters other than that Fresno and Salvador had reached the Faverdale colt. Proctor Knott showed in the straight with a lead of nearly a length, nor did Barnes begin to move until the last furlong, where he bad Garrison riding Fresno under the whip, with Fitzpatrick doing all he could with the Faverdale colt. The latter soon settled Fresno and "Fitz" made a big effort to reach Proctor Knott. But he utterly failed and Proctor Knott came on practically alone, winning easily by three lengths, with the Faverdale colt second, a head in front of Fresno, who was lapped by Salvador with Oregon a length away and followed by Diablo, Caliente, Eric and the others as above. Time—1:14, of which the first quarter was run in 23½ seconds and the half in 47½ seconds.

The Winner—Proctor Knott was foaled at Belle Meade, Tenn., April 12, 1886, and was sold a yearling at the Belle Meade sale by Col. S. D. Bruce, April 30, 1887, to Sam Bryant for $450. In breeding the colt is thoroughly a representative of Belle Meade, his sire and dam's sire still being in service on the place.

Proctor Knott first ran at Nashville, where he won the West Side Stakes. At Louisville he won the Alexander Stakes. He was unlplaced for the Runnymede, as he also was for the Harold at Latonia, but he was second for the Sensation, being beaten at length by Kasson, to whom he was giving fifteen pounds. At Chicago he redeemed himself by winning the Kenwood Stakes, whence he went to Saratoga, where he was given a grand preparation for the Junior Champion.

Proctor Knott is well engaged, including the Futurity Stakes at Sheephead Bay. Value of the Junior Champion to Bryant & Co. about $23,485.

Betting: 2 to 1 on Firenze, 8 to 5 against Kingston, 10 to 1 Santalene. The Race.—Santalene led from the start, followed by Firenze and Kingston as named. The pace was fairly fast, and at the end of the odd half mile Santalene led by five lengths, with Firenze two in front of Kingston. In the run round by the club house and thence to the turn for the back stretch the three closed up, and at the quarter (half the distance) Santalene only led by a length and a half, with Firenze two lengths in front of Kingston. As they passed the first of the stables, Garrison moved on Firenze, and in the easiest manner possible the favorite closed with Santalene, taking a decided lead, followed soon after by Kingston. At the end of the mile Firenze led by a length and a half, which, as they made the railroad turn was reduced a length, which was the nearest Kingston ever got, for the instant McLaughlin began to ride Kingston Garrison moved on Firenze, and they ran without change until inside the last fifty yards, when, as Firenze began to draw away McLaughlin eased up with Kingston. Firenze finally winning by ten lengths, Kingston fifty yards in front of Santalene. Time—2:35, of which the quarter was run in 27 seconds, the half in 52 seconds, the three-quarter in 1:18, the mile in 1:43, and the mile and a quarter in 2:08½. Gambling at Long Branch.

A Night in Phil Daly's Faro Palace—Some Big Winnings.

This has been the greatest week of the season for this the favorite summer home of the debonaire youths of New York. The day Firenze beat Cassatt's Bard there must have been twelve thousand people on the Monmouth Park Race Track. The betting was never higher; women and men were in a fine frenzy to play the winner, and those who had the courage to bet on a "place" for Ben Ali Haggin's Firenze landed on the winning side of the wire.

Phil Daly is reported to have won $10,000. John Daly's luck has been against him all the summer and up to the 1st of August his game was $15,000 behind in his tasteful and brilliantly illuminated "annex" to the Long Branch Club; and, added to this, John Daly lost $30,000 in one week on the races. But this pleasant-mannered king among the gamblers takes his luck, be it good or ill, with a frolic welcome, for he is worth $200,000 himself, and one of his partners, a nephew, young O'Connor of New York, is worth $100,000. He backs the faro game. In 1886, the house of John Daly won $24,000, besides expenses, between July 4 and the first day of September. In 1887, the game came out $15,500 behind; 1888 is yet in a chaotic condition.

The night Firenze won was a gala night at Phil Daly's elegant pagoda. Never did the electric lights on the closely clipped lawn shine more resplendently. Crowds of fair women and brave men enjoyed champagne galore and woodcock on toast at the restaurant. At least $50,000 had changed hands on Firenze. The crowds were so great at the roulette and faro tables that there was only standing room for those who came late. The natty little broker whose father is said to have made half a million out of Grant & Ward's failure, was at his old place at the first faro table. His favorite card was the ace, and the well-dressed broker laid his one hundred-dollar bills with refreshing nonchalance on the ace and deuce and only played to win. He never coopered a bet. At the end of an hour he was $800 winner, and only then did he hand in his chips and serenely adjourn to the restaurant.

Two Spaniards and two attaches of a foreign legation sat at supper the night Firenze won, and over their English snipe and demitasse of brandy they rejoiced over their good fortune in winning $1,000 on Ben Ali Haggin's horse. They agreed to divide the sum into two "sections" and "blow it in" on the "green blaze" or roulette wheel in equal shares. It won $5,000.

The horses of Japan are not numerous and are used for saddle purposes and for the army. They are mostly of the pony build. The saddle horses go when they please and stop when they will, and are all shod with iron; all others, as well as the park cows and bulls, have their feet protected by a shoe of straw, and very excellent shoes they are. The straw sandals for a man cost about 1½ cents of our money, and a full set of shoes costs but a trifle more. In some parts of the roads they are literally padded with worn-out shoes and men's sandals. Whenever a wearer finds his foot protection too much worn he discards it and dons another, of which he usually has an extra pair, and the animals of burden are served the same way.—Exchange.

The excellent racing stallion "Birdcatcher," 1:43½, is offered for sale in another column. This is a fine opportunity to get

Santa Rosa Fair.

August 16th. A good day when taken climatically, but not specially interesting for the Association. The attendance was light and the racing so one-sided as to make it of very little interest to any body present. The first event, running, one mile and a quarter, was a foregone fact for Laura Gardner and the betting was almost all on second place. Index was big and soft and Daisy D had no difficulty in beating him for the place money.

In the second race, the trot for the 2:23 class, the only unpleasant incident of the week occurred. While Mr. Dustin was warming up Gus Wilkes, the horse stumbled and fell. He appeared to grab his quarter hoot. When he went down Mr. Dustin was pulled out of the sulky by the reins and strap on his head, and was picked up insensible. He appeared at first to be seriously hurt, but rallied before night and on Saturday was able to attend the races, though not able to drive. Dick Hovey drove Wilkes in the race, which was conceded to Alfred S. before the start.

The third number on the card was the trot for the District 2:38 class. This was another procession. A story went around that Alcona Jr. had shown 2:25 in his work, and Mr. Holly gave him an opportunity to make a record by laying up Economy in the first mile. The stallion only scored 2:41. Economy then went on and won in straight heats, waiving distance in the last one, and trotting in 2:30.

DETAILS.

August 16th. First Race—Sweepstakes, for all ages. $25 entrance, $10 forfeit, $200 added, $50 to second. One mile and a half.

W. L. Appleby's ch m Laura Gardner, 4, by Jim Brown, dam Avail 11 lbs. Hitchcock 1
B. B. Cockrill's b m Daisy D, 6, by Wheatley, dam Black Maria, 116 lbs. Lamb 2
Elwood Stables blk c Index, 2, by Thad Stevens, dam Gypsy, 118 lbs. Ross 3

Time, 2:39.
Pools.—Laura Gardner, $25; Daisy D, $6; Index, $5. For second place Daisy D $25, Index $20. Mutuels paid Daisy D $8.85.

Index had the best of the start and ran in the lead for a mile. He ran the first half in 50 seconds and the mile in 1:45 and seemed to die under a pull. Gardner was going second Daisy D. lapped on both under a strong pull for the mile. On the turn they moved up, the rider of Index using his whip without effect. In the stretch Gardner came away a couple of lengths, Daisy D. beating Index easily for the place. Time, 2:39.

The second race, the trot for the 2:23 class, had no special feature except the unfortunate accident noted above. Gus Wilkes, after Mr. Dustin was thrown out, ran two miles and disposed of his chances. What little betting there was, was before the first heat and the rate was Alfred S. $120; Field $35. In the first heat Alfred waited and gave Thapsin a chance, but the betting did not improve and the race was soon over.

Second Race—Trotting: 2:23 class. Purse $500.

The district 2:38 class finished the day. The report that Alcona Jr. had shown 2:25 did not seem to have any effect on the public mind, for what betting there was was at the rate of $50 on Economy to $10 for the field. She fairly won in a walk. Economy is a bay mare by Echo, dam Lady Berkey by Muldoon, son of Geo. M. Patchen Jr. and Victress by Williamson's Belmont. Mr. Holly bought her at one of Mr. Haggin's Kern County sales for $110, intending her for a brood mare, and she showed such promise as a trotter that he concluded to train and trot her for a record. She was bred to Woodnut in February and is now quite heavy in foal.

Third Race. Trotting district 2:38 class. Purse $300.

Aug. 17th—Friday was, queerly enough, the best day of the meeting. The county people came in crowds. The grand stand was resplendent, and the carriage paddocks crowded with vehicles of all kinds, from a "stingy" buggy to a family carry-all. The racing was far from brilliant, but as two favorites were done up during the day the public were pleased and enjoyed the sport greatly. In the first race, three-quarters of a mile for two-year-olds, Jack Pot was a great favorite, with Bessie Shannon for second choice. Bessie won it easily in the slow time of 1:18½, the favorite never being better than third at any point of the run.

The trot for the 2:40 class came next, but the speed and reputation of Maggie E. took the meat out of it and left only the outward semblance of a race.

The third race, a special for the 2:25 class, had Don Marvin, Fallis and Longfellow for starters, with Longfellow a 2 to 1 favorite over the other two, but he showed up very lame and could do nothing. Fallis winning in straight heats. Mr. McManus was suffering from an attack of chills and Billy Donathan drove the horse. Longfellow was lame at the start, but Mr. Seale declined to withdraw him even when Donathan advised him that the race would almost surely break the horse down. Details:

Aug. 17th—First Race Running. Sweepstakes for two-year-olds; $20 each, $10 forfeit, $150 added; $40 to second. Three-quarters of a mile.

John Reavey's b f Bessie Shannon by Shannon, dam Bettie Bishop 107 lbs. Bally 1
W. L. Appleby's blk f Futurity by John A., dam Ella Doane, 107 lbs. Hitchcock 2
Thos. G. Jones' blk g Jack Pot by Joe Hooker, dam Lugena, 107 lbs. O'Neill 3
M. T. Walters's b g Albatross by Bill Box, dam Della Walker, 107 lbs. Sparger 0
Time, 1:18½.

Pools: Jack Pot $20, Bessie Shannon $13, field $10. Mutuels paid $17.40.

Bessie Shannon led off with the rest close up, but after a quarter was run they strung out in a line in the order shown at the finish, Shannon winning very easily.

The 2:40 trotting class was next called. The betting was $50 on Maggie to $20 for both the rest, and nobody expected a contest. In the first heat Maggie broke at the start and was laid up, but she made no further mistakes.

Second Race—Trotting. 2:40 class. Purse $500.

Time, 2:33; 2:29; 2:29; 2:29.

The 2:25 class closed the day, and it was the worst deal the speculators had got since the meeting opened. Longfellow was favorite at $50 to $28 at the opening; but the stock rose to $100 to $10 before the close. The horse was lame, and unable to do a mile better than 2:35 at the start, and got worse as they went on. Don Marvin seemed satisfied to stay on Fallis' wheel.

Third Race—Trotting. 2:25 class. Purse $500.

Fallis, b s by Electioneer—F. P. Lowell..... 1 1 1 1
Don Marvin, br s by Fallis—W. F. Smith..... 3 2 2 3

Time, 2:32; 2:28; 2:40.

August 18th—On the closing day the weather was warmer and the attendance good. During the morning hours the stock was brought out and the ribbons put on. The racing was excellent; four events on the card, three of them running, and hotly contested.

In the first the question as to whether Laura Gardner could beat Leon a mile and three-quarters was thought to be a very open one, and a large amount of money was laid that the bay colt would be at the winning post first, though the mare was a slight favorite. In the race Laura and Leon both ran under a strong pull for a mile and a quarter, and the colt seemed to die under it. When given his head and asked to go on, he hadn't a good run in him; Gardner was full of it, and came away easily.

In the second the backers of Carmen were again sent a sailing. They supported the filly well in the pools, and Futurity was started to help and make pace for the first half, but Al. Farrow was too much for the combination.

The free-for-all trot was a hollow affair, Woodnut winning away off and in a jog. The big stallion was full of go, and fought the bit throughout the race.

The last race was a good one. It was half a mile with four starters, and the followers of Dick Turpin bet all the money they had that their horse would win. They had brought him all the way from Ukiah to get a race and had to take a beating. Turpin is a cold blooded horse that can run a fair half mile, but when Kildare compelled him to run as fast in the second quarter as he did in the first, his dung-hill breeding asserted itself. Details.

August 18th. Fast Race, Running—Sweepstake, for all ages; $30 entrance, $10 forfeit; $200 added, $50 to second. One mile and three-quarters.

W. L. Appleby's ch m Laura Gardner, 4, by Jim Brown, dam Avail 113 lbs. Hitchcock 1
F. P. Lowell's b c Leon, 3, by Linster, dam Ada A., 105 lbs. Bally 2
Elwood Stables' blk h Index, aged, by Thad Stevens, dam Gypsy 118 lbs. Ross 3
Time, 3:05½.

Pools: Laura Gardner $25, Field $20. Mutuels paid $9.

Index had a lead of two lengths when the flag fell and ran in front for a mile and a quarter, Gardner and Leon both waiting. In the sixth quarter business began and Index was soon out of the run. Leon staid with Gardner for an eighth after the running began but stopped badly in the stretch, the mare winning by two open lengths.

Second Race. Running—Sweepstake, for three-year-olds or under, $35 entrance; $10 forfeit, $150 added; $50 to second. One mile.

M. T. Walters's b b Al Farrow, 3, by Conner, dam Della Walker, 107 lbs. Sparger 1
W. L. Appleby's cb f Carmen, 3, by Wildidle, dam Nettie Brown, 102 lbs. Hitchcock 2
Pacific Stable's blk f Welcome, 3, by Warwick, dam Aeolia, 102 lbs. Cook 3
W. L. Appleby's blk f Futurity, 2, by John A., dam Ella Doane, 84 lbs. Murphy 0
Time, 1:43½.

Pools: Appleby's pair $30, Farrow $15, Welcome $10. Mutuels paid $33.25.

The field got away without delay, at Farrow in the lead, Futurity was sent after him at once, and ran lapped to the half when she retired, and Carmen made her run. At the three-quarter pole Carmen had the colt by the head, but the big one was too much for her and won by a length. Welcome third. Welcome looked like a winner at one time in the stretch, but swerved and would not come on. This filly is capable enough and can win if she will run kind but her lucid intervals seem far apart.

The third race was the free-for-all trot with Woodnut Adair and Maid of Oaks as starters, and the betting $40 to $10 that Woodnut would win. On account of the accident to Mr. Dustin, Wilber Smith handled Adair.

First Heat—They got away level. At the turn, Maid of Oaks broke and dropped back. Woodnut and Adair went together past the quarter in 34, but on the three furlong mark, Adair made a had tumble and Woodnut was eased. He went to the half in 1:11 and home in a jog in 2:23½. Maid of Oaks second, Adair third.

Second Heat—Pools (second place): Maid of Oaks, $20, Adair, $17. Maid of Oaks broke early in the mile, and Adair seemed to lack speed. Woodnut led to the quarter in 36. On the hack stretch Adair squared away, but soon broke. Woodnut went easily to the half in 1:11½ and home in 2:24½. Adair second by three lengths; Maid of Oaks just inside the flag.

Third Heat—Pools (place): Maid of Oaks, $50; Adair, $25. Adair broke at the start; Woodnut was first to the quarter in 36; the Maid three lengths back, Adair five lengths further off. At the half in 1:12 there was no change. On the turn the Maid skipped, but recovered quickly and held the second place to the finish. Adair just inside the distance. Time, 2:24½.

Fourth Race—Free Purse, $100, for all ages. Half a mile.

After some delay at the post caused by the sulking of Oscuro they got away well. Dick Turpin jumped to the front followed by Kildare. On the turn Turpin was a length and a half in the lead and his partisans threw their hats in the air with a shout, "its all over," "its all over." But they were a trifle premature; at the three quarter Kildare was lapped on and in another furlong

A. H. CONKLING, Secretary.

Mechanic's Fair.

The twenty-third exposition under the auspices of the Mechanic's Institute, is in progress at the Mechanic's Pavilion, on Larkin near Market street. That it will be the most successful yet given, there seems no reason to doubt, whether as to excellence of the exhibit or attendance. Such exhibitions are proverbially slow in completing preliminary arrangements and arranging the various displays forwarded; and the present fair is still, after a week, only inchoate as to a great part of the vast interests represented upon its thousands of feet of floor space. But there is, nevertheless, ample store of interest in the already complete entries and the remaining disorder is fast being reduced to condition under the active supervision of Secretary J. H. Culver, to whom the title ubiquitous might without fulsome ness, be applied. In a general way, there is no special display either of products or manufactures likely to interest particularly either sportsmen or horsemen. The latter will note, with more pleasure perhaps than anything else, the very fine display of vehicles made by Truman, Hooker & Co., the Studebaker Company, Baker & Hamilton and the Columbus Buggy Company. Everything from a pony cart finished in varnished hard woods to the richest landau, is to be seen; each finished in superb style and shown in most attractive fashion. Breking carts of several sorts, will afford room for very interesting discussions as they are studied by expert readers of this paper. Road carts in like varieties and doubtless of values as different as the sorts are shown. Track wagons of extreme lightness and yet of sufficient strength, form not the least interesting of the wheeled exhibits. In the heavier wagons for farm use and business purposes, one firm makes the only display, and a creditable one it is. The showing of agricultural implements is very full, and will incidentally engage the thoughtful attention of those whose primary interest is in the results of their use, good oats and hay. Ploughs widely departing from the orthodox forms of the fore-fathers, but guaranteed to do better work at less cost in wear of horse flesh and with greatly increased effectiveness. Harrows in a half dozen styles as diverse as possible, and each possessing peculiar merits. Mammoth separators capable of devouring whole fields of heavy grain and returning the valuable part free from all deleterious elements. And so on through the ever increasing list of inventions, which have gone near to relieving farm life from drudgery. Harness and saddlery are conspicuous by absence, but there is promise of an adequate showing in those departments. To the sportsman, there is not much except in the art display to arrest attention. None of the cases of guns, fishing tackle and other implements of the craft, which have graced former exhibitions, appear as yet in the present fair, but the current week will see several in position.

In the art gallery, there is, however, so much to attract the sportsman that none can in justice, fail to study closely the paintings there. Dozens of landscapes, anyone of which offers just that combination of wilderness, cover and water which could insure its being the abiding place of game and fish, will repay observation both for choice of subjects and strength of treatment.

The Californian Alps by Keith, might adorn a royal gallery. A Yosemite Valley so plainly shows that epitome of grandeur as to be almost equivalent to a knowledge of the valley. Trout brooks and salmon rivers in numbers are hung under favorable lights, with comfortable seats at a proper distance, and will make minutes lengthen into hours as the visitor lingers. A crayon of Mr. William Schreiber's noted pointer Mountain Boy, shows that really good and not bad-looking dog at a sad disadvantage. That it is a faithful reproduction of a photograph, none who knows the artist will deny, but the dog might and should have been shown more nearly as he appears under ordinarily favorable conditions. He is badly fore shortened in the crayon mentioned, and his weak lines are emphasized, while his good body and stern and fine shoulders do not show distinctive character. Other animal pieces, particularly dogs, are abundant and of high worth. If neither the horseman nor sportsman can as yet find their ruling tastes especially catered to in the fair, both can, merely as intelligent and public spirited citizens, find much in the general displays of the grand exhibition to arouse interest and increase admiration for their California. The county exhibits are marvellous, both as to variety of products of the soil and as to average excellence. The State Board of Forestry shows a valuable collection of the woods, foliage and seeds of trees, both those indigenous and those suitable for introduction.

The Visalia display is really surprising, when it is remembered that only a few years ago it was generally claimed that Tulare county could not produce fruits and cereals in perfection. Kern county makes the banner showing. All of the common fruits and the citrus sorts appear very large and of high color. Peaches from the Man orchard average more than a pound each and pears, apples, prunes, strawberries, grapes and pomegranates equal to any shown heretofore by the most favored sections are displayed. Vegetables, squashes, melons, pumpkins, potatoes and onions from Kern all firm, large and perfect may well arouse the attention of visiting strangers. Not the least attractive part of the Kern exhibit is a series of large photographs of several of the great farms of Kern Island. Houghton and Stetsons broad alfalfa fields covered with sleek cattle give one a good idea both of the country and of its suitability for the raising of fine neat stock.

Haggin and Carr's Mountain View Dairy, the home of that notable dairyman Hon. D. M. Pyle, is shown finely, the huge sheds, dairy house and appurtenant buildings being clearly pictured. So also that of Lux and Millers' immense Buena Vista Ranch. Other photographs show perfectly the lay of the land in Kern and the great system of canals which have made that county one of the most fertile of the State. Almost as level as the horizon with just sufficient pitch to carry water to proper spots, and with a practically unlimited supply of water, there seems little reason to doubt that Kern County justifies almost any favorable predictions to its future.

A very interesting display is that of fruits, cereals and vegetables grown without irrigation in San Luis Obispo County, and other favored portions of Southern California. In size perhaps averaging a little smaller than the products of one or two other counties, there is yet a firmness and color about the fruits which would make them especially desirable for shipping purposes to markets either Eastern or foreign, while in flavor they are equal to any grown elsewhere. Of the more northern counties Butte makes the largest and most tasteful exhibit. To those accustomed to look upon Sacramento Valley as a drear Sahara, the rich display made by General Bidwell and other prominent ranchers of that section, will cause a revolution of sentiment. Heavier oats, wheat and barley do not appear in the fair than from about Chico, while all the cereals are equally well represented. In fruits the exhibit is superb, even to those common usually to the semitropics. Peaches are large, of fine color and that peculiar rich flavor characteristic of the fruit when grown under conditions most suitable. Apples are not quite so fine, but the pears shown are equal to any exhibited in the building, while the grape exhibit is something extraordinary whether for size of clusters, size of fruit, color or firmness of flesh. The sunny plains of Butte bid fair to become the France of California. The taste shown in the arrangement of the Butte products reflects credit on the manager, and makes a picture not to be equalled by the art of the painter. Another tasteful and convincing showing is that from Sonoma County. The name has become synonymous with fat fields, hardened orchards and all the varied products of well cared for and conducted farms, but even those who have known much of the fertility of the region will admit that there were capabilities undreamed of in the deep loam and perpetual sunlight of Sonoma. The plums, prunes, pears and apples exposed to view are beyond compare in all essential characters, and an especially interesting feature is the extended line of canned fruits packed in the county fresh from the orchards with all the blush and fragrance still upon them. While the fruit display is extensive and well arranged, the greatest interest lies in the wonderful display of grasses and grass seeds grown in the county. Indignous grasses by dozens are shown, like those which enabled the county in the days of the Spanish Dons to feed and fatten more stock to the acre than any other portion of the State. Hillside grasses matured early and very succulent, affording needed feed after the earliest rains. Then those of the floor of the valley, slower of growth, heavier and later in reaching fit condition to fatten cattle preparatory to the bare days when all growth is suspended and recourse must be had to stores of vitality laid by in more favorable months. In addition to the native grasses, Sonoma displays good samples of about all those highly recommended by the experience of horse and cattle breeders in other states and counties. All that have been tried have taken kindly to changed habitat and have grown with luxuriance as great or greater than in native soils. Alfalfa, the mainstay of irrigable southern counties, has not been cultivated to any great extent in Sonoma, but on low lying bottoms where it has been placed its growth has been equal to that in other counties presumably better suited to its peculiar needs. The Sonoma cereals shown are heavy, large headed and full, and whether for feed or food-stuffs seem unexceptionable.

Contra Costa sends a rather meagre display of fruits, but such as appear show well, particularly in size and flavor. The situation of the county lying along the bay shore benefits it for the best results with some fruits, but peculiarly adapts it to the successful growing of prunes, plums, apples and the like, and such fruit as has been shipped to the East from the section has gone through in good condition.

Little San Benito County is well represented by her staple products, flour of the best quality, wine that has created for itself a large market, and fruits of best quality. The San Benito fruits are peculiar in the excellence of their appearance after drying. They preserve color and weight well. There is no handsomer display in the fair than the beautifully-packed parcels of dried fruit from the county.

The Santa Clara display, although not the largest, is yet one of the most interesting, being full and very prettily arranged. The Quito olive and wine farm, formerly the property of Mr. Jose Ramon Arguello, shows the implements used in the preparation of olive oil. An olive tree is also exhibited, together with samples of the various wines made at the farm. A firm of brandy makers at San Jose, the Jarvis Company, shows a complete line of the products of the house, very nicely packed and arranged. Santa Clara, although for years the fruit and grain center of the State, has not gone systematically into announcing its advantages to prospective settlers, but the display made at the present fair is an advertisement of the best possible sort.

Of the hill counties Stanislaus makes the only exhibit, a rare assortment of fruit grown on sunny slopes under most favorable conditions, as is evidenced by the deep color, good size, and luscious quality. Stanislaus has so long been known as a mining region, that its claims to recognition as one of the coming centers in other industries will astonish many. It sends fruit to market almost as early as Vaca Valley, and the quality is equal to the best. At a future time it may be possible to describe in detail other of the many beautiful exhibits by manufacturing firms, but it must now suffice to say that which, for purposes of study or merely for social enjoyment, the Mechanic's Fair offers attractions peculiarly its own, which should be seen by all who can spare a few hours. A dozen visits will not exhaust the interest of the thoughtful visitant, and the music, flowers and ever-changing crowd cannot but appeal with ever increasing strength to those who wish only to be amused.*

Los Angeles Wins Easily.

SARATOGA, Aug. 16.—There was a very large attendance at the races here to-day, and as the weather was fine and the track good, the sport left little to be desired. The event of the day was the Foxhall Stakes and the easy way in which it was won by Los Angeles was a source of disappointment to the backers of the Canadian filly, Pee Weep. Los Angeles won under a pull by a neck. It was a good day for backers of favorites, four out of five winning. As a whole the racing gave satisfaction and the crowd was sent home early to dinner. Following are the details:

FIRST RACE—Purse $400, of which $50 and the entrance money, $10 each, to the second horse; for horses 3 years old and upward, welter weights; horses not having won a race since July 20 allowed 7 pounds; since June 1, 12 pounds; maidens 4 years old allowed 18 pounds; 5 years and upward, 24 pounds; horses ridden by gentlemen riders allowed 5 pounds in addition to any allowance above. Three-quarters of a mile.

Time, 1:19 1/4. Mr. Rossmore 0

Second Race—Estrella $35, field $27. Betting—5 to 4 on Estrella, 3 to 1 against Nat Goodwin, 6 to 1 Tornado, 8 to 1 Van Tromp, 15 to 1 Harry Cooper, 20 to 1 Slasher, 25 to 1 Zangbar. Place—3 to 1 on Estrella, even money against Nat Goodwin, 2 to 1 Tornado, 5 to 2 Van Tromp, 6 to 1 Harry Cooper, 8 to 1 each Slasher and Zangbar. Mutuels paid $8.70.

Tornado got a good lead, while Zangbar was left at the post. Tornado continued to lead until well into the stretch, where Estrella got in front. Coming on the latter won easily by half a length, Tornado second, four lengths before Van Tromp.

SECOND RACE—Free handicap sweepstakes of $20 each, if not declared out, with $500 added, of which $100 to the second horse; entries to be made at the course by 4 p. m. on Saturday, August 11; weights to be announced by 11 a. m. and declarations to be made by 4 p. m. on Monday, August 13. One mile and a furlong.

Place—3 to 1 on Lelex, 5 to 3 Little Minnie, 3 to 1 each Longlight, Queen of Elizabeth and Grey Cloud, 4 to 1 Bonnie S. Mutuels paid $7.90.

Little Minnie made the run to the three-quarters, where Taral, on Lelex, gave the latter his head, and he won the easiest kind of a race by eight lengths, Little Minnie second, two before Bonnie S.

THIRD RACE—The Foxhall Stakes, for three-year-olds, $100 each, $50 f, or only $25 if declared out on or before the 1st day of January, 1888, with $1000 added; the second to receive $250 out of the stakes; those not having won a sweepstakes, two-year-olds, or for fillies 3 years old, al-

Pee Weep made the pace and led to the turn into the stretch, where Los Angeles was given her head. The filly responded, and won, under a pull, by a neck before Pee Weep, who was twenty lengths before Young Sweep, third.

FOURTH RACE—Purse $500; entrance money, $15 each to second horse; winner of three races of $1,500 each, or one of $3,000, 5 pounds; of three of $2,000, or one of $5,000, 7 pounds; of three of $5,000, 10 pounds extra; other horses not having won $1,000 since July 20 allowed 5 pounds, or not having won a race (selling races excepted) since that date, 10 pounds; maidens allowed, if 4 years old or upward, 18 pounds.
